One Board Ends Contracts

Schools Closed In Three Areas

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Classrooms in two Ontario school districts were empty today and most teachers stayed away in a third as mass resignation in badge contract demands took place in York, Essex and Huron-Perth counties.

In York County, the resignations of 607 high school teachers took effect after negotiations broke off at 2 a.m. today.

"Three of 15 high schools in the York area were closed for 'professional development' days but supervisory personnel were attempting to keep the other 12 open so almost 14,000 students could continue attending classes."

A spokesman for the board said the bulk of students showed up for classes but only about half remained. Buses remained at the schools to take the students home.

The board is planning to use senior students, parent volunteers and supervisory staff Monday if the teachers are not back.

The board estimates about 19 teachers who had not resigned, were at work today.

The Essex County separate school board made a new offer to more than 400 teachers in the southwestern Ontario area but classrooms were shut today.

Any of the 19,000 children under the board's jurisdiction showing up for school were sent home.

Teachers and their representatives will meet Sunday to discuss the latest board offer, which negotiator Ken Beavis said contained two alternatives.

One, he said, would keep economics based over one year with a proposed 6.5 per cent, a two-year period. In the second, all considerations are founded on a two-year pact.

The Huron-Perth separate school board said that parents Thursday its 19 schools for 2,250 students would be closed today and Monday for "professional activity days."

A spokesman for the Huron-Perth board said a telegram was sent to teacher representatives informing them that as of today "all teachers who have submitted their resignations are no longer employed."

Peter Bell, a teacher negotiator, said the teachers will comply with the order as part of a protest demonstration at the board's office in Seaforth.

A spokesman in Mr. Wells' office said the education minister is reviewing future plans to take part in further negotiations after Thursday's action in the York jurisdiction.

There was no word on whether Premier William Davis will recall the legislature to impose the controversial bill that would nullify mass resignations as a bargaining tactic and impose compulsory arbitration.

In Windsor Thursday, the school board agreed to voluntary arbitration averting a walkout Monday.

Neil Doherty, provincial negotiator for the Ontario English Catholic Teachers Association, said he was "very pleased" with the decision.

"Voluntary arbitration means arbitration with mutual consent of the parties involved—it is a logical outcome of the hard bargaining process," he said.

Oil Problems Studied

Though Tax Irritates U.S., Closer Co-operation Planned

WASHINGTON (CP) — Canada and the United States have agreed to work closer to help resolve their oil differences but they remain far apart on the merits of the $6.40-a-barrel Canadian export tax going into effect today.

At the same time Energy Minister Donald Macdonald aided a step from fresh American overtures to share oil from the Athabasca tar sands and liberalized Canadian controls on the idea of a major increase in oil exports to the U.S.

"We're not saying no" to the possibility of some exports from the oil sands, Macdonald told reporters Thursday after five hours of talks with U.S. energy chief William Simon, "but there would be very serious problems in this area."

As for the $6.40-a-barrel export tax, Macdonald said the reasons for U.S. dismay will evaporate if the Feb. 11 Washington conference of oil-consuming countries and subsequent meetings succeed in bringing world oil prices down.

Macdonald's hope was that the high Canadian export price rebates not only to current world prices but to the Canadian need for cash to help finance the Athabasca tar sands project and to develop oil and gas supplies from the Far North and other remote regions.

The two sides also agreed to establish a series of meetings to deal with immediate and long-term trade-border energy problems.

At the same time Simon assured Macdonald that, while the U.S. is losing its self-sufficiency in energy, this won't necessarily mean termination of imports from Canada. In fact, the U.S. wants to continue to co-operate closely with Canada because of their close trade and other associations.

Macdonald seemed to soften in this approach another U.S. attempt to get assurances of another major slice of Canadian resources through President Nixon's long-proposed continental energy policy which Ottawa continues to resist.

The first major step in closer liaison on trans-border problems will be an Ottawa meeting headed by Macdonald's deputy, Jack Austin, and Stephen Wakefield, assistant U.S. secretary of the interior.

Wakefield said the meeting will discuss problems of allocating supplies, pipelines that cross borders, Canada's reserve situation, the Athabasca oil sands program and such American exploration as off-shore oil leasing.

Another series of meetings will involve the Canadian Energy Board and Simon's Federal Energy Office as well as the U.S. Federal Power Commission. They will deal with such immediate disagreements as energy supplies for paper mills in Maine or insufficient supplies of oil and gas on the West Coast or the Great Lakes area.

The idea of these meetings is to get quick action on trans-border problems as they may develop, Macdonald said.

East Oil Prices Fixed But Gas to Cost More

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Canadian and United States energy officials emerged from talks in Washington Thursday still at odds over Canada's new oil export tax, but agreeing to launch a series of meetings in try to settle their differences.

Meanwhile, in Ottawa, notices were sent on behalf of Canada's energy minister asking oil companies to maintain current prices for their products until March 31.

The notices to the oil companies were the result of the federal-provincial agreement last week to continue the prices already in effect west of the Ontario-Quebec border.

Ontario and Quebec will receive the Canadian average price for oil, currently $6.40 a barrel, while the four Atlantic provinces will get the world price, currently $10.11 a barrel.

The difference between the two prices will be made up by a federal subsidy.

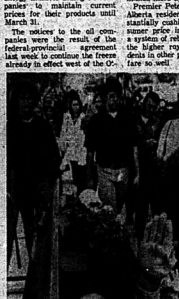
Macdonald Defends Oil Tax

WASHINGTON (CP) — Energy Minister Donald Macdonald of Canada, in the first of two direct approaches to the American people, said over national television "we feel that it's fair enough" to recover on oil exports the same amount Canada is charged for its imports.

Macdonald was interviewed on the NBC program Today. Later he was to address the National Press Club.

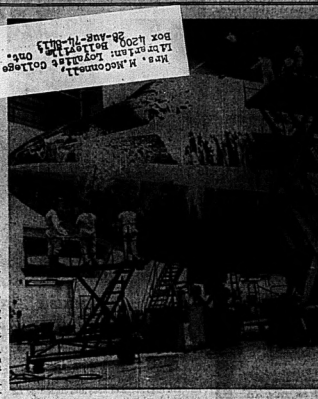
"We basically followed the international price for oil," Macdonald said in his TV appearance.



Canada's export tax, placed at 40 cents a barrel, last fall, rose progressively to $6.40 a barrel, effective today.

"About half our demand is dependent on the overseas supply from the Middle East and Venezuela," he said. "We have to pay this international price."

Macdonald, questioned whether it is fair, replied: "The tax so high to Canada's only customer, replied:



"When you had domestic price control here in the U.S. and on the whole range of commodities had a special price here in the US, you charged us world prices as we."

"It seems fair that we recover the same kind of cost that we have to pay ourselves."

81 Defect From Red Cruise Ship

HAMBURG (AP) — Twenty-eight of the 81 passengers who defected from the Polish liner Stefan Batory while docked in Copenhagen and Oslo this week have asked for political asylum, official reports say.

The others were believed staying with friends while they decide what to do next. It was believed to be the largest mass defection from Poland since it became part of the Soviet bloc.

Authorities in Hamburg said those who reported to them attributed their defections to economic and political conditions in their homeland.

The Batory was on its way home after a cruise of several weeks to Western European ports. It started out with 400 passengers and 300 crew members.

Officials said 64 jumped ship in Hamburg and 15 of those have asked for asylum in West Germany. Danish authorities said 13 passengers got off in Copenhagen, but only three asked for asylum in Far. Norwegian police said five more passengers defected in Oslo.

Kissinger Sees End To Embargo

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary Henry Kissinger says he is "quite optimistic" that the Arab oil embargo against the United States soon will be lifted.

Kissinger said he also is extremely several oil-producing Arab countries will end such action at a Feb. 14 oil conference in Ottawa.

Ending the embargo "will be the principle item on the agenda at the conference" he told reporters Thursday after testifying before a closed meeting of the House of Representatives ways and means committee.

But even as Kissinger was expressing optimism, the foreign minister of Kuwait was quoted in Beirut his country will not consider lifting the boycott unless Israel pledges to withdraw from all occupied territory.

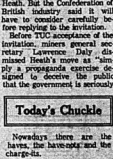
Union Men Will Talk With Heath

LONDON (CP) — Trade union leaders agreed today to meet Prime Minister Edward Heath for 11th-hour talks that may avert a national strike by coal miners.

The Trades Union Congress (TUC) which represents 10 million workers, decided to accept Heath's invitation for new talks, but with no pre-commitments on his proposals.

Heath is looking for a way to avert a strike without breaking government anti-inflation controls. Miners want a pay raise in excess of the government's seven-per-cent limit.

New talks now are likely next week, but the outlook remains gloomy. Talks on the miners' pay dispute have been deadlocked for months.



Representatives of industry were also invited to the talks with Heath. But the Confederation of British Industry said it will have to consider carefully before replying to the invitation.

Before TUC acceptance of the invitation, miners general secretary Lawrence Daly said discussed Heath's move as "simply a propaganda exercise designed to deceive the public that the government is seriously

Algeria Wants UN Oil Talks

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim is going to ask members of the United Nations if they want a special General Assembly session on oil and other raw materials.

Boumedienne's proposal was part of a growing campaign by the non-industrial countries to get more for their exports if raw materials so they can "industrialize" before their resources run out.

His was the third initiative after hearing the situation arising out of the oil countries' recent big price increases.

President Nixon is planning a meeting of the major oil-consuming countries in Washington Feb. 11, a large conference of consumer countries a few weeks later, and a get-together of the consumer and producer countries in May. France has proposed that the UN Economic and Social Council call an international energy conference late this year or early 1975.

Algeria's ambassador to the United Nations, Abdellatif Rahal, said reporters Nixon's approach would lead to a confrontation between groups while France's proposal was too limited in scope.

Waldheim has 30 days to complete his poll of UN members. If a majority wants the session, it must begin within 15 days after the majority is in hand—March 18 at the latest.

Liberals Would Remove School Spending Limits

If the Liberal party were to take over the government of Ontario ceilings on educational spending would be removed forthwith.

Liberal leader Robert Nixon said He he would also scrap centralization of education under the provincial ministry, and would look with disfavor on endangering education on a regional basis.

"It seems too much like duplication of services," he told teachers from Hastings, Prince Edward and Lennox and Addington counties at the annual meeting of District 19 of the Ontario Secondary School Teachers' Federation.

If his party were in power, he said, the cabinet would decide on the total annual educational expenditure. The budget would be submitted to a standing committee in education that would include representatives from teachers' and trustees' groups. The standing committee would recommend allocation of the money to local boards.

There would be no strings attached to the money, said Mr. Nixon. Local boards would not be restricted in the amount they could increase their budget from year to year.

"The test the public isn't the trustees out at the next election if it didn't like it," he said.

Mr. Nixon charged the Conservative government will deprive local boards of their democratic right to decide the quality of education" by pulling ceilings on increases in spending, and limiting the amount of the property levy.

A Liberal government under Mr. Nixon would place more emphasis on language instruction both English and French—and on Canadian history.

"Teaching of French is failing apart in this province," he charged.

He said French instruction should begin in elementary schools and educational television should be used more extensively in teaching oral French.

Educational television, he said is not "especially useful" in Ontario and it "is a serious waste of public funds in most of the province."

Squash Anyone?

The cement block walls are up now and soon the trusses that make up the roof will be in place. But president of Belleville's Squash Club, Dr. Patrick O'Boyle Kelly isn't content to wait until the city's new double squash courts open in March. So with racquet in hand and with workmen erecting trusses nearby, he set out to be the first one to make use of the court. Construction work began on the club on Station Street in December and the first stage of activities including the two courts, gymnasium, sauna and whirlpool bath among other facilities will be operating by late April.

Squash Club Going Up

Belleville's squash players will be able to play squash in their own facilities in March.

Right now the concrete block walls of the Belleville Squash Club on Station Street are up and the trusses for the roof are being erected.

"Our primary concern right now is getting the two courts built. Later on we will attend to the other areas, including the lounge and gymnasium. And we hope to build additional courts and a swimming pool in the future" said Don Sekter, one of 19 men responsible for setting up the club in Belleville.

"The building is designed to add on additional courts," said Mr. Sostter.

When the first stage of the complex is finished in late April, there will be two squash courts, a small gymnasium, sauna, whirlpool bath and locker facilities, a licensed lounge and and an upstairs gallery so spectators can watch the games.

A unique aspect of the club is the three separate air conditioning and heating systems that will ensure that the two courts as well as the lounge are adequately cooled and heated. A constant temperature of 60 degrees will be maintained in the courts even on the hottest day.

Construction on the site on Station Street across from Scotia Chicken Hut began in the middle of December. It is being built by Cornerstone Builders of Belleville. The cost of building the club is about $150,000.

Already about 80 men have made deposits for membership, said Mr. Sostter. There is room for a total membership now of 130.

A clinic will be set up once everything starts operating to give people a chance to become familiar with the game without having to join the club. They will be shown how the game is played by expert players.

"Our main concern is to get the building finished as a luxury," Mr. Sostter emphasized. "We wanted to get it off the ground and see what the reaction of people would be to it."

"We'll have people playing in the courts before the rest of the building is finished. And we hope to expand later. We hope to have women play as well in the long run and maybe have family memberships," he said.

AN important concern is ensuring the proper hardness of the walls that will be continually battered with balls. The process ensuring this hardness placed on the outside of the cement block wall. On top of this styrofoam is placed a white pebble dash surface.

On the inside walls, an inch of white plaster is placed in two separate coats with a long drying period involved between coats to remove any water that may be present.

When the plaster has been thoroughly dry, it is then painted over with high quality paint.

Brian Holmes, of Cornerstone Builders, who designed and are building the club, said that later plans for the site involve another court, an outdoor swimming pool and a separate section for ladies including their own sauna, showers and other facilities.

For those wishing to join, the yearly membership fee is $130 with an initiation fee of $200. "We're not trying to make this an exclusive type of club. We want to give people who want to play squash a chance. But you have to consider the reason they're getting started until the facilities pay for themselves," said Mr. Sostter.

WHEN SHOULD YOU TRY SELF-MEDICATION

Medical authorities agree that self-medication should be restricted to first aid for symptoms of conditions that one can recognize. Examples are, a simple cold that does not persist, an minor sunburn, simple headaches, minor aches or pains, infrequent indigestion, or minor burns.

But, if symptoms persist, or re-occur frequently, it is dangerous to keep making them with home remedies. A physician should be visited to diagnose the true causes of any ailment and to treat them for a cure. Treatment at the beginning of any problem is usually more effective and can prevent much future pain.

Nixon Says He'll Make Legislature Complaints

By MARGARET HAYLOCK
Staff Reporter

GLENORA — Ontario Liberal leader Robert Nixon has told property owners at Lake-On-The-Mountain — proposed site for a new provincial park — that their concern over shoreline acquisition will be voiced in the legislature.

Mr. Nixon spoke with a small group of residents at Lake-On-The-Mountain during a brief stop in Prince Edward County Thursday.

"Things seem to be out of control and in the hands of the bureaucracy," he said, as landowners explained their situations.

One resident at Lake-On-The-Mountain termed the announcement of park and the accompanying map "the bombshell" when it appeared in the paper.

The property owners claim that they were not advised of the government's plans before the proposal for an expanded 936-acre park was released to the media.

Hugh Frizell,owner of Lake-On-The-Mountain motel and resort said that he has spent 38 years building a business through advertising. The provincial government's announcement now has jeopardized his trade as many holdayers are under the impression that he has sold his resort, he said.

"It is a big mistake when the public is not informed," said Mr. Nixon. He charged this attitude is "just riding roughshod" over residents.

Mr. Nixon observed he had assumed property owners would have been told about the government's plans before an announcement was made.

Another homeowner reported that he had spoken with government officials about the purchase of his property and had offered it for $150,000.

He claimed he was offered $70,000 and told that the government could "outwait him."

The man objected to this attitude and was supported by Mr. Nixon who termed it "extremely arrogant" and "inexcusable."

The Liberal leader said that now a resident, his stated that the government is trying to steal his land because of the price offered him.

"It appears to me that they are," he charged.

Mr. Nixon stressed that a reasonable approach is necessary to any acquisition and said he would raise the matter in the legislature when it opens in two weeks time.

He advised residents to supply him with information on all developments and said this would be the basis of his presentation.

Picton Mayor Predicts 'Great Changes' in '75

PICTON — Picton mayor James Bird has termed 1974 "a year of decision" and predicts great changes before 1975.

Mayor Bird told the Prince Edward Chamber of Commerce "we have you, as representatives of the business community, are looking forward and are able to grasp the significance of everything."

Prince Edward warden Keith MacDonald described the chamber as "a very fine organization over the years" and told members of county council's concern with various current projects.

Reginald Greenwood, vice-pres ident of the Canadian Chamber of Commerce, referred to the Prince Edward group as "the very grass roots of the Canadian Chamber."

He said that the Ontario and Canadian chambers of commerce stands for free enterprise and, since nothing today is free, competitive enterprise.

Mr. Greenwood said that it is important to maintain the democratic system and to improve it before passing it on to future generations.

He told the local chamber that he feels morally obligated not just to attend its annual meeting but to assist on the federal level.

New Officers For Chamber

PICTON — A Picton insurance agent, Frank Wright, has been elected president of the Prince Edward Chamber of Commerce. He succeeds retiring president Gordon Callan, an employee of Lake Ontario Cement Limited.

The local tourist association has named motel operator Gunther Wentzel as its representative.

Mohawks Get Big Airfield Facility Licensed

TYENDINAGA — The Bay of Quinte Mohawks are on their way to developing an operation unique on a Canadian Indian reserve — their own commercial airport.

Thursday they received a federal license to operate what probably is the biggest private airfield between Toronto and Montreal.

For now, the Mohawks have copied for a private airfield licence. But, officially, it has been deemed commercially viable and its premise could be "boundless," says an obviously optimistic Chief William Brant.

The big facility is seen as strategically located for commercial traffic.

As a result Mohawks — this reserve has a population of about 1,200 — could become the envied operators of one of the Quinte district's more dramatic enterprises.

Its potential hinges on what Mohawk leaders have always known was an invaluable geographic asset created by wartime expediency.

It was built — at the east end of this reserve — during World War II as a Commonwealth Air Training Plan base. The war over, its original concept became redundant. It was turned back to the Mohawks. Its long, paved runways, hangars and administrative buildings intact.

Once rented for drag-racing in later years, the facility has been undergoing some brushup work since licensing for its intended use became a possibility.

Don Gibson, Ministry of Transport airways division inspector, made the final tour Thursday finding the installation met all requirements for licensing as a "small public airport."

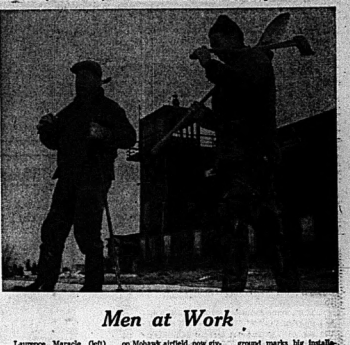
He found it viable for commercial use, said Chief Brant. But the Mohawks have decided for the present to licence their airport for private aircraft use until further development — including installation of an underground fuel storage tank. After that, they will consider seeking formal commercial status for the field.

As such, says Chief Brant, elected to head Quinte Mohawk council last November, it might be the only reserve of its kind owned and operated by Indians in Canada.

The present licence is for daytime flying only.

"But it has definitely got all kinds of potential," said the chief. "This is just the start and we will play its development by ear as response shows its potential. We've had a lot of offers for its use as a flying field — even an inquiry from an air charter company."

Take 3



The field now may be used by small executive aircraft and light private planes.

Jerry Kozak, manager of the United States-owned H. D. Lee garment company employing 150, has been a major non-reserve booster of the project.

He says the airfield in future could become a landing point for businessmen and tourists as well as private fliers.

He points out it is strategically spotted between Toronto and Montreal on major inter-provincial road and rail lines of communication. It also could be a jumping-off points for tourists and sportsmen to the Quinte district hunting and fishing.

County Sets Record In Industry-making

PICTON—Prince Edward's industrial development in the past two years has significantly outstripped past progress, according to economic director William Duggan.

Mr. Duggan last night told the Prince Edward Chamber of Commerce's annual meeting that six new industries have located here in the past 13 months. This spring two more will be added.

The economic and development director noted that Lake Ontario Cement Company Ltd. has announced a $20-million expansion program. He referred to growth at Proctor-Lewyt Division of GCM Canada Limited, and Quinte Metals. Other industries such as Baxter Canning Company Ltd. have diversified and now employ more personnel on a year-round basis.

Mr. Duggan predicted that progress will continue and accelerate in 1974 and 1975.

Robert LeFebvre, general manager of the Picton plant of Wickes Canada Ltd. said an official opening will be held on February 18 for this new industry.

He said that next week, the company, which manufactures recreational vehicles, will begin to build cabletony. Units will be on the production line soon.

Located at Loch Sloy Industrial Park, Wickes Canada Ltd. manufactures motor homes and will employ from 60 to 80 Prince Edward County residents.

John Wynen of Lake Ontario Cement Company Ltd. said that one of the largest production kilns in North America now is being added at the Picton plant.

The first phase of a long-range plan has been completed and is a first in North America.

The next phase a kiln project, now is underway and lower fuel consumptions will permit LOC to compete with Canada Cement Ltd., St. Lawrence Cement or other American neighbors."

The new kiln will be a steel tube 17 feet in diameter and will require 1,800 HP to rotate it twice each minute.

The kiln daily will produce enough cement to pave more than four miles of Highway 49.

Carnival Time Again For Trenton's Base

TRENTON—CFB Trenton's Astra Winter Carnival kicks off this Sunday with traditional carnival parades.

Listed as a highlight of the week-long winter extravaganza, the parade's theme is provincial culture. All the provinces will be represented in the parade which will begin at Broeck Mosaton Park.

The parade will proceed south on the 6RD Road turning right on Curtis Road. The column of 150 marchers and 10 floats will then head north on Rivers Drive and McGill Avenue and back to 6RD Road.

Service establishments in each province have entered teams in the seven-day carnival competition with events scheduled for each night. Finals will be held next Friday night.

More than 600 people have contributed to the carnival planning which includes sorting out 1,000 entrants in carnival events.

County Citizens Get Merit Awards

PICTON — The Prince Edward County Chamber of Commerce has recognized achievements of eight county residents with certificates of merit presentations.

Receipients included Mark Vincent, Georges Wandless, John Wenekamp and Dennis Connelly, Ontario champions in school safety awareness' competitions in 1973 and team standby, James Harrington. All are students of Prince Edward Collegiate Institute.

Also presented were David Leslie and Randy Tarrvell, winners last year of the Canadian Chrysler Trouble-shooting contest in Windsor.

A Picton man, John Sibthorpe received a certificate to mark his outstanding role in staging the Gold Cup Races at Hayward-Long Reach last September.

Fitness and the Heart

It is just possible that Canada is on the verge of a new era of physical fitness for its citizens.

There is still a long way to go — a long way before the overweight lose those pounds and regain some of their youthful vigor, a long way before a substantial number of the younger generation, and many adults too, kick the tobacco habit — but there are encouraging signs.

We see it in Canada's remarkable performance in the Commonwealth Games. And we see it also in the sudden upsurge of interest in cross-country skiing, as well as in skiing on the slopes, and even in snowmobiling which, if it provides little exercise, does get people out in the open.

But meanwhile, there are medical problems aplenty — and foremost among them is heart disease.

This month the Canadian Heart Fund conducts its annual campaign for support in the work of combating the whole gamut of problems associated with heart disease: heart attack, stroke, high blood pressure and hardening of the arteries, rheumatic fever and inborn heart defects to mention only some.

Diseases of the heart and circulation, which take our dollars here to fight, are responsible for more than 78,000 deaths in Canada each year. This represents more than 51.4 per cent of all deaths.

Thus, while there is hope for the future, in heightened concern among adults and in the rise of a generation being made more aware of the need to keep fit, our whole society is subject to the pressures of modern living, a sedentary lifestyle, and a hitherto cavalier disregard for even the basic tenets of physical fitness.

To carry on research into the whole realm of what causes such problems, and evolve more effective treatments, the Heart Fund needs public support. Our dollars here are in a worthy cause. Let us give as freely as possible for this vital work.

Scary Movie Fare

Suddenly the papers are full of comment about a film called The Exorcist which has won a bundle of awards, including one for Linda Blair as a 15-year-old child possessed by an evil spirit.

The word is however that this film is a terrifying spectacle from which people have emerged shaken, including some of tender years (should they be allowed in?) convinced that they too may be similarly possessed.

This is heady stuff but if it is ever presented locally there will no doubt be lineups of people prepared for the worst.

They might take heed though of the sort of comment that appeared in a letter to The Globe and Mail, that The Exorcist "is a violently revolting and thoroughly disturbing film."

Can it be though that such a presentation is any worse than much of what we have become accustomed to on television? Even Roy Bonisteel's Man Alive hit what some might have regarded as an unpleasantly new level of realism recently. In an examination of man's good and evil propensities, the program showed a group of men in the instant of death being shot, firing squad (a scene incidentally which was repeated several times during earlier advertising breaks, and at a time of day when children might be watching). Another was a group of African women and children in a state of bewilderment and distress as they awaited some unknown fate. Was this in Angola? or Mozambique? — or the scene of guerrilla strikes or army reprisals? It was not stated, but presumably the scenes were introduced for shock effect, as well as to illustrate the point to the premise that man, aside from his more noble propensities, can also be a pretty bad egg.

Whatever the motive, we question the desirability of giving such intense prime publicity, with emphasis on the more distressing facets of man's behavior. There is enough in the news of the day to indicate such malevolence without resorting to it.

For all that, in these manifestations — of the presence of the devil, evil, or whatever, on the one hand, and of man's inhumanity to man, on the other, we may ultimately be served for the better, by enabling us to make the right choices. As for scary movies, the personal memory of such an occasion is still fresh in mind from Edgar Wallace's The Crimson Circle some 25 years or more ago. Those who see The Exorcist likely will survive too.

Canada's Naivety Under Fire

Public Anger Grows Over Admission of Chilean Marxists

By RICHARD JACKSON
OTTAWA — Spokesman for the first 179 of hundreds more Chilean refugees coming to Canada, has admitted publicly at a press conference that they are Marxists.

And they resent, he made it clear, the condition Canada has imposed on their admittance: the pledge to refrain from political activity.

No other country was so funny, they complained.

How avowed Marxists — promise or no promise of political inactivity — managed to secure Canadian visas is a question lawyers and political observers, including Liberals.

For it was just the other day that Immigration Minister Robert Andras guaranteed what he described as "the closest possible screening" of these refugees — or fugitives, as some view them — to keep out the kind of violence-revolutionaries who wrecked the Chilean economy, hammered the country to its present knees and brought on the military takeover.

By fax, 179 refugees from Chile — not necessarily all Chileans, and some of them quite possibly Marxists from other South and Central American countries — have applied for admission.

To transport, feed, clothe, house, train and place in jobs, the Government has committed the taxpayer to putting out some $600 per refugee.

But at their press conference, the refugee spokesman admitted some of them had "no idea" how they might earn their living.

And as to "gratitude" for Canada's easy acceptance of them, one of their number said it was not so overwhelming as to change their Marxist dedication.

They shrugged off as irrelevant questions about how they will be spending their time in Canada.

Their attitude clearly was that while the taxpayers might be footing the bill for them, what they think about security, Robert Andras has told them and their body vocal sympathizers that he is tricking by his condition that Marxists or not, none of them get in without pledging to forsake political activity.

What specific sort of political activity has not been made clear, but the terrorist cult of kidnappings, assassinations and the war on society of the South American urban guerillas might have a bearing on it.

Tupac Amaru, Tupac Pe, Pepe, Ho Beio Horizonte in Brasil, comes a letter to the editor of THE OTTAWA JOURNAL expressing astonishment at the naivety that prevails in wanting 1,000 political exiles, some with terrorist training in Cuba and Algeria, when a mere dozen or so terrorists in Quebec held the entire country to ransom in October 1970."

Mr. Page writes that a South American terrorist has told him that despite their Marxist ideology, even the Soviet won't accept the refugees from Chile.

And he adds that the terrorist "affirmed that their main interest in going to a western bloc country like Canada would be for political aims and the ultimate overthrow of the government."

J. Belanger of Ottawa, in another letter, is aghast that thousands of dollars are being spent on the refugees in the name of humanity, and asks: If it "isn't humane, too, to help the poor, disabled and the elderly here at home?"

But since the refugees — from Hungary, from Uganda, from Czechoslovakia, and presumably from Chile — routinely go to Toronto, that is where most of the flak is flying.

Liberal MP Barnett J. Danson of the Toronto suburban riding of North York is on the record with a report of heated constituency meetings on the issue, the in-coming political exiles from Chile.

"People are frustrated and angered," he went on. "Despite already afraid that what they worked for all their lives, what they have earned, will be taken away from them."

He sees this as a "shift to the right," and says 95 per cent of constituents, brought on, he enumerates the issues, by the fear of creeping welfarism of Unemployment Insurance and Opportunities for Youth, and the rising tide of black immigration, and by the Marxists from Chile.

And Barnett Danson is a two-term, six-year Liberal MP in the best of party standing.

Summing it all up, Robert Andras concedes "there's fear to pay about letting in these Marxists from Chile."

Pipeline Key Issue in Canada-U.S. Exchanges

By VINCENT EGAN
Business and Consumer Affairs Analyst
Thomson News Service

Should Canada permit the construction of an Alaska-to-Alberta pipeline even though the U.S. Administration favors it?

That, in effect, is the question hanging over the proposal for the $5.5 billion Arctic Gas pipeline. Its backers call it the biggest project of any type ever proposed by private industry.

The pipeline would transport natural gas 2,600 miles from the Alaska-Yukon boundary and from the Mackenzie Delta, south through the Northwest Territories and Alberta. There it would connect with other distribution systems, and go to meet energy needs in the population centres of both this country and the United States.

The Nixon Administration hopes Canada will approve the project. Much of the $5.5 billion capital would be raised in the United States. And a substantial part of its through-put would be going from one part of the United States (Alaska) to another (the so-called lower 48 states).

The U.S. taint is reason enough to reject the proposal, as far as many Canadian nationalists are concerned.

Similarly, the America-Firsters oppose it because they say that U.S. energy supplies would not be secure if part of them (less than 10 per cent) were flowing across Canadian territory.

Much of the natural gas used in Central Canada transmits U.S. territory on its way from the West to Ontario, while the bulk of Canada's crude-oil imports moves by pipeline from the Atlantic port of Portland, Me., to Montreal.

Other alternatives to the Arctic Gas pipeline are to leave the Arctic natural gas untouched, or to accept the proposal of El Paso Natural Gas Co. for an all-U.S. route.

El Paso would transport gas across Alaska from Prudhoe Bay to the Pacific Coast port of Valdez, liquefy it, and ship it by tanker to the U.S. West Coast.

Critics say this would be too costly and complicated, and would pose an environmental threat to the British Columbia coastline, especially near the U.S. border.

On balance, Canada's interest would best be served by some form of agreement that the pipeline be built on the Canadian route proposed by the consortium called Canadian Arctic Gas Study Ltd., thus forestalling the proposal of El Paso.

While environmental risks can never be ruled out, they would probably be fewer with the Canadian route—and CAGS have the best seven years carried out extensive testing to develop safe techniques and to protect the environment.

It has yet to meet the objections that a number of native groups through whose land the Arctic Gas pipeline would be routed. But other native groups support the project as a badly needed source of revenue and employment.

For Canadian energy-users as a whole, the Arctic Gas project looks like the only feasible source of additional ample future flow of natural gas (which supplies one-quarter of our energy needs) to the population centres of the country. But if it were not permitted also to carry U.S. gas between U.S. points, its cost would be prohibitive.

Co-operation would be in the mutual interest of Canada and the United States.

Out in the Cold Taiwan Nevertheless Has Friends

By JOHN D. HARBRON
Foreign Affairs Analyst
Thomson News Service

Taiwan, still called The Republic of China, is reaching out hard to maintain its political presence in the world as more and more countries recognize The People's Republic of China.

A small example of this was the reported offer of Taiwan's public relations company representing the Taiwanese government to invite members of the press in China during the prime minister's official visit there last October to go home via Taiwan as guests of the Taiwanese regime.

Needless to say the prime minister's office was upset about the invitation, though they could not and should not have done anything about it. This columnist was asked by a Chinese official after his return to Canada if he knew of any members of the press group who received the Taiwan offer and if he had been approached to do so. My answer to both was no.

Nevertheless it was a small but important example of Taiwan's all-out efforts to keep up a presence in the world, a presence which is being diminished not only by the world's giant, Peking, but by Taiwan's elimination from important international events in sports, tourism and some trade areas, in place of Peking.

The most serious shift in the Asian status quo in the past year was of course, the Nixon-Kissinger opening to the People's Republic of China and the president's visit to Peking in early 1972.

However Taiwan is far from isolated in the world in that even the growing number of nations which have recognized Peking and therefore withdrawn their diplomatic missions from Taipeh, the Taiwanese capital.

Britain which recognized Peking a very long time ago, in 1950 in fact, has permitted the maintenance of Taiwan's Association office in London, Japan, which has extensive trading in the expectation of major two-way trade does $2 billion annually in trade with Taiwan.

Taiwan's ace cards are still in the trade and business areas and the government of the aging Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek uses these with skill and persistence.

The latest example is the current plan in Hong Kong and Tokyo to withdraw the services of Taiwan's China Airlines to allow the entry of the CAAC (Civil Aviation Administration of China), the state airline of the People's Republic of China.

If the Japanese government bows to Peking's demands that Taiwan's airline be removed from its Tokyo stop before the Chinese Communist one can come in, the Taiwanese government has publicly threatened to terminate Japan Airlines' very lucrative flights into Taipeh. Further, Taiwan has also threatened to use the Republic of China air force to compel the big passengers jets of Japan Airlines not to fly over Taiwanese air space.

The most profitable single trade in the international operations of Japan Airlines is its Tokyo-Taipeh service, a most popular one for increasingly affluent Japanese tourists as well as for the Japanese businessmen maintaining their big trade with Taiwan.

In Canada's case, the 1970 Trudeau government recognition of Peking, that Canada "takes note" of the claim that the People's Republic of China to Taiwan, permits us still to trade with that aggressively commercial island.

Taiwan is our fifth largest customer, a position which the People's Republic of China may never hold in the proposed future development of Chinese-Canadian trade.

About 40 nations including Britain, most of Latin America and the Middle East like Brazil, Iran, Israel and Saudi Arabia still have full diplomatic relations with Taiwan.

In addition, Taiwanese paranoia about isolation in Asia and the world is reflected in the best Chiang's island regime after Peking's Nixon visit, has greatly dissipated and the Taiwanese find workable ways to fight back.

Western Provinces' Industrial Needs

By DON O'HEARN
Queen's Park Bureau
Thomson News Service

TORONTO — So far as I know this didn't get into the news media.

In Ottawa, before the start of the conference on energy, Premier William Davis had a late-night press conference.

One of the pertinent questions he was asked was about the drive by the western provinces for more manufacturing industry and, as the leader of Ontario, Canada's manufacturing centre, his reaction to it.

His answer, I believe, holds considerable significance to Ontario, both today but particularly for tomorrow.

The premier's reply was that he couldn't have any objection.

The western provinces needed, and deserved, industry, he said, and he supported them specifically.

He said he wouldn't want to see any of the present development planned for Sarnia go under, but at the same time there was no reason why a petrochemical industry shouldn't develop upstream in Alberta.

He spoke in realistic realities more than philosophy, and is significant for Ontario today but even more so for the future.

In all practicality Ontario in 10 years there will be in a different position in Canada than it enjoys today.

It still should be a flourishing province and probably easily still the largest, but it won't be so top dog, so high on the pole, as it now is.

Energy and power has always been the source of economic strength.

Cheap power is what has built Ontario industry in this century, it's dean't get sole credit, but it has been dominant.

We all know today that Alberta and Saskatchewan have the cards in oil and gas. In addition to supplies, they will also have a price advantage—just how much we will know in two or three months when agreement is reached with Ottawa.

But in addition oil and gas Ontario is no longer king in the energy of the future—electricity.

Our water resources have mostly been harnessed. What is very little left. Which means we are into expensive thermal generation, whether by uranium or fossil fuels.

Ontario's share of the total population of hydro left in Canada is the harnessing of Newfoundland has Labrador. . The Maritimes have the Bay of Fundy, Quebec has James Bay, Manitoba has the Nelson River B.C. still has the water potential.

Energy-wise, all of these areas eventually are going to have an advantage in addition to others; such as the deep water ocean ports of the Maritimes, logical for manufacturing for overseas export, and the better freight rates the west is certain to gain.

We are going to be a somewhat different province, Not a worse one. But one of somewhat less prominence in a better nation.

The Conservation of Energy

Editor,
The Intelligencer.
SIR,—Environment... your electric clock goes off right on time, a flick of the razor switch is your morning shave, a quick shave, a quick shower and you hurriedly eat breakfast, why did you dom f ever stop to consider:

Suppose the electrical power supply suddenly was not stayed off in your house? No, you are not thinking of the "emergency crisis" as you rush in for breakfast. Suppose the toaster, the electric toaster and eggs cooked over your gas or electric range, coffee, percolated in your electric coffee maker hits the table. Your wife begins the household chorres of washing dishes in the automatic dishwasher. The floors are there to cut omes the electric floor cleaner from your closet. The clothes go into the automatic washer and dryer.

Consider for a moment that you have already used some 16 electrical gas, or coal fired appliances in the course of just your morning!

The energy sources in Canada combined with natural gas producers over 90 percent of the total energy expenditure, including automobile gasoline. Nuclear and hydro-power make up the remainder. The problem as I see it is, that the so-called "energy crisis" has not been brought about by the real deficit. The question is, does conscience of man allow the moment justify future ecological disaster and possible destruction of life within this generation? Surely man took a long look at fuels and our rapidly increase in energy consumption and came up with some questions; Do we really need all this energy? Why did we build our economic structure on polluting non-renewable resources? Why not concentrate on non-renewable fuels are, they are there in abundance and in themselves. It is man's exploitation of them for selfish profit and convenience which is at the heart of the problem. For example, suppose man were to harness the sun's non-polluting energy, would he do it wisely? Or would he turn it to profit seeking and selfish destructive ends? I believe that man's greed is not reassuring!

It is becoming increasingly clear that man must totally reevaluate concepts concerning the structure of society. We need to consider a change of attitude, and of our whole environment because we have been living in one of what world. After all, this earth is a closed system which operates as a unit and reacts, replenishes, and purifies itself without any outside help other than the energy from the sun! There are limits to the earth's capabilities. Will the earth cannot be saved from the ravages of mankind? Perhaps the earth is wounded. It may kill us unless we change!

Rail System Said Outdated

OTTAWA (CP) — Taxpayers' money is subsidizing an outdated rail system in Canada while it could be used to develop technically efficient and modern railways, says Julius Lukaszewicz, a Carleton University engineering professor.

Prof. Lukaszewicz says in a recent report legislative changes should be made to stimulate the railways and the federal government to improve rail service.

He proposes a long-range program of equipment improvement and track upgrading to raise the quality of passenger and freight service. Such a program would be economically justified based on studies of European and Japanese railways.

Prof. Lukaszewicz says passenger train service in North America is far behind similar operations in other countries.

The National Transportation Act of 1967 removes any incentive to improve efficiency, he says. The act provides for subsidy of uneconomic rail service.

The Canadian Pacific and Canadian National Railways have applied for discontinuance of virtually all passenger train services since the 1967 act became law, he said.

The Canadian Transport Commission has determined that most of these uneconomic services should be continued in the public interest. Under the act the rail companies are eligible for federal subsidies up to 80 per cent of annual losses on these services.

The law is not opposed to transportation subsidies. The problem is that of needless spending on them.

But there should be better use of public funds.

He recommends changing legislation so that railways can launch long-range plans for technical development. There should also be financial investments to support these efforts.

While electric power is extensively used in other countries it is little used in Canada. But electrically-powered locomotives are more efficient than diesels—able to move more for the same weight and fuel consumption. And they last longer.

Madawaska Farmers Ask Injunction

ARNPRIOR (CP) — Area farmers have asked the Ontario Federation of Agriculture (OFA) to take action to halt construction of a $79-million Ontario Hydro dam and generating station here.

Gordon Hill, OFA president, said Thursday there appeared to be sufficient grounds to seek one, but hoped the OFA had never before sought an injunction on behalf of its members.

Farmers have said the project will inundate valuable land, destroy roads, ruin woodlots and flood Madawaska River tributaries; They also say they are upset over the value Hydro has put on their land.

Purpose of the project is to stimulate economic and increase hydro power on the river.

Regulations Planned For Food Substitutes

OTTAWA (CP) — Motivated by evidence of protein, vitamin and mineral deficiencies in the nation's diet, health department officials plan compulsory nutrition guides for food processors.

The government will also strengthen the Food and Drugs Act this year to ensure various protein substitutes are as good as the real thing, Dr. A. B. Morrison of the health protection branch said Thursday.

These will include infant formulae, substitute whole eggs, substitute cheeses and meal replacements.

In the wings are detailed regulations covering the quality of substitute meat such as bean meat and poultry, Dr. Morrison said in an interview. A special committee of his branch is reviewing the options.

A Nutrition Canada survey published last fall found vitamin, protein and mineral deficiencies among 20,000 people. Eight thousand foods were suspected as a contributing cause.

Ernie Steele of Ottawa, president of the Grocery Products Manufacturers of Canada, said that the government's main aim is to educate young people not to eat as much convenience and snack foods.

The government also is considering an income support program to enable those on low incomes to eat nutritious foods. It also may decide to subsidize some basic foods, such as providing free milk to the needy, he said.

Two Asthma Aerosols Banned

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal health department announced the recall Thursday of two aerosol asthma remedies, Asthmanefrin automatic aerosol and Vaposnefrin.

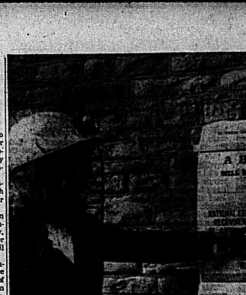
The first product may be labelled under the names of either Mithan-Thayer Ltd., Toronto, or Trent Drug Co. Ltd., Montreal, the department said.

Sales of Vaposnefrin, distributed by Arlington Laboratories of Montreal, were discontinued in 1971, but the department warned that some containers may still be on pharmacy shelves or in private homes.

Tests conducted in the U.S. showed that both products do not liver many times the normal dose of epinephrine, the active ingredient, although no deaths or adverse effects had been noted.

The department said it considers the use of the defective aerosols as a potential health hazard and urged patients to discontinue their use.

The two asthma treatments are sold without prescription.



The department added that products bearing the names Asthmanefrin and Vaposnefrin are also sold in solution form for use in vaporizers and are not involved in the recall. Only the aerosols were considered hazardous.

Ran Wild

SWANSEA, Wales (CP) — Barry Care was overjoyed when he passed his driving test soon after his 17th birthday—the youngest age at which Britons are permitted to drive a car. But when his brand-new licence arrived, 18 more 12 endorsements for a whole array of driving offences, plus a 24-day driving ban. Police proved sympathetic when it was found a computer at the licence office had run wild. "The system has not been operating for long," said an official there.

No Horsepower

NORWICH, England (CP) — A high court judge on circuit in Norfolk denied his traditional ride to court in a horse-drawn carriage because of the petrol shortage. It would have used too much precious fuel to bring the horses 200 miles by truck.

Contractor Gave Executives Gifts

TORONTO (CP) — Four executives associated with two Toronto building firms were called before the royal commission inquiry on violence in the construction industry Thursday to explain gifts totalling $7,700 from concrete-forming contractor Walter Zanussi.

Testifying were John P. Goldie and partner Peter Bregg of Goldie-Burgess Ltd., a contracting and building management firm; and Alexander Johnson, vice-president of Canada Square Ltd., and L. W. Marks who said he recently had been fired by Canada Square.

The hearing was told Goldie-Burgess was hired to manage construction of the 58-million, 50-storey Manulife Centre in Toronto.

In February, 1970, the two men signed a contract with Mr. Zanussi for one of his companies to do concrete work on the project and the profit was $270,000.

Testimony was that Mr. Goldie and Mr. Burgess received free trips to the Caribbean in 1971 and 1972 paid for by Mr. Zanussi and the two sons of Mr. Burgess received $3,700 in salaries for working with Mr Zanussi in the summer of 1972.

Mr. Hanks and Mr. Johnston each received $1,200 in vacations from Mr. Zannusi and Mr. Johnston also got $750 worth of windows free, the hearing was told.

Mr., Zanussi got the concrete-forming contracts for two Canada Square projects, Ontario Hydro headquarters building and the Transamerica building, both in Toronto.

Three witnesses earlier testified Mr. Michael was given $1,000 and a suit of clothes by Kiakinen Vlahos, head of Fran-Kiri Forming Ltd. and a related group of companies.

Mr. Vlahos had testified he could not meet the terms of a union agreement and paid $1,000 each to Mr. Michael and John D'Allmonie, a union organizer, so they would lay off, leave me alone."

Mr. Michael testified he was offered money by Mr. Vlahos, but "I ignored him at first . . . then told him, no."

Mr. Michael said there was no implication he might get a free suit but he said he paid for the clothing he bought at the time.

The witness also charged that Mr. D'Allmonie went to builders seeking Christmas presents for his children and threatening trouble on job sites unless he was paid.

Dismissal Is Upheld

CORNWALL, Ont. (CP) — Members of the Stormont, Dundas and Glengarry school board have been informed that the Supreme Court of Ontario has upheld the firing of history teacher Rev. Paul Bezosni.

Father Bezosni was fired by the school board from his job as history teacher at Ecole Secondaire La Citadelle following charges that he participated in a two-week strike by students demanding concessions for francophone education.

OUR OUR WAY

Greed Seen as Barrier To Better Communication

MONTREAL (CP) — Canadians lack the kind of communications they need because of factors of money and greed in the field, says Gertrude Laing, former member of the Canadian Radio-Television Commission (CRTC).

"We must restore confidence in the whole operation of communications," Mrs. Laing told an industry conference Thursday night.

The conference, ending today, was sponsored by the Canadian Association of Broadcasters, the Canadian Cable Television Association. The aim was to study various communications systems available to Canadians and see how these balance — or do not balance — with consumer needs.

Mrs. Laing, giving her own views and not the philosophy of the CRTC, said one way to restore confidence is "to discard the capitalized approach" to news programming.

The Englishborn Calgary scholar says the present system of television news engenders a false sense that people are informed on what is going on. The whole approach to news programming has to be changed "if it is going to be believed."

"If money has stopped us from doing the things we need to do in Canada, it is because we are greedy," she added.

Mrs. Laing also said there is communications discrimination within English-language Canada—apart from linguistic problems between the French and English-speaking sectors.

Thought Shown

TAUNTON, England (CP) — A section of the M5 expressway in Somerset is to have a special 12-inch tunnel for badgers drilled underneath it. The highway happens to cross a run between two badger "setts" which the animals have used for years. The environment department authorized the tunnel, costing several hundred pounds, after badger specialist Dr. Ernest Neal explained badgers are creatures of habit and would continue to cross the road at risk to themselves and possibly to motorists.

Nine Canadians Die in Jet Crash

PAGO PAGO, American Samoa (AP) — Seven Americans and two New Zealanders survived the crash of a Pan American Airways 707 jet on this South Pacific island that killed 91 persons, officials said. The dead included nine Canadians.

The plane crashed 3,000 feet short of the Pago Pago Airport during heavy rain at 11:41 p.m. local time Wednesday (6:41 a.m. EDT Thursday), officials said.

The flight originated in Auckland, N.Z., and carried 92 passengers and seven are under going treatment in our intensive-care unit," said Dr. Ron Walshak, chief medical service.

One survivor was in satisfactory condition and another in good condition.

An American Samoan Government official said earlier that of 19 people who were in the burning wreckage, four had died at the hospital. Beds are for only one died at the hospital.

A team of six investigators from the U.S. National Transportation Safety Board was dispatched to Pago Pago, one of the seven islands in the U.S. territory in the South Pacific.

Witnesses said the plane crashed in a field and burst into flames.

"You could see the flash all over town," said Jake King, editor of the Samoa News in Pago Pago, in a telephone interview with the Oakland Tribune.

The plane hit about 200 yards west of the runway in a banana field," King said. "Both wings were severed, the cockpit's side was ripped open and the tail section fell away," he said.

The pilot was in a radio contact with the Pago Pago tower at the time of the crash but it was no known whether he gave any distress signal.

TORONTO (CP) — Ontario's 11,064 physicians earned an average $43,982 in gross income from provincial medical health plan in fiscal 1972-73, which industry estimates reveal.

But the province's 5,796 family doctors got an average payment of slightly more than $32,000, the statistics made public Thursday show.

The 1972 statistics field, pathologists averaged more than $137,000, and diagnostic radiologists averaged $101,000.

The data showed that the plan cost Ontario taxpayers $405,257,515 in payments to doctors and almost $20 million to other specialists such as optometrists and chiropractors.

Other average payments included psychiatrists $31,094; surgeons $40,330; obstetricians and gynecologists $59,138; general surgeons $39,242; and pediatricians $41,433.

City Escapers

New Life, Old Furniture, and Happy Days

Leaving the city, finding an old house to live in on the edge of a village, starting up an antique store, maybe growing a garden next summer...

Fulfilling the urban dream of thousands of people, Clive and Norma Peacock are watching their wishes come true.

Clive Peacock was president of Clive Peacock Associates for fifteen years in Toronto. An advertising agency employing 60 people, it serviced accounts for companies such as Kellogg, Eaton's and Benson and Hedges.

Exciting, challenging work, but tension-ridden and exhausting. "Oh, I was making a handsome living," says Mr. Peacock now, "but I looked around one day and thought, 'If you keep it up, you're going to die soon.' That was about two years ago."

At one point, the Peacocks left Toronto and spent some months in the Caribbean, during which Mr. Peacock firmly decided to leave the advertising world behind.

Norma Peacock who had been selling real estate for eight years, was quite happy to move from the city as well.

At first they planned to set up in the Bahamas, but eventually realized that would only be a short-term alternative. To think things over, they returned to their cottage at Bernard Lake near Marmora, a retreat they'd owned for 12 years.

During this past summer, freed of their ties in the city, they visited local auction sales as they had in summers past, looking for cottage furniture.

On one foray they came upon an old mill, and both agreed it would be an ideal location for an antique furniture store.

The mill turned out to be irresponsible but once they had the idea of selling antiques, within days they had found the old Mavett house in Marmora, over 100 years old and perfect for their needs.

They sold their home in Toronto and moved to Marmora in mid-December.

Eventually, an apartment at the back of the house will be their refinishing workshop.

Peacock Antiques and Interiors should be open for business by the end of May, but the Peacocks don't expect to be fully established for some months.

"It will take a long time to build up a large display of really fine old furniture," Mr. Peacock says.

"We spend time now travelling the countryside, making contacts, visiting private homes that have old items for sale, and bidding at local auctions," says Mrs. Peacock.

"Our knowledge of antiques increased over the years we bought for ourselves and we expect to learn a lot more by our experiences now. To learn by doing is really the best way."

"I think we should succeed," her husband adds.

"This area is becoming popular with antique buyers, and more shops are opening all the time.

"The more there are, the better, since potential buyers like to spend whole weekends browsing through a district.

"Increased competition will increase the number of buyers and sellers."

At this point, the Peacocks are specializing in no particular period or type of furniture, although Mrs. Peacock has a personal preference for pine. They are eager to obtain all kinds of old items.

"One morning this week, we visited a farm house to buy some old china ware, and I ended up getting interested in their old gun collection," says Mr. Peacock!

The renovations to their house already begun, but the Peacocks expect to live in a state of upheaval for a few months yet, since they are doing much of the work themselves.

Their life is much different than it was in the city - for one thing, they're together all day long - - and they find they've adjusted easily to the new pace.

"Not that this is a small pace existence," Mrs. Peacock says.

"We are busy all day long, either knocking down doorways or unloading furniture or refinishing pieces. But it's a happy kind of busy-ness."

There are many other changes in the Peacocks' lives.

"I probably know more people to say hello to on the street of Marmora than I knew in Toronto after city whole life there," marvels Mr. Peacock.

"People chat to me in the stores," Mrs. Peacock adds, and a lady in the post office today asked if we played bridge."

Their delight - - common to city folk who move to a rural area, is shared by their daughter Erin, who attends Marmora Senior Public School. She misses some of the city's pleasures - - like her past school's swimming pool - - but has quickly adjusted to a new habitat and new friends.

The Peacocks' three sons, two working and one in school, still live in Toronto but visit on weekends.

Frequent visitors have already become a feature of the Peacocks' new life.

"Our city friends see us more often now than they did when we were in Toronto," Mr. Peacock says.

Many of those friends had told me five years ago that this is where I'd be, I'd have laughed.

But now that he's here, he knows it has been the right move to make.

Relaxed, happy, looking to a prosperous future, like other city escapers, the Peacocks have no intention of ever going back.

A COMMON-PLACE BOOK

Look, what thy memory cannot contain
Commit to these waste blanks, and thou shalt find
Those children nurs'd delivered from thy brain,
To take a new acquaintance of thy mind - - -
— Shakespeare, Sonnet LXXVII.

* * *

Mrs. John (Irene) Haig, George Street, locally widely-known as former radio personality and columnist, Harriet Stevens, takes pleasure in keeping a Common-Place book, and she delightfully consents to share it with our readers.

"Such books," she says, "have quite a distinguished background, for in the days of Ancient Greece when orators spoke in the Forum in Athens, none was allowed to speak from, or refer to, any notes. These were put in a common receptacle or a common-place" as the speaker was about to go on stage."

She continues:

"In time, the term as defined in the dictionary, denoted journals in which quotable passages, literary excerpts and comments are written.

"Shakespeare had something of their nature in mind when he wrote his sonnet," (quoted above). "And among well-known Common-Place book enthusiasts may be mentioned the late English poet, W.H. Auden.

"He who receives a good turn should never forget it; he who does one should never remember it." - - Charron.

"To be a man will continue to demand a heroic heart as long as we are not quite human." - - Said by a German Communist journalist who was guillotined in Berlin during the war.

"Civilization is just a slow process of learning to be kind." - - Anon.

"Love does not consist of gazing at each other, but in looking outward together in the same direction." - - Antoine de Saint Exupery.

"He is not well-bred who cannot bear ill-breeding in others." - - Benjamin Franklin.

"The philosophy of one century is the common sense of the next." - - Henry Ward Beecher.

"Make the most of yourself for that is all there is of you." - - Emerson.

"The desire to take medicine is perhaps the greatest feature which distinguished man from animals." - - Sir W. Osler.

"Man has never seen the writing on the wall until he has his back to it." - - Barbara Ward.

"The bathtub was invented in 1830 and the telephone in 1875. This probably does not mean anything very special, but if you had been living back then, you could have sat in the bathtub for up to 25 years without hearing the telephone ring." - - Cliffeville, Kansas Journal.

"It is worthier of man to rise in laughter above life than to bewail it. He is more worthy of the human race who laughs at it, than he who sheds tears over it." - - Seneca.

"The Duke of Devonshire's gravestone epitaph:
What I gave, I have
What I spent, I had
What I kept, I lost."

In conclusion, do we not all agree with Montaigne: "The love of reading enables a man to exclude the worrisome hours of life which come to everyone for hours of delight."

We know we speak for all readers of the pleasure received in reading these excerpts from your excellent Common-Place book - - a personal treasury, as all such books are, of Man's precious gift down the ages, to Mankind - his thought.

Thank you, Mrs. Haig.

Norma Peacock proudly displays one of their treasured finds, an old roll-top desk sitting now in the Peacock's dining room. With the desk are some of the other antique objects she delights in collecting - - trays, vases, and a green-glass oil lamp.

Although she will maintain her real estate selling license, Mrs. Peacock's top priority in the next few months will be finding other beautiful old items so that she has a good selection on hand when the Peacock antique shop opens.

MAGIC LADY

By Cassie

I don't know how many of you caught the wig advice in our earlier columns. I'm still seeing too many of you wearing your glasses under the wig. Shame on you. Shame, shame, shame. Wear them through the hair, not over the top of your temples and ears. This will save you many a headache. Also, if you're wearing a wig and you're not sure why, this can be fixed. Many of you already have ELURA fibre wigs and don't realize that you do. This is the wig that CAN BE RESET and put under the dryer. If you're not sure of one of the above, I'll gather you up, or come on to see ya's talk magic. Lady.

This weekly column by Cassie Softly comes to all callers and to a select few by mail. Cassie is a lady who is enough to be very smart and pretty but shopping or at home. The Elura label assures you of the best in workmanship and fibres.

Ann Landers

'Bad Heart' Diagnosis Wrecks Husband's Life

Dear Ann Landers: My husband is so mad at my father he'd like to kill him. This is what happened, and I wish you'd tell me what can be done about it.

In 1965, two years after we were married, Harvey suffered a heart attack and had severe chest pains. We called my father (a doctor) in the middle of the night. Dad is a physician. He examined Harvey and told him he had a heart problem. He instructed Harvey to "take it easy" and cut out all strenuous activity.

This meant giving up handball and tennis. It also made a serious dent in our sex life. Harvey was so afraid of dying while having sex that he was impotent most of the time.

Two weeks ago Harvey caught the flu. My father was out of the country so we called another doctor. He was terribly sick and the doctor put him in the hospital. In a few days he was feeling better and decided to have a complete physical while he was there. Harvey was given by six different doctors and received a perfect bill of health.

When he asked specifically about his heart problem he was told that his heart is perfect. This so baffled us that the following words came to flow to the Mayo Clinic and Harvey was seen by a top cardiologist. The report was: no heart problem, and no evidence that there ever was one.

When my husband thinks of the years he has wasted "being careful" he could wring my father's neck. I'm plenty burned up about it, too. What should be done?—Eight Years Kaput

Dear Eight: Nothing. The original diagnosis was worth what your husband paid for it. It's always a good idea to get another medical opinion. Even a doctor who isn't related can be wrong.

Dear Ann Landers: This is for Green Around the Gills, who was upset because the "crudest, baddest-mouthed broad in the office" had snagged a man while she and her ultra-feminine friends remain "unclaimed."

Who do so many women feel they have to be trapped by chicanery and cunning? A few years ago I installed my first obligation was to myself and my husband. Gradually, progress in a field long considered a man's job. I've been called blunt, aggressive, and even obnoxious. Others have described me as honest, ambitious, and highly motivated.

My husband says I'm "sweet." Not because I'm ultra-feminine, but because he knows I respect and admire him and I need his love and the emotional support he provides. That does more for his male ego than any amount of feminine submissiveness.

Perhaps "Green" will make someone a wonderful wife, but I happen to believe that the top quality man wants in a woman who has "something more than curves, soft voice, and projects phony helplessness.—Happy Being Me

Dear Yes!: Let's hear it for the honest, ambitious and highly motivated woman. Thanks for a good letter.

Dear Ann Landers: Please tell motorists that when they hear an ambulance siren they should have the decency (if not the good sense) to pull over and let the guy by. A few minutes can mean the difference between life and death. I've seen drivers block an ambulance and refuse to give an inch. One of those stubborn devils sided up dead yesterday, right in front of my service station. The speeding ambulance hit him head-on. Thanks, Ann.—Hurry Boy

Dear Sorry: So am I. Thanks for writing.

Successful Living

Water Is Wonderful

By DORIS CLARK

There is something about learning to swim under an enthusiastic instructor that inspires a student to try. With each "step" forward the student sees himself with new fulfillments to an anticipate problems so he can set work and schedules in advance.

With the acquisition of knowledge and the skillful execution of technique, the true fun begins. The wonders of the watery world appear.

"I can be an Olympic swimmer. I can be a swim instructor. I can help disabled people to broaden their social and physical horizons."

I can keep clear up the waters of the world by learning more about what lies beneath the surface.

"I can take up boating. I can safely canoe on water all because I know how to take care of myself in water. I can learn to scuba dive.

"Because I respect it, water is my friend. IT'S FUN!"

—quoted from DESPATCH

Dear Doris: When my son visited me last Christmas he brought me a carton with four bottles of sherry in it. Once the doctor prescribed "invalid sherry" for me, and he remembers this. Then my daughter came for New Year's and saw the carton, which had not been opened.

We had a blow visit over New Year's with her bunch, but when she went back to her own town (200 miles up north) she wrote that she and her family felt they were welcome in my house unless they brought me some wine. This hurt me, because they were welcome to have dinner if they wished it, and they knew it.

Before marriage I paid her college fees and I did without, myself, to help pay for their car. Now they have all the trimmings young people have, and I have to scrimp to keep my taxes paid. I don't know what to say. Hurt.

Dear Hurt: Your daughter's letter doubtless comes at her own guilt feelings. Most of us know that payment cannot call for a house visitor to bring some thoughtful gift. It certainly does not have to be alcoholic, but it does have to be something the giver has purchased in love.

She may be much older before it dawns on her that parents are entitled to love and gratitude in return for the sacrifices they make for their children. Simply write that she and her family are always welcome at your home and that it is her you want to see - not any gift she might have in mind. Jars

Dear Doris: I have some antique fruit jars and I'd like to know where I can sell them. Are there any that have a catalogue listing current prices.

Sealers that are really antique are quite valuable; and you can get a Fruit Jar Collector's Guide by writing to Granny's Treasures, 107 Kenneth Street Duncan, B.C. This book costs about $2.50. But if there is a public library near you they are bound to have books on glass collectables and you can do your own research.

Historical Panorama

Woven by Salish

VANCOUVER (CP) — Forty Stalo women of the Salish Indian tribe are weaving a panorama of the lives and history of their people.

Less than 90 miles from Vancouver, a true commune works at its craft, creating a story in symbols of thunderbirds, stars and swallows.

Martha James of the Sardis River people said she is the only one to remember the single surviving tale, passed down through generations of storytellers.

Other weavers use the symbols to tell stories of daily life but woven into her rug is the story of how at sundown in the days before the white man came, the ancestors of Salish raided the salmon-fishing grounds near Hope's twin peaks.

The raiders massacred the small village there, leaving only an old woman and a small boy.

Vowing revenge, the boy went into the forest where he developed great hypnotic powers. He grew to the age of 15 and the coastal Indians attacked again but this time he was ready for them.

As the war canoes beached, he hypnotized the raiders into a trance.

Then, wading into the river he clubbed all but two of them to death. The survivors warned the other coastal Salish never to attack the village again.

Josephine Kelly said the tribe used to have herds of whiter, long-haired dogs The wool and the dogs' hair was spun on a primitive spindle into yarn for packstrap, blankets and dancing aprons.

Local 'Specialty' Served at Loyalist

It had to happen.

Loyalist College has made its contribution to the student hall of fame with a concoction destined to rank beside Peach Melba and Boeuf Wellington.

Kneisel on a kaiser, introduced this week in the posh college dining room, Chch 213, will carry the name of Loyalist's public relations director into posterity.

Unfortunately, the college's contribution to haute cuisine was not originated by chief Ed Gould who reigns over the hot meal management course kitchens.

He was going to patent the recipe and start a chain of take-outs," he said.

Loyalty to the college prevailed and Kneisel on a Kaiser is one of the three specialties offered during student week at 75c in 213. All three are now available for 95 cents each. Sharing the menu with the star attraction are the Beef Bourguignone and English fish and chips.

Like the great Escoffier, Mr. Kneisel believes that chefs' masterpieces of this rank should be shared with the public. He graciously consented to publication of the recipe. Despite rumors circulating at the college, Kneisel on a Kaiser is not made with ham.

First slice a Kaiser bun in half, butter it and grill it. Cut Polish sausage lengthwise into quarter inch slices and cover the bun with them. Grill a one ounce slice of old cheddar cheese until it just begins to melt, and flip it with a spatula on top of the sausage. Finally, add a dollop of saurkraut and cover with the top half of the bun.

Citizens Bureau Loses Backing of Help Fund

By AL ZABAS
Staff Reporter

An uncertain future again awaits Belleville's Citizens Bureau with the announcement that the Quinte Help Fund, its principle funding source for the past two months, has closed up shop.

Fund president, Albert Lentini officially sounded the lottery's death knell yesterday, saying the operation of the roughly 20-30 draw was suspended indefinitely. Over the past two months, the organization raised approximately $2,000, a sum calculated after deducting prizes and administrative expenses.

After a six-month suspension, the lottery was reactivated Dec. 1 to provide funds to operate the consumer aid project in Belleville. Previously the bureau, under program director William Hockley, had operated under a Local Initiatives Program grant sponsored by United Community Services. But when federal government's funds were cut off, the program stood scrambled around for finances to keep it going and Mr. Lentini stepped in.

Originally, he planned to run the lottery through to Dec. 1, 1974.

However, he said yesterday his plans changed when a good business opportunity fell into his lap. Shortly, he will be undertaking a training program in Montreal before assuming a "revolutionized franchise for an unnamed building product."

Since most of his time would be spent outside Belleville, Lentini does the lottery was the only alternative he felt he had.

"I handle about 80 per cent of our tickets," he said yesterday. "It's a lot of hard work, and nobody else would do it, at least not for free."

Further, he said a complicated system of ticket distribution precluded a takeover of operations by someone else. Besides, "The lottery's kind of a baby for me, I don't like to give it to anyone."

Mr. Lentini has pledged monies already collected toward paying rent, telephone bills, rental of the typewriter, and other expenses the Belleville bureau would incur in normal day-to-day operation. He calculates the funds could last 10-12 months.

"We've raised a working budget of about $2,000. With that, we could keep this office going and work in conjunction with the bureau's director," he said, in calculating expenses roughly at $150 a month.

At present, former Belleville bureau personnel are working on an independent Trenton office under LIP funding obtained through the sponsorship of the Quinte District Labor Council.

However, Mr. Lentini admits that more funds are needed for the Belleville office. Asked how the bureau would be financed, he said, "volunteers will have to pop out of the woodwork. Somebody will man it."

"Finding volunteers is not up to me," he said, adding now is the time for a little cash. "Somebody from the office must send it, you do it." Although Mr. Lentini has left the Belleville bureau to others unmanned, he has promised to provide funds for a paid staff member.

About two weeks ago, Mr. Lentini said, approached the Belleville Yardmen Benefit Fund president, request $18,000 to pay at least one salary for one year. He hoped other Belleville organizations would be made before the money ran out.

However, speaking Thursday, Yardmen president Ted Trenton denied Mr. Lentini requested the sum on the bureau's behalf. He stated the request had been for $500 a month.

"There's no way we could plan money out of here (the Benefit Fund) for salaries," Mr. Branton said.

Office Available, Staff Lacking

Staff to man Belleville's Citizens Bureau may be hard to come by in the coming weeks with the announcement Thursday that the Quinte Help Fund has indefinitely suspended operation of its lottery and pulled out its skeleton staff.

The question as yet has been made to set up machinery to find volunteers to staff the bureaucracy's offices, initially begun in Belleville under local initiatives program funding a year ago. At present, only a few volunteers come into the bureau office on an irregular basis.

Commenting on the situation, William Hockley, outspoken former bureau program director said today, "sometimes, we'll get that damn thing going."

Four days ago, Mr. Hockley and two other former bureau personnel were hired to man a Trenton bureau funded by a $9,240 LIP grant sponsored by the Quinte District Labor Council. It is expected the bureau will cease operation in May, this year, when funds run out.

However, money is available to cover office operating costs in Belleville, Quinte Help Fund President Albert Lentini has pledged approximately $2,000 to that end.

"If the money is available," said Mr. Hockley, "it's the setting up of volunteers on a regular basis that will be necessary, as long as there's some consultation between the two bureaus."

No matter how dedicated the volunteers are, he commented, the expertise and knowhow acquired over the past year

Loyalist Licence Granted

The weekly event was cancelled last year when some students from the community college was operating in a "dry" township.

Today Loyalist spokesman Ernest Knelsel said specific dining and lounge controls had been conditionally granted to the college by the Liquor Licence Board of Ontario.

Mr. Knelsel added that the Board has given its official pending inspection by fire, hydro and liquor inspectors. If all goes well, the earliest before will be operating, "he said.

UCS Annual February 13

The United Community Services has announced its annual general dinner meeting for Wednesday, Feb. 13 in the St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, at 7 p.m.

Notices of meetings are being sent. If attendance figures for 1973 can be used as a guideline, some 75 people will be present to meet directors nominated for this year, as well as be presented with the organizations annual report.

A guest speaker has not yet been announced.

Torches, Beef, Bingo Survive Cold Winds

The torches flickered in the cold wind while their bearers huddled to keep warm Saturday in order to begin the torchlight parade was given and another event in Belleville's winter carnival was underway.

The crowds lining the route of the parade were cut down considerably by the weather but here and there groupings of warmly dressed people watched marchers, floats and the winter carnival queen, Marsha Bishop pass by.

The Shriners, dressed in Arab costumes, and cubs also took part in the parade that started behind the Federal Building to loop around Victoria Park where students from Loyalist College were host for a Beef-In-Roast.

During the day, students Jim Spencer and Pete Mackey were preparing 75 pounds of roast beef in the ovens of the Navy of Quinte Yacht Club.

About 100 beef sandwiches on a bun, selling for $1 each, were sold. The Beef-In was put on by the Outward Bound Club at Loyalist College under Hugh Pepper.

The lack of snow forced the cancellation of a planned torchlight safari in which members of the Canadian Ski Doers Snowmobile Club, organizers of the parade, were to travel from Victoria Park to Belleville General Hospital bearing torches.

The remainder of the night's activities shifted to Ben Bleecker Auditorium at the fairgrounds where the Lions Club held their Monster Bingo. About 120 braved the cold winds to attend the games.

Carrying the Torch

Even with the warmth of torches borne by marchers in last night's torchlight parade, low temperatures and cold winds still kept a frosty edge on winter carnival activities. These young marchers hold their torches aloft prior to the start of last night's parade which started behind the Federal Building and wound up at Victoria Park where a Beef-In Roast was going on.

Why Not Grin ?

Php Stephens has every reason to feel pleased with himself, and his luck. Now he has that much more money to spend foolishly when he goes on vacation to Hawaii via California and Las Vegas next Sunday. Last night, Quinte Help Fund president, Albert Lentini (left), congratulated the Rollins Lumber employee after he won $934, half of the receipts from the fund's 50-50 January draw. But Mr. Stephens was only 10 minutes away from his new-found fortune. Four times he walked by the booth in the Quinte Mall before he finally broke down and bought a ticket — 10 minutes before the 8 p.m. draw.

City's Bid for Land Refused

By ROY PEACOCK
Staff Reporter

Thurlow township council at this time will not agree to any further voluntary annexation of township lands by the city of Belleville.

This was indicated Thursday afternoon as members of the two municipal bodies met at city hall to discuss water and sewage servicing problems and possible extension of the city's boundaries east into Thurlow.

In recent weeks Thurlow has already given consent to voluntary annexation by Belleville of 400 acres of township lands east of the city's northeast industrial park.

Reason for the annexation, which still has to have approval by the Ontario Municipal Board, is to allow for extension of city water and sewer to a proposed new industrial park.

The Procter and Gamble property, totalling close to 150 acres, is partly within the present boundaries of the city, but the initial stages of plant development would be in the township.

In return for the voluntary annexation, Belleville will allow extension of city water mains to serve Canniffton and the Cloverleaf Drive area.

The 400-acre area to be taken into the city lies between the double line CN railway tracks and Highway 401 and would be earmarked for industrial development.

Thursday, however, with the support of city council, Mayor Robt. Jeffrey proposed a flat no to further voluntary annexation of an additional 800 acres east of the city.

Reason given for the request was that the 400-acre annexation was merely a stop-gap and because of land lack the city would only be back again seeking further expansion.

Also, extension of the city's boundaries further to the east would allow the proposed north-south arterial road in the city's east end to be entirely within Belleville boundaries.

"So why not do it now," was Mayor Jeffrey's proposal, "it would allow the city to really plan.

Specifically, the mayor's proposal was that the city's east boundary be extended to the line between lots 15 and 16 running south from Highway 401 to the bay.

Alderman Jack Ireland raised the question of possible rezoning development immediately east of the city's present boundaries and there was discussion whether this might be delayed until Thurlow had the opportunity of developing the Canniffon and Cloverleaf Drive areas.

Thurlow Reeve Horace Casey said Rollins Construction had a plan of subdivision for immediately east of the city and would expect to go ahead.

"I am afraid there would be objection to any rezoning action," he said.

Referring to the new trunk sanitary sewer up the Moira River which was constructed with the view of ultimately servicing part of Thurlow, Mayor Jeffrey said it would be to the advantage of the city to encourage development north of the sewer.

"The more Thurlow pays to water, the more we lose in pay" she noted.

Thurlow councillor George Beare wasn't enthusiastic about his township allowing further annexation.

As an alternative, he suggested that the city allow services extension to the east of the city with township customers paying a higher rate than city users.

"Annexation would be just another line between us," he said.

Councillor Garnet Denyer said the same thing, asking why the city could not provide service to the proposed Rollins subdivision under agreement.

City Alderman Arthur Keenan wondered if the township had ever considered provision of its own water filtration plant.

To this Reeve Casey replied that questions have been taken up with provincial authorities who had been firm in stating such a facility would not receive provincial subsidy.

Water resources commission said at that time water and sewer service for Thurlow must come from Belleville."

Alderman Ireland again brought up the question of the proposed arterial road east of the city, to run between highways 2 and 37, noting that plans for such an arterial road have to get under way four to five years ahead of construction.

Extension of the city's boundaries would simplify the matter, he suggested.

But Thurlow councillor Beare didn't go along with this thinking.

Instead, he suggested the proposed arterial be constructed as a suburban road. He felt there might be more provincial subsidy if the county constructed the road.

After speaking in support of voluntary annexation, Mayor Jeffrey wondered if Thurlow really wanted residential development east of the present city boundaries without supporting industrial base for taxation.

Referring to the city's agreement to allow service extension to the Canniffon area, the councillor said his municipality already had requests from industry.

The deepest is already there. All we require is servicing," he said.

Following the meeting Reeve Casey said he expected no further action by his council on the city's request for further voluntary annexation.

"We had hoped we'd made up our minds prior to the meeting," he said.

Getting Organized

Alexis Rothschild, past president, Ontario New Liberals, talks to founding meeting of young Hastings-area group at Quinte Secondary School Thursday night. Co-ordinating was Belleville Glen Sinè, right, ONL Eastern Ontario commissioner.

New Liberals Meet

Votes don't change the rules of the political game — just the players, says Belleville-area Liberals were told Thursday night.

Warned Alexis Rothschild: Contemporary politics require more participants who don't just vote. What's needed are people completely involved with the issues, working for change within political parties.

"Concerned people must be brought into politics we want to change the rules," said the young political organizer.

The 23-year-old Toronto university student and immediate past president of the Ontario New Liberals — the party's new young-member wing — helped organize the core of a Hastings riding ONL st. a meeting in Quinte Secondary Schools.

Hunter Fined

A Belleville youth, convicted of a charge of careless hunting that arose from a shooting accident Oct. 24 in which another man was shot in the face and neck, was fined $200 this week when he appeared in provincial court.

Steven Gagnon, 17, of 15 Cedar Street was charged with careless hunting after a companion, Miles Pringle, 20, was shot in the face, neck and shoulder with a 12 gauge shotgun while the two were hunting partridge in Tyendinaga Township.

Court was told yesterday that the two men had been hunting on opposite sides of a windrow on Lot 8 Concession 4 in Tyendinaga when Pringle was accidently shot by Copeland.

The man had flushed a partridge from the underbrush which Pringle stopped into Copeland's line of fire and was struck in the left side of the face with a shotgun blast from about 40 feet away.

Third Gold for Wendy

Cook Wins Gold-Still Has To Learn How to Swim the Race

CHRISTCHURCH, N.Z. (CP) — Wendy Cook shook her head and said: "If I could just figure out how to swim this race I might be able to improve my time."

As part of her learning experience, the 17-year-old Vancouver university student breezed to her third gold medal of the Commonwealth Games today in the 200-metre backstroke in a time that was 1.18 seconds short of breaking the world record for the event.

A day earlier, she had broken the world record in the 100-metre backstroke in sparking Canada to victory in the 400-metre medley relay. The day before, she had won an individual gold in the 100-metre event. None of the other swimmers pressed her in any of her races.

"I started too fast and then ran out of steam," she said.

Her time in the final was two minutes 30.26 seconds, a fraction slower than the 2:30.31 she posted in her qualifying heat. The world record, held by Melissa Belote of the United States, is 2:28.19.

She said she might have been in if she had swum a better race.

Canadians closed out the swimming program with two more gold medals as Leslie Cliff completed a double by winning the 400-metre individual medley and Steve Pickell of Vancouver, Bill Mahony of New Westminster, B.C., Bruce Robertson of Vancouver and Brian Phillips of Winnipeg cruised to victory in the men's 400 metre medley relay.

Meanwhile, John Primrose of Edmonton got the finishing touches to Canada's surprising domination of the Games shooting range by taking the trap-shooting gold medal, the fourth Canadian shooting marksmen in six events.

Primrose, who had been tied for the lead at the halfway point of the two-day competition, registered a perfect score on the second day, hitting his 100 pigeons despite a gusting wind that disturbed some of the other competitors.

The standings tightened at the top of the medal table. Australia, with many swimming victories, had 26 golds, Canada and England were tied for second place with 24 each as the English team came up with championships in three of the 11 boxing classes and won two races in the pool.

Ten events in track and field and the cycling road race remained to be completed Saturday, when the Games end.

Miss Cliff, the 18-year-old Vancouver College arts student who won a silver medal in the 400 medley at the 1972 Olympics, was a comfortable winner today, leading home 15-year-old Becky Smith of Edmonton and Susan Hunter of New Zealand, just as she did in the 200 medley six days before.

Her time of 5:01.25 bettered the Games record of 5:05.36 she set in winning her heat and was nearly 10 seconds faster than the previous mark of 5:10.74 set four years ago by Denise Langford of Australia.

Wendy Quirk, the 14-year-old from Pointe Claire, Que., who says she is thinking of swimming against boys because she doesn't get enough competition at home, was nipped by Australia's Mary Wilson, Jennifer Turrall in the 400 freestyle. Once again, the first five finalists broke the Games record.

Pickell had a silver to go with his gold medal as he chased Mark Tonelli of Australia all the way in the men's 100 backstroke in which Ian MacKenzie of Vancouver was a close-up fourth.

Marian Stuart of Pointe Claire was the runner-up in a fantastic women's 100 breaststroke final in which the eight girls finished 1½ seconds apart. Christine Caldwell of England won it in 1:16.62 to Miss Stuart's 1:16.91.

The second record of the Games fell to Stephen Holland of Australia, who broke his own mark for the 400 freestyle on his way to victory over the 1,500-metre distance.

The fabulous 15-year-old, who set records in both the 400 and 1,500 at the world championships in Belgrade last summer, was 2.86 seconds shy of breaking the 1,500 record again and his coach said his training had been hampered by an arm injury.

He covered the 800 in 8:15.88, compared with his 8:16.27 clocking at Belgrade. The other two seconds ahead of silver medallist Mark Treffers of New Zealand, the 400 individual medley champion.

The two Canadian finalists, Jim Fowlie of Prince George, B.C., and Bruce Bigelow of Mississauga, Ont., were sixth and seventh, finishing more than a minute behind the winner.

Mahony, the breaststroker who lost his 100 metre titles in the individual events and didn't even make the final of the 100 metres, was the hero of the Canadian victory in the relay.

He gave them a five-metre lead at the end of the breaststroke leg and Robertson pushed it to nearly 10 in the butterfly. Sprint champion Mike Wenden, the Australian anchorman, was unable to catch Phillips in his freestyle leg.

Both Mahony and Wenden were swimming their last races in international competition.

The only essential difference between Miss Cook's victory today and her earlier triumph in the 100 was that Australian Sandra Yost pushed Donna-Marie Gurr, her Vancouver team-mate, into third place.

Like Wendy, Donna-Marie said she started the race too fast.

"I went all out and then I just died," she said. "I almost drowned."

Her time was 2:33.74 to Miss Yost's 2:32.07.

"I did my best time ever," she said. "It's just that Cookie is going faster."

Apart from the three English winners and one from Northern Ireland, the boxing competition was dominated by Africans with Nigeria and Uganda taking two golds apiece. The other Canadian medallist, feather-weight Dale Anderson of Rocky Mountain House, Alta., won a bronze earlier as a losing semi-finalist.

Not in Vain for Kumar

No Signs of Rust on Prior

CHRISTCHURCH, N.Z. (CP) — For a man who has been out of international competition four years, Dave Prior shows little sign of going rusty.

Prior, a 23-year-old Hamilton weightlifter, won the Commonwealth Games gold medal in the heavyweight class Thursday, breaking all the Commonwealth and Games records he set in winning the event at the Games in 1970.

"I'm more than happy with science student at McMaster nine Commonwealth and Games records all in one night so I'm pretty happy."

The records were 341½ pounds in the snatch, 435¾ pounds in the jerk and the total lift of 777¼ pounds. Each lift also represented a record in the super-heavyweight division.

Prior's previous records were 326 pounds for the snatch and 431 pounds for the jerk.

Partly due to a serious spinal injury suffered while training in 1971, Prior has not been in an international competition since the 1970 Games in Edinburgh.

"And there's nobody in Canada who can lift with me, as I haven't had much competition"

Prior said he thought of going into the super-heavyweight class but saw that there would be stiff competition from New Zealanders John Bolton and John Barrett in the heavyweight division and decided to compete there.

Bolton won the silver medal with a total lift of 746¾ pounds. The super-heavyweight winner, Graham May of New Zealand, had a 755-pound total.

Prior, a final-year political science student at McMaster University, trains about three hours a day.

Asked about his future plans, he said he will compete in this year's Canadian championships.

Beyond that I don't know. I don't think it's a good idea to hold yourself up too far ahead.

Gets Butterflies

Cranston Leads Shaver After Compulsory Sets

MONCTON-N.B. (CP) — Ron Shaver gets 'butterflies' before he steps on the ice. "Big butterflies."

The 22-year-old skater from Cambridge, Ont., was in Moncton Thursday night as he talked about his efforts in the Canadian figure skating championships.

Shaver is up against his longtime friend Toller Cranston of Toronto, who is shooting for his fourth straight Canadian championship.

The amateur men's chamionship is a three-part event: Compulsory figures, which counts for 20 per cent of the points, was won earlier in the day by Cranston with seven ordinals and 87.85 points. The compulsory skate is today.

Cranston was second with 14.5 ordinals and 64.12 points. Robert Rubens of Toronto, was third with 29.5 ordinals and 62.12 points.

Shaver says "I got a little bit excited when I was told I won the first figure. I had practiced well and just didn't stay cold enough. I should have kept my head cool."

Sometimes the butterflies are worse when he competes in Canada.

"There's more pressure to do well when competing at home because we're looked to as the world team and also Canadians are watching us.

"When we're overseas, they're not so critical."

Sitting with Shaver was Lynn Nightingale who is locked in a stiff battle to win the senior women's event, as was the pre-competition favorite.

She got 11.5 ordinals or 64.37 points, ahead of second-placed Barbara Berezowski of Vancouver with 18.5 ordinals or 63.52 points. Nightingale received 23 ordinals or 62.31 points.

The figures account for 40 per cent of the event and the short compulsory is worth 20 per cent, worth 30 per cent.

Meanwhile in the junior events, the championships were generally considered as decided with the final three-skate competitions scheduled for today.

Kim Alleston of Ottawa has a firm hold on the junior women's title. She has eight ordinals and 32.35 points after the compulsory figures and short compulsory.

Susan MacDonald of Vancouver is second with 15 ordinals and 81.20 points. Kathy Oswald has 16 ordinals and 79.13 points for third spot.

He has seven ordinals or 33.35 points after the figures and short compulsory. Sandy Moore of Toronto is second with 12 ordinals and 32.75 points. Third-place Barry Pezzack of Toronto has 28 ordinals and 77.40 points.

Robertson said he was satisfied after the figures and "I did make some slips . . . I could have done better."

The husband-and-wife team of Louise and Barry Soper of Vancouver have a pattern dance skate to maintain their lead in senior dance event.

The event winds up today with the free skate. The Sopers, who are trying for their fourth straight title, are ahead of Barbara Berezowski of Toronto and David Porter of Port Perry, Ont. in second place.

McCourt Sparks Spitfires

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

Dan McCourt fired twice Thursday night to spark Windsor Spitfires to a 5-2 victory over Guelph Biltmores and back into first place in the Southern Ontario Junior Hockey League standings.

Spitfires now are one point ahead of Welland and have played one fewer game than the Sabres.

In other league games Thursday, Detroit Junior Wings trounced Niagara Falls Flyers 7-1 and Buffalo Tondas downed Michigan Americans by the same score, 7-1.

Detroit and the Flyers had been tied in fifth place before the game while the win for Buffalo was only its 12th in 39 starts. Guelph remains in fourth spot, three points ahead of Detroit.

Bryant Welcomes WFL -Provide Competition

NEW YORK (AP) — Ask Minnesota Viking cornerback Bobby Bryant what he thinks of the World Football League and the competition it will provide for the National Football League and he'll say he welcomes it.

"Sure I do," said Bryant. "Right now, it looks like they're for real and if they are, salaries will be higher in both leagues."

Bryant, in town to accept the Life Saver of the Month award for his two interceptions in Minnesota's 27-10 NFL victory over Dallas, said most of the players he's talked to hope the new league gets off the ground.

"This will give us more bargaining power," he said. "Now there's something else to consider. In the past, you always negotiated on their terms, and you didn't have a whole lot of bargaining power. Now there's an alternative."

Much the same sentiment was expressed two years ago by National Hockey League players when the World Hockey Association emerged from the talk stage to become a reality.

Players such as Bobby Hull, Derik Sanderson, Bernie Parent, Jim Harrison and Gordon McKenzie—established players in the NHL—jumped to the league as an opportunity to obtain financial security.

The emergence of the WHA has also meant considerable increases in many NHL players' salaries as rival leagues have lounged purse strings to retain hold on their players. Some salaries have increased by as much as 50 per cent.

Talent won't be a problem for the new league, the Viking veteran said.

"Obviously, there is room for only so many players in the NFL. There are more players then there are positions and there are plenty of players who could make it to the pros if there were more openings. A new league would create those openings."

Honeymoon Over for Miller

HONOLULU (AP) — The honeymoon must be over for young Johnny Miller now that Jack Nicklaus is back.

"I came to play golf," Nicklaus said after firing a seven-under-par 65 in the rain that finally forced suspension Thursday of the first round of the $220,000 Hawaiian open golf tournament.

Nicklaus tied Dwight Nevil, a one-time Dallas fireman, for the 18-hole lead.

Miller, who had taken some time off last week after scoring an unprecedented sweep of the first three titles of the season, was on the course when play was halted.

"I thought I could par out so I finished," he said. His 71 was six strokes back of the leaders.

Nicklaus and Nevil, who has yet to win on the pro tour, shared a two-stroke lead over Gibby Gilbert and Bocky Bartholomew, tied at 67. Those at 69 included Hubert Green, Andy North and Dave Eichelberger.

Arnold Palmer and Billy Casper managed par 72s. Lee Trevino was at 73 and rookie Ben Crenshaw had a 74.

At 76 on the back nine gave George Knudson of Toronto a 78 and Canadian in the tournament, Ben Kern of London, Ont., had a 78.

QHL Pennant Winners

Sport Is 4,000 Years Old

Cross Country Skiing Not As New an Idea as Some Think

By MARK BRETT

Everyone's on a nostalgia trip these days. Movies and songs relate to the 50s, the 40s, even the 30s. Now through sports you've got the opportunity to take the nostalgia trip of all time...back 4,000 years! The sport is cross-country skiing, which has caught on tremendously within the last two years and promise to be even bigger next year.

The Belleville YMCA in cooperation with Loyalist College is sponsoring a joint program including an instructors course, which has been under way for the past two months. Nineteen people are taking part including five students from Loyalist in the instructors program. These people will be used to teach beginners later on in the season. The Y's ski club has now about 30 members involved in the beginners program.

Ken Wheeler, who is teaching the instructor's program and helping out with the regular instruction was one of the co-organizers of the now internationally - known Canadian Ski Marathon race. The hundred mile race which is the longest of its type in the world, was first organized in 1967 as a centenial event and has grown from the original 280 entries the first year to over 2,000 entries last year.

Ken who has been skiing for the past 8 years, was born in Saskatchewan where there are very few hills, so the majority of skiing done is cross-country. He became interested in skiing during his term in the militia and after moving to Ontario he found the gently rolling terrain to his liking.

He feels that there is a good possibility of entering a team from Loyalist in the Canadian Ski Marthon race this year if enough interest is shown. The reason he gives for the upswing in the sport is people's increased awareness of the environment coupled with the federal government's attack on the lack of physical fitness in the country.

The novice will require about ten hours of practical experience learning the "trail tactics" before becoming proficient enough to venture out on his own. As in all physical sports conditioning is very important before taking up back strengthening exercises are necessary. Exercises such as jogging, cycling, weight lifting and even fast walking are good. When weight lifting women should be lifting 25 per cent of their body weight and men 40 per cent.

On the weekend of January college went on a 13 mile cross country ski tour of Algonquin Park, Grand Leader Jeffrey Pepper had high praise for the event, which took the group into the unspoiled wilderness. Plans for Sunday skiing were literally washed out as a freak rainstorm hit the area forcing the group to run for shelter in the van. Most members agreed that the good points out numbered the bad.

There is a good possibility that if enough interest is shown next year there could be a course offered in cross-country skiing through Outward Bound.

There are several important technical factors one should know before embarking on a cross-country tour. First of all, the ski wax plays an important part in getting the most from your skis with the least amount of effort. There are several different types of waxed based on different degrees of hardness. A good rule to follow is to wax for the hardness of the snow which is generally 4-8 degrees cooler than the air.

The other factor is clothing, good clothing to wear is clothing that allows free movement of the body, something that will let excess body heat to escape. A good thing to do is to take a spare sweater or parka in a knapsack to avoid chills when stopped.

There are various types of skiing areas available from the open farm field to the more sophisticated clubs with everything from accommodation and entertainment. Is curling and swimming depending upon how much money the skier is willing to spend.

Some of the closer areas to Belleville are The Sager-Oak Hills area, just south of Stirling on highway 32 which offers 46 acres of cross-country ski trails and Alpine skiing as well.

Glen Miller on Sydney St. in Trenton with highway access being 401, offers 18 acres of cross-country ski trails.

For the more serious skier, the Nacona Ski Hill, three miles north of Napanee, offers you eight kilometers of cross-country ski trails without the hassle of snowmobiles.

One of the better trails in the area is one mile east of Peterborough, called the Old Orchard Park which offers a variety of facilities from 14 kilometers of groomed marked trails to liquor and entertainment. The club is open Tuesdays to Sundays inclusive with an admission fee of $1.00 - $2.50.

If you think you might enjoy the quiet stillness of a snowbound trail, and are not afraid of some good healthy exercise, cross-country skiing might just be your answer to winter boredom!

Dairymen, Cornerstone Open With Quinte League Wins

Both Reid's Dairy and Cornerstone Engineering pulled off upsets in their opening games of their respective Quinte Hockey League semi - final series last night, as both teams defeated teams which finished higher-in the standings.

Reid's Dairy, last place finishers in the regular season, collected a 7-4 win over second place Belleview Hotel, while Cornerstone, third place finishers defeated pennant winning Stinson Construction 4-1.

Reid's got a three goal performance from Ted Waite, the 1973-74 scoring champ, with others by Reid Mallory, Bob Reid, Jason Morris, and Mike Bryant.

Belleview, minus the services of their top scorer, Paul Macklam, got markers from Frank Pinder, Doug Sherwood, Larry Marshall, and John Baker. Pinder recorded a pair of assists to go along with his goal.

The winners also out-penalized the losers, taking six penalties to Belvedere's three.

Kevin Allen was the only m a r k a m a n for Stinson's, breaking Cornerstone goaltender Casey Soden's bid for a shutout at 11:07 of the first period.

The games switch around next week, with the Reid's and Belvedere taking the first of the two-game total limelight, while the Cornerstone - Stinson's game will be the second.

Bobcats Take On Royals Tonight

The game is the first home contest against the Royals, who they defeated earlier in the season 4-0 in their only encounter so far.

The Cats, who took a 6-2 loss at the hands of the Peterborough Lions last Sunday night, in the Litlock City, have slipped to a second place tie with the Royals, each with 54 points. However, the Royals have played two fewer games than the Cats, giving them the current edge in the standings.

The locals will be out to recapture the spot which has been theirs for most of the season, except for a couple of periods when they held the league lead.

That spot is currently held by the Pickering Panthers, who have increased their first place lead to six points over the Cats and Royals.

The current scoring leaders still show three Bobcats in the top five of the league, Jim Richardson is in second place with 86 points, 11 behind Paul Gardner of the Cats. Mike Richardson's total includes 36 goals in the same number of games, as well as a league leading 50 assists.

Gardner has only 37 assists, but leads the league in goals with 60 in 36 games.

Alone in third place is Mark Coates, the Cats 5'3" winger. The diminutive Coates has 72 points, including 35 goals and 37 assists.

Dave Snetsinger is the league leader in penalty minutes, having racked up 122 minutes in the sin bin in 38 contests.

Game time for tonight's contest at the Arena between the Cats and the Royals is 9 p.m.

The Booster Club "Meet the Players Night" will follow the game at the Knights of Columbus Hall, Front Street, continuing until 1 a.m.

Intell Bonspiel Next Monday, Tuesday

The Quinte Curling Club will be the scene next Monday and Tuesday of the Intelligencer Ladies' Curling Bonspiel, with 18 rinks from as far away as Toronto and Kingston competing for the Intelligencer Trophy.

The tournament, under the chairmanship of Louise Halpin, will feature three events for the ladies, as well as a consolation event, being held for the first time this year, with it being a point type draw, as opposed to the head to head competition in the Intelligencer Trophy draws.

As well as rinks from Toronto, and Kingston, places such as Catarqui, Napanee, Picton, Tweed, CFB Trenton, and of course the host Quinte rinks will be represented.

Among the features of the two day event will be a fashion show, to be held in conjunction with the Bonspiel Tea, to be held Tuesday afternoon, running from 3-5:30.

A dinner will be held, for all competitors in the bonspiel, Monday evening, with both events being held at the Curling Club.

Last year's winners of the Intelligencer Trophy, the Bev McFarlane rink, from Picton, will unfortunately not be back to defend their title, leaving the door wide open for a new winner.

The final draw of the Bonspiel will be held Tuesday evening, starting at 7:30.

Wayne Weller Still Holds Senior Lead

According to statistics released today, Wayne Weller of the Belleville Eagles still holds the lead in the OHA Senior A scoring race, two points up on second place Corby Adams of the Barrie Flyers.

Weller holds the top spot with 53 points on 22 goals and 31 assists, while Adams has 51, including 24 goals and 27 assists.

In third place is Jim 'Obie' O'Brien, of the Orillia Terriers, who has 50 points, including a league leading 28 goals.

Weller is the leader in assists with 31.

Charlie Convery of the Eagles is tied in sixth spot, along with Grant Moore of the Orillia Terriers. Convery has 44 points on 16 goals and 28 assists, while Moore's total includes one less goal.

Women's Basketball Tourney at Loyalist

The only Women's Basketball Tournament of the season at Loyalist College will be held tomorrow, with three games scheduled. The first is to be played at 10.30 a.m.

The teams from the Eastern Division of the Ontario Colleges Athletic Association will be in the competition, with Loyalist, Algonquin College (Ottawa), and St. Lawrence College (Kingston- all vying for the title.

However, both Loyalist and St. Lawrence have both won one game this season. Loyalist defeated their rivals 48-47 in December, while St. Lawrence turned the tables on the Lancers 33-31 on January 19.

Loyalist appears to be in excellent shape, with the exception of one of their starters, who will definitely not be in uniform for the tournament. Louise Greenland, the team's second highest scorer and one of the better rebounders is out of action with knee ligaments. The accident occurred in the game against St. Lawrence January 19.

The Lancers' final tournament of the season will be in Kingston February 16.

Rovers Meet

An organizational meeting of the Rovers Soccer Club will be held this Sunday, at1:30 p.m. at the Recreation Centre, Pinnacle Street.

Plans for the up-coming season will be discussed, with the possibility of entering the proposed Eastern Ontario Senior Soccer Loop, also to be discussed.

Kings Blow Chance To Move Into Fourth Place

By GLENN COLE
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Los Angeles Kings have not participated in the National Hockey League's Stanley Cup playoffs since the 1968-69 season, but the the West Coast club feels this could be the year.

However, Los Angeles blew a chance to move into fourth place in the West Division Thursday night when they lost 4-2 to New York Islanders long after the Flames were beaten 4-3 by Boston Bruins.

In other games, Toronto Maple Leafs clipped Minnesota North Stars 3-1, Philadelphia Flyers edged Buffalo Sabres 4-3 in a penalty-filled clash and Chicago Black Hawks clipped California Golden Seals 3-1.

The teams were tied 1-1 at the end of two periods and Islander winger Bob Bourne shot Los Angeles into a 2-1 lead at 1:45 of the third.

But rookie Bob Nystrom, who had three of the Islanders' five shots in the final period, scored on all three to increase his league total to 14.

Bruins 4 Flames 3

Phil Esposito scored his 44th and 45th goals of the season to push the Bruins past the Flames. John Bucyk and Andre Savard got the other goals for Boston, who played without all-star defenseman Bobby Orr. He is still recovering from a thigh injury received last Sunday in a game against Philadelphia.

Barry Ronnendczek and Bobby Leiter were the Atlanta marksmen.

Maple Leafs 3 North Stars 1

Toronto goaltender Jim Rutherford made a pair of goals in the first period to start the Maple Leafs to their win over the North Stars. Rick Kehoe got the other Toronto goal in the first period after Minnesota's Jean-Paul Perise scored in the second.

Flyers 4 Sabres 3

Maloney Named GM

VANCOUVER (CP) — Phil Maloney, coach of the Vancouver Blackhawks since 1965, was appointed Thursday night as general manager of the National Hockey League club for the balance of the 1973-74 season.

Canucks' president Thomas E. (Coley) Hall, in announcing what the club called "sweeping" changes, said Maloney will succeed manager Hal Laycoe has been relieved of his duties "because of the services of Bill McCreary Jr. have been terminated with effect today."

Laycoe started as the team's coach when Vancouver entered the NHL four years ago and moved into the front office as general manager before being replaced as general manager for this season.

MacGregor Fires Six

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

The Royals jumped on the Hawks in the opening period and held 3-1 lead after the first 20 minutes.

John Nazar with two, Doug Chase, Bob Chase and Bob Murray got the other goals for the Royals, who held a 45-30 edge in shots on goal.

Jean Tessier scored twice for Laval and J. P. Venina, Marc Parent, Blair Stuart and Yvon Vautour added singles.

Tonight, Montreal goes to Chicoutimi, Sherbrooke is at home to Trois-Rivieres, Hull visits Shawinigan and Laval is at Sorel.

Barry Gets Two Too Many

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Never give a good shooter like Rick Barry too much time. Houston gave the Golden State Warriors' star two seconds and it cost the Rockets a National Basketball Association victory.

Calvin Murphy appeared to have snapped Houston's three-game losing streak and Golden State's five-game winning streak when he hit a 22-foot jump shot for a 108-108 Rockets victory Thursday night.

"Anything can happen in two seconds," said Barry, who gave the Warriors a 108-108 tie with a 28-foot jumper at the buzzer.

Barry scored a total of 38 points as the Warriors moved to within one game of idle first-place Los Angeles Lakers in the Pacific Division.

Rudy Tomjanovich had 30 points for the Rockets.

Phoenix Suns beat Portland Trail Blazers 115-100 in the only other NBA game. Charlie Scott scored 25 points and Neal Walk 22 for Phoenix and Sydney Wicks collected 30 points for the Blazers.

There were no games in the American Basketball Association.

Veterans Swapped

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Philadelphia Phillies said Thursday they have traded shortstop Jackie Hernandez to Philadelphia. Phillies for catcher Mike Ryan. Hernandez, 30, has been with Pirates for the last three years after being acquired from Kansas City Royals. Ryan, 31, played for the Phillies for six seasons after spending three years with Boston Red Sox.

Playoff Spot Seen By Toros' Coach Harris

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Toronto Toros, with a 4-2 win over Houston Aeros Thursday night against Los Angeles Sharks, have got coach Billy Harris casting his eye at the World Hockey Association playoff picture.

Harris said January is the toughest month in the hockey player and his team is physically and mentally tired.

"Now come off the Christmas holidays and you're not half-finished the season and it seems the month will never end," he said, adding he plans to give Wayne Carleton, the league's individual scoring leader, as well as some others, three or four days off following Sunday's game with Minnesota.

In other games Thursday, Quebec Nordiques topped a three-goal rally in the final period with a 6-4 win over Houston Aeros and New England Whalers clipped champion New England Whalers 4-1.

The Toronto victory gives the club a three-point lead over third-place Cleveland Crusaders and pulls them to within four points of first-place New England in the East Division.

Toros 5 Los Angeles 4

The comeback win "is the kind of thing to make everything go," said Harris. The Toros now is playing .500 hockey for the month and "any team that can play .500 hockey in our crazy division will make the playoffs."

Tom Martin fired the winner at 3:25 of sudden-death overtime to push the Sharks further back into fifth place in the West Division Wayne Dillon, with two goals, and defenceman Steve King rounded out the Toronto scoring.

J. P. LeFleur was a one-man show for Los Angeles, scoring three goals, and rugged Steve Sutherland got the other

GOALIE SENT DOWN

CLEVELAND (AP) — Cleveland Crusaders said Thursday goalie Bob Whidden is being sent to Mohawk Valley of the North American Hockey League for the weekend. A spokesman for the World Hockey Association Club said goalie Yves Belanger is being recalled from Jacksonville Barons of the American Hockey League as a backup man for Gerry Cheevers while Whidden is gone.

Sunday 4 Maroons 4

Robert Cadieux's second goal of the game and 19th of the season three-minutes into overtime salvaged the three-point decision which Dave Maloney had given Sunday's Maroons 4-3 lead in the final period.

Cadieux also set up Jim Sherritt's two goals, whom John Arbour sent on the ice at the end of the second period. Larry Lund got the other Houston goal.

New Jersey 4 New England 1

Goaltender Barry Howell slammed a 40-foot slapshot past Whalers' goalie Al Smith, in the second period to lead the New Jersey Devils to victory.

Howell's goal snapped a 1-1 tie and the Knights went on to clinch the win on goals by Andre Lacroix, Wayne Rivers and Bob Paras.

John French was the lone New England marksman.

In tonight's action, Chicago travels to Edmonton, Los Angeles visits the Jets in Winnipeg and Toronto takes in the Nordiques in Quebec City.

NHL and WHA Have Until Wednesday

MONTREAL (CP) — Judge A. L. Melvin Richmond of the United States district court in Philadelphia has granted the National Hockey League and the World Hockey Association until Feb. 6 to file their litigation by an out-of-court settlement.

Lawyers for both leagues met with Judge Richmond Thursday for what had been scheduled as a pre-trial conference. A lengthy trial date has been set for the hearing of antitrust lawsuits the NHL filed brought against the NHL by the WHA, if no prior agreement is reached by the two sides.

Clarence Campbell, NHL president, said when the judge learned that the two sides had not reached agreement on terms of a proposed out-of-court settlement, he set the date for the pre-trial hearing until Feb. 6.

The WHA had agreed to drop the litigation if the NHL agreed to pay out $1 million legal costs the new league had incurred so far in its court battle.

Lawyers for both leagues had met in Washington earlier this month to draw out terms of an agreement and the WHA counter-offered.

However, the NHL governors met in Key Biscayne in Chicago earlier this week and failed to come to the unanimous consent necessary to enact such a plan.

Clippers, Voyageurs Close to Being Upset

By THE CANADIAN PRESS.

Baltimore Clippers and Nova Scotia Voyageurs may be underestimating their rivals in the American Hockey League.

The Clippers and Voyageurs both had trouble with the weakest teams in the circuit Thursday as Baltimore was held to a 3-3 tie by Virginia Red Wings and Nova Scotia struggled to defeat Richmond Robins 3-2.

The victory for the Voyageurs helped consolidate their fourth-place position in the North Division, while the Clippers upset Hershey Bears to remain in second place in the South Division, one point ahead of Cincinnati Swords.

Brian Levasseur's goal with four seconds remaining defeated Baltimore of victory. Robbie Ftorek and Len Fontaine scored earlier in the game for Virginia. Bob Cooke, Howie Menard and Bob Rivard scored for the Clippers.

Goalie Jim Shaw's efforts in the third period frustrated the Robins as they tried desperately to overtake the Voyageurs. Mickey Redmond, Gerry Shanahan and Bruce Cook were snipers for the Swords.

CBC Asks Injunction Be Ended

TORONTO (CP) — The CBC said Thursday it will ask the Ontario Supreme Court Monday to dissolve an injunction issued on the effects of pollution that was broadcast Tuesday night.

Portions of the documentary were deleted in most of the country following an injunction sought by Toronto Refiners and Smelters Ltd. and Canada Metal Co. Ltd., which has operations here.

The injunction, effective for 10 days, resulted in the deletions during the broadcast except in the Atlantic region because the injunction had not been served at the time of the broadcast to the East.

The injunction issued against the CBC prohibits it from broadcasting implications that the companies have "bought misleadingly favorable medical evidence and concealed material evidence from medical experts and from misstating the amounts the plaintiffs are spending to install pollution control devices."

The CBC has stated that if the injunction is lifted it will broadcast the program again in its entirety.

Policemen Hid in Closet

HAMILTON (CP) — Two Hamilton policemen testified Thursday they hid in a closet at a real-estate office in 1972 and recorded a conversation between the real-estate salesman and Vince Murray Montani, 38, charged with extortion and attempted extortion.

Montani was charged after the salesman, Gabriel Riverso, 34, said he and his sister were threatened with death in June, 1972, unless he paid $8,000.

Mr. Riverso alleged that Montani told him the money would result in a killer hired by Joe Battaglia—a man shot and wounded by Mr. Riverso's sister earlier.

Mr. Riverso said that Montani told him he had hired a killer to then slay Mr. Battaglia instead of Mr. Riverso and his sister.

Sgt. James Willis and Gerald Fahey told the court Thursday that they apprehended Montani with a dummy package of money at the real-estate office, they recorded a conversation between Mr. Riverso and Montani.

Youth Charged

PICKERING, Ont. (CP) — A Brooklyn youth has been charge with abduction after a hitch-hiker pulled a knife on a motorist near Belleville and ordered him to drive to Toronto, Whitby provincial police say. Police said the driver, who carried a knife, escaped Thursday night when Frank Graf of Bowmanville, Ont., was driving west on Highway 401 near Belleville. He pick up the hitch-hiker who pulled a knife and demanded to be driven to Toronto.

Race Deadly

BOGOTA (Reuter) — A race between two buses owned by rival companies ended when two of them crashed off a mountain and plunged into a ravine, injuring 18, police said Thursday.

The crash Wednesday near Villavicencio, 100 miles south of Bogota, was the second to Colombia within 48 hours and the seventh this month. More than 60 people have been killed.

Awards Made

TORONTO (CP) — Robert Cottrell, 35, of Chatham has been awarded $2,121 for injuries he suffered Aug. 17, 1972, when he was attacked by a gang of youths while riding his bicycle in that city, the Ontario Criminal Injuries Compensation Board announced Thursday.

Mr. Cottrell's award was awarded $1,335 for head injuries suffered when attacked Sept. 12, 1971.

James Irving, 23, was attacked by two men, one armed with a baseball bat, when he tried to stop them from making a noise with their car outside an apartment he was visiting.

Leger Says He's Still Free To Speak Out About Arts

OTTAWA (CP) — Gov.-Gen. Jules Leger, in his first public speech since taking office, said Thursday night his new position leaves him free to speak out on the arts.

"Thank God," he added in an aside which was not in his prepared text.

Mr. Leger opened two exhibits at the Public Gallery of special interest to French Canada — a showing of 17th-and 18th-century silver from France and New France, and a collection of paintings and drawings by the Quebec artist Ozias Leduc, who died in 1955.

Mr. Leger said the work of Leduc, touching on impressionism but still firmly related to realism, was a fore-runner of the abstract works of Paul-Emile Borduas.

Concerning the silver of New France, Mr. Leger noted that when Philippe de Rigaud de Vaudreuil was appointed governor of Canada in 1703, he felt he could not perform his functions properly because fingerbowls he had ordered from Paris failed to arrive.

Mr. Leger noted that governors-general always have been patrons of the National Gallery since its founding in 1880 by one of his predecessors, the Marquis of Lorne. An art collector himself, Mr. Leger said he and his wife have always felt at home in the gallery's display rooms.

Mr. Leger said governors-general are inhibited by their office in speaking on current political issues.

As representative of Queen as chief of state in Canada, governors-general speak only on the advice of the prime minister and cabinet.

Mr. Leger paid tribute to Jean Sutherland Boggs, director of the National Gallery, under whom the gallery "has scored such remarkable triumphs during the past few years."

Caribbean Islanders Visiting in Ottawa

By KEN POLE

OTTAWA (CP) — New Democrat MP Max Saltsman brought a ray of sunshine to the dimly-lit halls of Parliament Hill Thursday, continuing his campaign for Canada to acquire the Turks and Caicos islands in the Caribbean.

Mr. Saltsman (Waterloo-Cambridge) was accompanied by a three-member delegation from the islands, all of them involved in the hotel industry.

"Our mission here is mainly one of tourist promotion," admitted Liam Maguire, owner of one of the islands' eight small hotels.

That, constitutionally, is all that he and Hubert James, another hotel owner, and Norman Saunders, a hotel accountant can do for the time being.

The main obstacle is the fact that the islands, between 30 and 40 of them north of Haiti with a total of 170 square miles, are a British territory. So, until British wishes otherwise, the islands can act only unofficially.

Only seven of the islands, surrounded by the coral reefs of the Caicos Banks, are inhabited. The total population is about 6,000 persons, about 50 per cent of them younger than 20 and about 20 per cent older than 60.

Mr. Saltsman is convinced that the islands would be an asset to Canada, either as part of Nova Scotia or as a territory.

Mr. Silsman, who has formally proposed that a parliamentary committee investigate the possibility of the islands joining Canada, said union would be mutually beneficial.

The islands, which desperately need a jet strip at the airport, would keep domestic dollars in this country's economy if they were a part of this country. Canadians spend vast amounts of money every year in other parts of the Caribbean in their search for mid-winter sun.

The islands are on the main airline routes between Canada and South America but, because the airport can only take 727 jet feet long, big jets cannot land safely. An additional 2,000 feet is needed.

Mr. Maguire said the British government will be asked to initiate official discussions with Ottawa, following a resolution to that effect approved earlier this week by the island council of which Mr. Maguire and Mr. Saunders are members.

Earlier Thursday, Alexander Mitchell, governor of the islands, said in a telephone interview from Grand Turk he is awaiting a formal petition he can send to Britain.

In London, a foreign office spokesman said that if such a petition is forthcoming, British would be prepared to hold talks with Canada.

"The deciding factor," he said, "will be whether Canada wishes to accept such a development."

Happy Hooker Charged With Theft of Nighties

VANCOUVER (CP) — Provincial Judge Darrell Sloan Thursday reserved decision until Tuesday in the case of Xaviera Hollander, charged with shoplifting three nighties from a downtown department store June 8.

Miss Hollander, author of the Happy Hooker and other books, did not take the stand and her lawyer Jim Hogan said the defence intended to call no evidence.

With the sale of six million books to her credit, Miss Hollander testified she likes to buy clothes, not steal them," the defence lawyer said. "She was not searching for a book she was writing on crime and expected to be caught.

"She was testing the store's security system."

Noisy Cars May Bring Charges

TORONTO CP—An Ontario environment ministry official says persons driving noisy vehicles ultimately may be given tickets for noise pollution violations as it becomes clear speeding tickets now are issued.

Deirdre Benwell told a seminar at Humber College Wednesday that police now have to prove that the noise level is "unreasonable" and likely to disturb."

"There is need for a law which specifies a limit. And we want to do something about this very soon."

Installers' Workers To Tell of Gas System

SUDBURY, Ont. (CP) — An inquest into 23 deaths at Sudbury General Hospital braced itself today for a long scrutiny of the pipe system that carried fatal gas for at least one patient in a new wing last year.

The deaths, numbered in a row were due on the witness stand Thursday to Consumers Gas International Ltd., the medical gas-system installers, ranging from company executives to the fitters who handled the blue torches in putting the complex piping together.

Crown officials hoped that some time next week—the fourth week of Ontario's longest inquest—the five-man jury will have its first clear picture of just where, when and how a cross-connection occurred that diverted poisonous carbon monoxide into oxygen lines.

The Connecticut company's first witness Thursday—its top Northern Ontario engineer was unable to give the inquest details of construction and testing techniques, leaving those to employees farther down the line.

Erich Woerner, Sudbury district general manager, said he was not familiar with procedures for testing medical gas lines, a point also among lawyers for several companies implicated in the project.

"I've never really thought about it," he said when Crown Attorney John Takach, who was directing introduction of the evidence asked his whether standing of who was supposed to do the final testing.

Wages Rise

The average for 1973 is slightly above the 12-month increase in the cost of living of 9.1 per cent between December, 1972, and last December.

Editor Slain

MONTREAL (CP) — Lloyd Converse, 49, a news editor in the CBC's international service, was found stabbed to death in his Montreal West home Thursday. Police said Mr. Converse had been murdered. They refused to give any further details of the slaying, saying their investigation was continuing.

Mr. Saltsman (Waterloo-Cambridge) was accompanied by a three-member delegation from the islands, all of them involved in the hotel industry.

"Our mission here is mainly one of tourist promotion," admitted Liam Maguire, owner of one of the islands' eight small hotels.

That, constitutionally, is all that he and Hubert James, another hotel owner, and Norman Saunders, a hotel accountant can do for the time being.

The main obstacle is the fact that the islands, between 30 and 40 of them north of Haiti with a total of 170 square miles, are a British territory. So, until British wishes otherwise, the islands can act only unofficially.

Only seven of the islands, surrounded by the coral reefs of the Caicos Banks, are inhabited. The total population is about 6,000 persons, about 50 per cent of them younger than 20 and about 20 per cent older than 60.

Mr. Saltsman is convinced that the islands would be an asset to Canada, either as part of Nova Scotia or as a territory.

Mr. Silsman, who has formally proposed that a parliamentary committee investigate the possibility of the islands joining Canada, said union would be mutually beneficial.

The islands, which desperately need a jet strip at the airport, would keep domestic dollars in this country's economy if they were a part of this country. Canadians spend vast amounts of money every year in other parts of the Caribbean in their search for mid-winter sun.

The islands are on the main airline routes between Canada and South America but, because the airport can only take 727 jet feet long, big jets cannot land safely. An additional 2,000 feet is needed.

Mr. Maguire said the British government will be asked to initiate official discussions with Ottawa, following a resolution to that effect approved earlier this week by the island council of which Mr. Maguire and Mr. Saunders are members.

Earlier Thursday, Alexander Mitchell, governor of the islands, said in a telephone interview from Grand Turk he is awaiting a formal petition he can send to Britain.

In London, a foreign office spokesman said that if such a petition is forthcoming, British would be prepared to hold talks with Canada.

"The deciding factor," he said, "will be whether Canada wishes to accept such a development."

The Art of the Eskimo Was His Communication

KLEINBURG—Looking for a way to fight the winter blahs? Get your inspiration from the Eskimo, who has been coping with winter for thousands of years. At the McMichael Canadian Collection in Kleinburg, Ont., you can browse through the two gallery rooms featuring works by our northern neighbors. See if the smoothly-finished stone carvings, the whimsy prints and the serenity of the countryside doesn't awaken a new appreciation of winter's beauty.

A booming interest in Eskimo works has lead to the development of the story of 2,000 years of Eskimo art which is currently on tour in prestige galleries from London to Paris to Moscow. However, Until recently when he first adopted a written language, art was the Eskimo's most important means of communication. In his art as in all facets of his life, the fight for survival in a harsh and barren land has been his primary concern. "Togetherness," essential to survival, as well as the hunt, the thrill, the spirit world, birth and death are naturally dominant art themes. Through his art he has also preserved his rich heritage expressed through fantasy, folklore and mythology. But the Eskimo does not recognize the art or artist as being apart and he has no word for them in his language. In the Eskimo's fight for survival, "A man should do all things properly."

In the past the Eskimo carved to charm the spirits, but he is increasingly carving to charm those living in the "The Eskimo," explains an Eskimo art collector, "is offering us an opportunity to know him better and we, perhaps, offer a chance for an easier life."

At The McMichael Canadian Collection you can see how the Eskimo's fight with a hostile environment is revealed through his art.

Motor Accident Victims Have Responsibilities

By PETER GOODSPEED

The red throb of the police cruiser's roof lights casts a grotesque shadow across the twisted steel and the shards of glass that litter the intersection.

A policeman, hunched over a measuring tape on the northwest street corner, is busy calculating the width of the road, the length of the skid marks and the exact position of the cars. The two drivers and the people who saw the accident occur are grouped together on the southeast corner waiting to tell the constable what happened.

The scene is a familiar one in Belleville. Each year there are more than 1,000 motor vehicle accidents in the city.

Accurate figures for 1973 are not yet available, but in 1972 the Belleville police were called on to investigate 1,076 accidents. Four of those were fatal accidents; 734 were injury accidents and 819 caused more than $200 worth of damage.

Despite the fact that automobile accidents are a common occurrence in a city the size of Belleville, they continue to confuse and frighten people.

Apart from the terror engendered by the tearing of metal and the sense of imminent danger, an automobile accident thrusts most people into a situation where they are uncertain of the duties and responsibilities they have.

Most people realize that they are required, by law, to notify the police of an accident. Other than that, - - however, they are usually uncertain of what they should do when the police arrive and what responsibilities the police have when investigating an accident.

Belleville police inspector, Ralph Blatchford explained that, under the Highway Traffic Act, a driver or an occupant of a car involved in an accident has at least three basic duties to fulfill.

"Anyone who is in charge of a motor vehicle that is directly or indirectly involved in an accident that results in personal injury or damage that apparently exceeds $200, must report the accident to the nearest police station," the inspector said. However, if a driver is physically incapable of making the report, an occupant of the car is required to report the accident.

"Once the accident has been reported, the person in charge of the vehicle must remain at or return immediately to the accident scene and furnish the investigating officer with the information he requires to complete his report for the Registrar of Motor Vehicles, in Toronto. Then, if a driver is asked to do so, he must supply the police, witnesses or anyone who sustained loss or injury as a result of the accident with a written list that contains his name, address and licence number and the name and address of the registered owner of his car."

The policeman's duties following an accident are somewhat more detailed. He is responsible for the care of the injured, protection of the accident scene the preservation and collection of evidence and the clearing of the roadway for the resumption of traffic. If there is a fatality arising from the accident, then the police must summon a coroner to the scene.

After the police officer has identified the persons involved in the accident, taken statements from witnesses and made his measurements, he must complete an accident report that is sent to both the Ontario Ministry of Transportation and Communications and the municipal engineer's offices.

In cases where more than five serious accidents happen at one location in a year, the municipal engineers and the ministry of transport officials usually review the traffic situation in the area with a view to changing traffic patterns by installing stop lights or lowering the speed limit.

Normally the police must complete their accident reports within 10 days of an accident. In the case of a fatal accident, however, the report must be forwarded to the Registrar of Motor Vehicles as soon as the investi-

Inspector Blatchford has just two tips for people who have been involved in a car accident — if it is at all possible, don't move a car after an accident until the police have arrived, and take notes of what you saw happen as soon as you can after the accident.

If a charge is laid after an accident, an independent witness, a passenger or one of the drivers may be called upon to give evidence in court.

Sometimes there may be a one or three-month gap between the time an accident occurred and the time a case comes to court. In those civil cases the time lag may be as much as two years. No matter how good a person's memory is, he could easily forget some important details over that length of time.

That's making notes of what you saw during an accident, you can then use them to refresh your memory before you go to court. If the notes were taken immediately after the accident, you can, with the permission of the judge, refer to them while giving evidence.

On the points of moving your car after an accident, Inspector Blatchford underlined the importance of preserving evidence that could be of use in either a criminal or civil trial.

"In the case of a serious accident, the people involved shouldn't move their cars until the police arrive," the inspector said. "Once the vehicles have been moved, there is no way they can be put back just the way they were — and the value of that evidence is gone.

"Now, if there is any danger involved in leaving the cars where they were, or if the accident is just a minor fender-bender and the cars are unduly holding up traffic, they should be moved. But in other cases, it's best to remember that the police are the people who are responsible for getting the traffic moving."

Jan Rubes Gets New Post

TORONTO—Montague Larkin, President of the Canadian Opera Association and Harrison Delgers Torel, General Director of the Canadian Opera Company, have announced appointments of Jan Rubes, widely-acclaimed Canadian opera singer, stage director, actor, producer, educator and television personality, as Dictor of Touring and Program Development for the Canadian Opera.

"Artistic-organizations always benefit from an infusion of new ideas," said Mr. Larkin in making the announcement, "the Canadian Opera is acutely conscious of the need to continually revitalize its touring operation, and we feel it is important, at this stage in our development, to give to it the greatest artistic attention possible.

"There exists at present a vast, largely untapped audience for opera in the smaller Canadian communities. Because of the Canadian Opera's artistic resources and reputation, it is obvious for the Company to grasp the initiative in exploring new horizons if we are to become a 'national' enterprise in the best sense of the word. The emergence of the Touring Office of the Canada Council has served to highlight this in our communities."

Mr. Rubes, who takes up the new appointment position in April, will be responsible not only for the artistic planning of the Canadian Opera's touring programs(he will stage the 1974-75 touring production of La Boheme) but also the development and execution of specific projects outside of the annual Toronto season at Massey Hall. These projects, focused on audience development, will include a reexamination of live opera activities in Ontario schools. Mr. Rube's own show STAB (for soprano, tenor, alto and bass) is scheduled to tour grades 7 and 8 in the Metro Toronto area this season.

"I am thrilled that Mr. Rubes will be joining the company on a permanent basis," said Mr. Torel. "We have had a close and happy relationship over the years and I know he will make a tremendous contribution to our organization."

A member of the Canadian Opera since its inception -- he is approaching his 1,000th performance with the Company -- Mr. Rubes is currently dividing his schedule between performances in the Canadian Opera tour of Cosi fan tutte and the Michigan Opera production of The Merry Widow. A leading bass with a repertoire of over 98 roles to his credit, Mr. Rubes his opera and concert career has spanned a period of 25 years.

Your Horoscope

By Bernice Bede Osol
Saturday, Feb. 2

Aries (March 21-April 19) One you know who is in a position to help you with a big issue is now in accord with your thinking. Get together today.

Taurus (April 20-May 20) You're under exceptionally good financial aspects. Concentrate on any situation that could befriend the basic economy.

Gemini (May 21-June 20) Over the next few days don't be the initiative slip from you. Be aggressive in going after what you want.

Cancer (June 21-July 22) Your most important dealings at this time have a better chance of succeeding if you keep what you're doing confidential.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22) Someone you'll be meeting through your mate or partner is a person worth getting to know better. Further the acquaintance if you can.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Situations that contribute to your stable or prestige look very favorable for you at this time. Expand upon new opportunity.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Your ideas carry a lot of authority today. Others will respond accordingly. Plans you've mulled now will prove of value.

Scorpio (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Family situations with business or commercial overtones will be very rewarding at this time. You may be getting something new for the home.

Sagittarius (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) You're especially favored in dealings conducted on a one-to-one basis. Good time for any partnership matters.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Special as much time with your family over the weekend as possible. This is where you'll find your most contentment and pleasure.

No Need to Worry If Colon Fallen

By G. C. THOMPSON, MD

Dear Dr. Thompson: My doctor has told me that after taking X-rays of my abdomen, that the colon has fallen down. How serious is this and how can it be corrected? I am a cottage keeper and hope to become a doctor.—E.E.

Actually this is not an uncommon finding. It is called prolapse of the colon—part of it has sagged lower than normal.

Years ago much was made of this condition as a "cause of constipation," abdominal distress, discomfort, or other symptoms which today are found to be caused not by the ptosis but rather by some unrelated condition such as irritable or unstable colon.

In a word, ptosis of the colon is found quite commonly in folks who are slender or on the lean side, but there isn't anything to do about it, nor any need to do anything.

If you have no discomfort, pain, or other symptoms of discomfort, look for some other cause.

Dear Dr. Thompson: Is it possible for a spanking to cause constipation? We have three sisters but only the eldest (15) has constipated for two or three days afterwards; My wife says she is trying to discipline them with us, but I thought constipation was a digestive problem. My wife spanks her with a ruler or her bare bottom, but it is never severe. It's mostly her pride that is hurt.—H.R.P.

Of course it's her pride that is hurt, and seething resentment (as with other strong emotions) can have a physical counterpart of one kind or another. With her, evidently constipation is the physical manifestation.

But the important thing is that spanking on the bare bottom is not an acceptable way of disciplining a girl of 15, and my advice is that you give some serious thought to stopping the spanking forthwith. Besides the problem in a more mature way

Note to S.R.: Yes, it is still possible for breast feed after having silicone implants inserted under the breast. The implants are placed under the tissues which contain the milk glands

Stricter Rules Ahead For Drinking Drivers

HALIFAX (CP) — Stricter regulations against drinking drivers will come only as a result of co-operation from officials of the Nova Scotia registry of motor vehicles says.

Leo LeFort, senior inspector of driver qualifications, said in an interview that if the public will help keep rules and laws tough enough, "they'll get them."

Mr. LeFort said the worst hazard on the highway as far as the accident rate is concerned is the drinking driver. The drunk driver is an area "where we're not being strict enough."

The courts should use their authority to impose harsher fines on impaired drivers and speeders, he said.

The province would also like to see a maximum driving age set and compulsory re-examination for persons "who have never gone through contemporary driving tests."

Re-examining drivers every 10 years might help detect poor ones.

"The public thinks that driving tests are too stringent. As far as we're concerned, they're not."

Persons in the 25-to-34 age group had the best results in testing while persons over 65 had the worst.

Meanwhile, RCMP Staff Sgt. T. C. Smith, traffic supervisor for Nova Scotia where the RCMP are the provincial police, said the breath analyzer was a greater deterrent to drunken driving when it was introduced than it is now.

Staff Sgt. Smith said motorists have become accustomed to the analyzer and many feel they can either beat it or still be over the limit.

fences have people thinking their chances of beating it or never getting caught have increased.

"Enforcement and the courts have to work hand in hand if any law is to be effective. We can only detect and arrest drivers breaking the law. But if the penalty doesn't deter, the detection certainly won't."

The biggest weakness in the breath test in terms of enforcement, he said, is that police are given powers to test a driver only on "reasonable and probable" grounds—evidence of impaired or erratic driving.

If police could check a person's driving at any time, the breath law would have greater effect, he said.

There is something wrong when "we can stop a vehicle to see if it has a brake defect but cannot do so to see if the driver is defective."

BIRTHS

FREEMAN — Duane and Donna (nee Bird) are pleased to announce the birth of their daughter Tracy Lynn on Jan. 30th, 1974.

MOULSTON — Mr. Peter and Gay (nee Bird) announce a brother for Jenna (Sarah) David, born 5 p.m. on February 24th, 1974 at Belleville General Hospital.

SCOTT — Paul and Carolyn (nee Shorey) announce the arrival of their second son, Christopher Scott, on Tuesday, January 30, 1974, at 10:30 p.m. Weight 8 lbs. 4 ozs. Grandparents are Mr. and Mrs. Ross Shorey, Frankford and Mr. and Mrs. Jack Scott, Shorey, Belleville.

JOHNSTON — In loving memory of our dear mother, Ellen Elizabeth Johnston who passed away on January 31, 1972.
Always remembered by her family.
By Floyd, Darlene and Shirley. P14

IN MEMORIAM

REES — In loving memory of Ralph Ernest Rees who passed away Feb. 1st, 1965.
Although we smile and make no sign,
No one misses him more than us.
And when old times we oft recall,
That's when we miss him most of all.

MILTON — In loving memory of a dear husband and father, Donald Harry Milton who passed away two years ago today, February 1st, 1972.
Death, oh, dear father, your labors are o'er,
Your willing hands will toil no more.
We found it hard but God knows best,
Sadly missed by wife and daughter Mildred and Myrna.

BENNETT — In loving memory of our dear husband and father, Percy Bennett who passed away one year ago, February 1, 1973.
Percy H. (Ben)
It tears a fond one aching,
It wrings the heart to know,
That memories alone are taken,
To you dearly so dear.
You fought so hard to stay,
But God in His infinite wisdom,
So peacefully free from back pain and sorrow.
Sadly missed by your dear son Jack.
To suffer that agony,
To remember, God dearly remembered by wife Edna.

ANSELSTINE — In loving memory of a dear brother who passed away Feb. 1, 1969.
There is not one hour of my heart,
That years won't take away,
A place in our hearts no one can fill,
As time you, dear, and always will.
Forever remembered by Ann Gilbert.

SHAW — In loving memory of a dear father, Percy Shaw, who passed away Feb. 1, 1969.
Dear Father, you left us a milestone,
Each year we look back and ponder,
And answer in our thinking,
We seem to hear you say,
Of wandering not yesterday,
Of worrying not and mistrust,
Just only remembered and missed by son Donn, daughter-in-law Pearl.

CARD OF THANKS

I would like to thank Drs. Donald and MacDonald, Dr. Nichols and Dr. Fitzsimmons, also nurses and staff of Trenton Memorial Hospital for their kindness and attention paid to me during my stay there. I would also like to thank relatives and friends who sent me cards, gifts and fruit and for the many visits. Your kindness will always be remembered. Your sincerely appreciated. Mrs. Elsie Chernicke.
Elsie Blanche, R.R. 1, Consecon, Ont.

I would like to express my special thanks to my many friends for cards, gifts and visits while in the Belleville General Hospital.
Percy Reid.

Hit By Dog
DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Police are searching for a "brown, white and fuzzy" hound-dog suspect which knocked down a man and broke his leg. Eugene Bonner, 73, of Pittsburgh, told police a St. Bernard dog bowled him over "It's the first time I was ever hit by a dog," Bonner said.

Vieux Montreal Place of Wonder

MONTREAL (CP) — So much of it really is magic this place they call Old Montreal. The narrow streets, the buildings of dressed limestone exuding the passion and glamor of Venetian palaces, the twin spires of Notre Dame Church soaring above Place d'Armes, scene where the city first came to life.

The history books tell you that it was once the pulsing heart of a growing country that Vieux Montreal lived once long ago as a fur-trading centre and that here immigrants from Europe brought their hopes, their dreams and little else.

But Old Montreal is more than that.

It is a legacy moulded with the excitement and challenge of another age; a tapestry of the ancient and the grand, the elegant and the charming; a place of dreams where much of the heart and a good part of the soul of this country was born.

For roughly a mile and a half along the waterfront of the St. Lawrence River, the old city still exists, protected against ocean-going vessels discharging their wares at its doorstep and shielded from the north by the glistening metropolis which has supplanted it.

In 1956, Eric McLean, a Montreal newspaper man, purchased a decaying mansion in the old quarter's Rue Bonsecours dating from 1746, which had once been the home of rebel Louis Joseph Papineau. The house was restored and refurbished.

Mr. McLean was followed by a steady stream of writers, artists and craftsmen who began to buy or lease properties in the old section with the aim of making them.

In 1963, the Viger Commission was established to preserve the character of the old sector and Vieux Montreal was made an historic site.

The area, 19 blocks long and three to eight blocks wide is bounded by Berri Street to the east, McGill Street to the west, the St. Lawrence River to the south and Craig Street to the north.

For the visitor, a cursory stroll can take two hours or two days, down cobblestone streets too narrow for cars where carriages drew sedi-peters and merchants through the walled city of the 1800s.

Place d'Armes is perhaps Montreal's most historic square. Here, a reviling monument to Maisonneuve, who founded the city in 1642, gazes out at the proud neo-Gothic splendor of Notre Dame Church.

The 1829 church contains Le Gros Bourdon in its west tower. The bell weighs more than 13 tons and required 12 men to ring by hand.

Eighteenth-century warehouses have been converted into antique shops, restaurants, flats and saloons.

West of Notre Dame, the seminary of the Sulpician Fathers looks much as it did in 1685. Through the formidable iron gates, a small lane leads to a garden. The wooden clock over its entrance is considered to be the oldest of its kind in North America.

Bonsecours Church or, as it has been christened, the Sailor's Church, lies right on Rue St. Paul almost at the shoreline of the St. Lawrence. Built in 1771, the church has a walkway around its steeple from which the visitor can gaze at the port of Montreal.

It is near here too, west of Rue St. Paul, that Bonsecours Market was begun in 1845. Originally intended as a city hall, it served for a time as the parliament of the United Canadas.

The asphalt along Rue St. Paul has been stripped away to reveal the ancient cobblestones and gaslight lamps have been installed above grey bluestone sidewalks.

On the north side of the street, Basco's Hotel stands forlornly, as elegant as when it was built in 1836.

If you turn from here that Charles Dickens used to travel across the street to Theatre Royale where he lectured and read from his own works.

Across Place d'Armes is the domed head office of the Bank of Montreal. Founded in 1817 as Canada's first bank, the building once contained documents smuggled to the city by Jefferson Davis, president of the American Confederacy.

Along Rue Notre Dame and Rue St.-Pierre are numerous examples of early 19th century architecture.

The Old Court House, opened in 1858 and now abandoned, sits empty along Rue Notre Dame. Across the street, a restored house dating from the 1700s has been taken over as a home for the works of artists and craftsmen.

Here, a museum, the chateau has had many tenants, among them the French governors of Montreal and the English governors of Canada.

Benjamin Franklin, as a delegate from the Continental Congress, also resided here for several months.

Place Jacques Cartier with its low benches, open spaces and flower beds radiates much of the spirit of the old city.

At twilight on a summer afternoon the cafes around the square overflow with people. In the terrace of the Nelson Hotel, a young guitarist cole will tell you why she stays in Montreal.

She will talk of destiny and dreams and being aware of the present and the past.

Simon Tibor, a painter of abstracts, came here in 1960 from Hungary. He bought a converted warehouse on Rue St. Paul, stripped away the plaster walls, and laid bare the original brick and huge ceiling beams.

There is a coldness to this place which makes it appealing," he says. "This house has warmth to it and structure. There's a kind of freeform atmosphere in the wood and the stone and the space."

And yes . . . it has art."

Yoordine Sadies in Rue du Port have traditional oeil de boeuf or bull's-eye windows. Iron hooks hanging on other buildings hold shell-shaped blinds closed at night to protect the inhabitants from the evils of night air.

If distance lends enchantment and the legends and fairytales of the past teach us something about ourselves, then Old Montreal is a place of wonder.

Canadians In 23,614 Cemeteries

OTTAWA (CP) — In 71 countries the names of Canadians killed in two world wars "liveth ever more."

The Canadians lie with Commonwealth soldiers in 23,614 burial grounds around the world tended for the most part by the Commonwealth War Graves Commission, of which Canada is a member.

The recently-released 1972-73 annual report of the commission shows that 1,095,158 servicemen are buried or commemorated in these cemeteries. They include 44,154 Canadians killed in the First World War and 36,558 in the Second.

The report records the work of the commission in keeping cemeteries in shape. It deals with horticultural problems in some areas, vandalism in others and co-operation by national authorities in most.

It tells of the planting of trees to hold back desert sands and the testing of a new lawn mower. It shows that Communist countries tend Commonwealth graves with careful attention, as do British textile graves for Germans and German graves for Commonwealth troops.

Egypt would not permit inspection of Commonwealth graves in the Suez canal zone "all assurances to the contrary they are being cared for."

The report describes the principles of the commission as follows: "That each of the dead should be commemorated individually by name either on the headstone on the grave, or by an inscription on a memorial; that headstones and memorials should be permanent; that the headstones should be uniform and that there should be no distinction made on account of military or civil rank."

All headstones are two feet, eight inches in height.

Where climate permits the headstones stand in narrow borders, where polyanthus roses and small perennials grow, in a setting of lawn trees and shrubs.

"Two monuments are common to the cemeteries—the Cross of Sacrifice set upon an octagonal base and bearing a bronze sword upon its shaft, and, in the larger cemeteries, the Stone of Remembrance, having carved upon it the words of the Book of Wisdom: Their name liveth for evermore."

Settled In Country

TOKYO (AP) — More than eight million educated young people have left Chinese cities and towns during the past five years to settle in rural areas, Peking's official Hsinhua news agency said.

Spirit of Old Montreal

Fins Used To Propel Vessel

BRONTE, Ont. (CP) — A police patrol launch intercepted a stranger silently moving in the middle of Lake Ontario one dark morning and police were baffled to see it move without a sound.

With seven eight feet high, the unidentified, flapping vessel caused apprehension.

Police turned on the lights on the craft and began hailing it to ask whether anyone aboard had been invited.

Police found his answer even more mysterious. Until they learned that the vessel was the Gasseita I, a 34-foot boat propelled by wave power harnessed by means of six fish-like fins below the water line.

The inventor, now 62 miles east on Lake Ontario on his way to Rochester from Toronto, near his home town of Oakville, when the incident occurred.

In an interview later, Mr. Gasse talked about his brainchild, which has been patented in the United States and inspected by government officials from Ottawa.

"My invention could apply to any type of craft from ocean liners and tankers to small pleasure boats. With the former, the fins can be used as an adjunct to engine power. They are also much more effective than the customary stabilizers used on passenger ships."

Mr. Gasse is also a sculptor whose works are promoted in Canada, the United States and Europe.

His interest in flying devices, long before aviation became a common form of transport, has reinforced the parallel between his career and that of da Vinci.

After two years of obscurity and attempts to finance his "wave power" invention, he feels success is getting near er.

"Gasseitas would also be an aid to smaller craft, added, but all worries about the wind falling or engine breakdown. Although an ocean is preferable because of the constant swell, there is nearly always enough activity on inland waters to allow progress.

"Add to that the freedom from noise and pollution and you can see why I feel this is an invention suited totally for our particular times."

He described how the idea for his gasseita came to him as he observed closely the movements of fish.

"By watching fish very closely, I noticed that their fins move up and down, creating a pressure which propels them bodies forward. Also, I found that waves do not move laterally as one might think by casual observation, but up and down.

"Now if a boat had aerodynamically designed fins, the upward and downward pressure of the waves should be enough to propel it forward. That was my theory and I could not wait to test it."

With two of his four sons acting as wave-makers, he successfully tested a small-scale model and then built the prototype.

"Given a sponsor, I'm willing to cross the Atlantic in my boat to prove its feasibility," he said. "I am confident it will stand up in the roughest water."

Computer Dispenses Drugs

SASKATOON (CP) — A computerized drug distribution system for use by hospitals is being developed at the University of Saskatchewan.

A university spokesman says the system, being marketed by an American company, is within the financial reach of most hospitals.

The spokesman explained that the system is based on unit dosage. Hospital pharmacists provide all drugs in packaged, single doses ready to be administered to patients.

The computer stores drug orders and provides information for the control, preparation and administration of all medication.

A complete drug profile on each patient is provided by the computer, including previous and current orders and information on special conditions such as allergies.

Patient billing and inventory control are also handled by a computer.

Mouthful of Fun

Sometimes getting up early on a Saturday morning pays off. Those taking part in this morning's Winter Carnival Pancake Breakfast at the Legion Hall found that out. Six-year-old Teddy Flunder obviously enjoyed his pancakes and syrup, a feeling shared by the many who attended the breakfast put on by the Club Alouette. The event was the kick-off to a full weekend of Winter Carnival activities in the city.

34 Dead in Single Bathroom

Toll in Sao Paulo Fire Soars to Near 200 Dead

SAO PAULO (CP) — The death toll in the worst fire in the history of the Brazilian city stood at 181 today and officials feared it may reach the 200 mark. Forty-three persons died when they jumped from the 25-metre bank building in an attempt to escape the flames.

The air-conditioning system was being installed on the 12th floor of the modern building when the fire broke out early Friday. Flames spread quickly, feeding on flammable plastic materials used for construction. The office building was completed only last year.

More than 200 persons were injured.

About 1,000 employees work in the building but bank officials said only 40 to 500 were already at their jobs when the fire broke out.

Officials said 34 of the victims were found dead in a single bathroom. A volunteer rescue worker said he found eight other women in another bathroom. Most other victims were bank employees.

A number of officials criticized the new building's safety features and said the fire department's resources were inadequate. The building had no fire escape and rescue ladders could not reach the top 10 floors of the structure.

People trapped above the fire ladders tried to lower themselves on sheets. One person fell to a ladder, knocking two firemen off. All three were killed.

Helicopters were prevented from landing on the roof of the building because of the intense heat and smoke. But after the flames and smoke died down a Brazilian air force helicopter plucked more than 80 survivors from the roof in a series of landings.

Earlier people on one roof waved frantically to five smaller helicopters which were unable to land. Others waited for help to open windows and balconies as flames engulfed the building.

The bank, one of the largest investment banks in Brazil, rents the first floor and the top 15 floors of the building. A parking garage occupies the floors in between.

The fire was believed to be the city's worst and one of the most destructive in Brazilian history. A circus tent fire in 1951 took the lives of 320 persons, most of them children.

Heath Thought Hunting Face-saving Formula

LONDON (CP) — The attention of troubled Britain is centred on events set for next week which may provide Prime Minister Heath with one of his finest hours or some of his darkest days.

The most crucial moments are likely to come when Heath sits down for an 11th-hour meeting with trade union leaders and management representatives to search for a peace-without-honor formula in the bitter coal mines.

The outcome, if successful, might ease the lights going on again in fuel-hungry Britain and industry rapidly returning to a full five-day week from the three-day limit now in effect.

But if there is no agreement, there seems little alternative to more power rationing, spreading bankruptcies, growing unemployment and perhaps, finally, a crucial general election.

The first vital fact to emerge at the start of the week will be the result of a strike ballot among the 270,000 coal miners, for by then three-month slowdown has left the country perilously low on fuel supplies.

Heath apparently believes a "yes" vote is inevitable and rather than risk a confrontation, he invited leaders of the Trades Union Congress (TUC), the umbrella organization of British unions, and industrial leaders to meet in No. 10 Downing Street, offices early in the week.

Many observers believe the prime minister is gradually abandoning the tough, no-surrender line he originally took against the coal miners and now is hastily searching for a face-saving formula that will give them more money without seeming to breach the government's statutory prices and incomes controls.

U.S. Energy Chief Wm. Simon Defends Canadian Oil Tax

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Energy Minister Donald Macdonald won support Friday from the top United States energy official for Canada's newly increased export tax on crude oil.

U.S. energy chief William Simon, speaking at the close of talks in Washington, defended the Canadian tax policy and disclosed there is a sharp split on the issue between his office and the state department.

He told a reporter he favored a small reduction in the $2.40-a-barrel tax, but said he disagreed violently with the state department which maintained the tax was unjustifiable.

Meanwhile, Mr. Macdonald told a U.S. television audience that Canada is not gouging American oil consumers. He said Canada is merely recovering through the tax the cost of importing oil from other suppliers, chiefly Venezuela.

He also predicted the tax will end March 31 but will be replaced in some other form, probably similar in size.

The two senior government representatives said they agreed to propose "a treaty or other international arrangement" to guarantee trans-border pipeline rights.

They agreed Thursday to a series of meetings between their officials to help resolve energy-supply problems and to discuss long-range policies dealing with pipelines, exports, reserves and research.

However, Mr. Macdonald said he rejected U.S. feelers for the development of a Canada-U.S. continental policy.

He also cooled U.S. enthusiasm for a crash program to develop the Athabasca oil sands, arguing that the huge investment required might distort the Canadian economy.

Heavy capital imports would "drive up the value of the Canadian dollar and disturb the competitive position of other areas of Canadian industry," the energy minister said.

He added that unless dramatic new energy discoveries are made in Canada, a gradual lowering of Canadian exports will develop as Canadian domestic needs increase.

Mansfield Opposes Rush

WASHINGTON (AP) — In the official Democratic response to President Nixon, Senator Mike Mansfield has rejected Nixon's call for a fast wind-up to Watergate investigations. He said the Senate Watergate committee may have to stay in business past its Feb. 28 deadline to avoid jeopardizing Watergate trials. "Whether it be months or years, there are no judicial shortcuts," the Senate Democratic leader said.

Quick Solution Unlikely

WASHINGTON (AP) — Top administration energy officials have expressed doubts the United States can "break the back of the energy crisis" in 1974 as President Nixon vowed in his State of the Union message. John Love, deputy administrator of the Federal Energy Office, said Friday the United States will continue to suffer shortages of fuel oils and possibly gasoline for two or three years, even if the Arab oil embargo is lifted.

Train Robber Caught

RIO DE JANEIRO (CP) — Federal police today confirmed a report by Scotland Yard that one of Britain's Great Train Robbers has been captured in Brazil. Earlier they denied it. A police spokesman said Ronald Biggs was arrested Friday in his hotel room overlooking Copacabana Beach.

Fifty Cars Damaged

MONTREAL (CP) — More than 50 cars were damaged and five men were arrested Friday at the United Aircraft of Canada Ltd. plant in suburban Longueuil, across the St. Lawrence River from here. A spokesman said strikers battered cars with baseball bats, bricks and concrete blocks as non-union employees tried to drive to work for the day shift.

Chocolates Tainted

OTTAWA (CP) — The health department has ordered withdrawal from the market of Regent brand milk chocolate balls. The candy has been found by the health protection branch to be contaminated with a rare micro-organism which has caused several cases of gastro-intestinal illnesses in Canada and United States, the department said in a news release Friday.

Conciliation Sought

OTTAWA (CP) — The Canadian Air Traffic Control Association CATCA, which represents 2,000 air traffic controllers, applied Friday for appointment of a conciliation board in its contract dispute with the Treasury Board. G. J. Williams, CATCA managing director, said talks have reached an impasse on five major issues ranging from pay to hours of work.

TORONTO (CP) — Fearing that the Ontario education ministry is about to usurp the rights of local school boards to negotiate with teachers, about 100 trustees are meeting here today to consolidate their opposition.

A two-day conference of the Ontario School Trustees' Council (OSTC) assembled delegates from about 145 school boards Friday to oppose Bill 275—proposed legislation on bargaining procedures with teachers.

Demands for the right of management to bargain directly with teacher-employees dominated the first session, amid exhortations for trustee solidarity to counter teacher militancy.

In a keynote address, OSTC chairman Gerard Barbeau of Sudbury outlined the basic differences trustees have whether to reject completely or suggest revisions to the "unacceptable" Bill 275.

Tabled in December by Education Minister Thomas Wells, the bill establishes the supremacy of province-wide regulated arbitration procedures in teacher contract disputes—a supremacy that trustees fear will remove local control from schools.

Mr. Barbeau noted that trustee opposition to the bill comes, ironically, after militant protest by the province's 105,000 teachers who object to it for altogether different reasons.

By virtue of elected office, trustees should have control over educational policy, he said. The right of trustees would be usurped by arbitrators under the new legislation.

In months of negotiations Mr. Wells has not heeded trustees' complaints that the bill is a contravention of democratic rights of elected officials, Mr. Barbeau added.

"We all know that if Bill 275 becomes law, it will mean the complete takeover of bargaining by the provincial government," he said. "The trustee's voice in determining the nature of local education will be silenced."

Teachers oppose the bill because it implies—but does not specifically state—that they have no right to go on strike. Trustees should oppose it because they say it destroys the autonomy of local boards.

The conference was told that the OSTC is limited in making its view known by its budget of $200,000 a year; a small fraction of the $3-million fund at the disposal of the Ontario Teachers Federation (OTF).

Dr. Peter Bargen, executive secretary of the OSTC, announced the current "strike section" by teachers in several areas of the province and set forth plans for "a new bail game" of trustee activism.

The gloom of Bill 275 "hanging over our heads" must be dispelled by strong countermeasures to guarantee the rights of management over teacher-employees, he said.

Today's plenary session will be asked to rule on a tough plan of action including demands that provincial legislation be changed to make teacher membership in OTF voluntary, not compulsory as at present.

School boards should reconsider the "check-off dues" service that it performs for teacher federations, he suggested. The conference should also consider the removal of teacher tenure and sabbatical leaves.

The "new ball game" would also seek principals prohibited from taking part on behalf of teachers in local bargaining units and would also seek to remove current restrictions on the length of the school year, he added.

—Another proposal calls for replacing the present system of individual contracts between teachers and their board by a collective agreement covering all employees.

During a question period, Bill Priestner, chairman of the Halton County board of education, asked the conference to con-

Teachers' Leader Praises Minister

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

As 1,175 teachers in three school districts resigned en masse Friday, the president of the Ontario English Catholic Teachers Association praised provincial Education Minister Thomas Wells for the "good job" he had done in aiding teachers' negotiations across the province.

Bob Cooney said: "He deserves some of the credit for the fact that nearly all separate school teachers are in school."Thirteen of the 1,188 local separate school and public high school districts in dispute in December have reached settlements.

The resignations involve 667 public high school teachers in York County, 361 separate school teachers in Essex County and 147 separate school teachers in Huron-Perth district. The walkout affects about 40,000 students.

In Essex County, a tentative agreement was reached Friday, but has to be ratified by teachers from walking out but a teacher spokesman said they would likely return to classes Monday.

Mr. Wells sent telegrams to the boards of education in the three areas Friday urging them to continue bargaining. He said the provincial cabinet will meet Monday to "assess the situation."

Bert Lawrence Worried About Pickering Airport

TORONTO (CP) — At least one senior Ontario cabinet minister is uneasy about the federal proposal to build a new international airport at Pickering, 30 miles east of Toronto.

A. B. R. Lawrence, resources development secretary under whose general policy field such an airport would come, recently returned from Britain where proposals for a third super-airport to serve London have been a subject of controversy for several years.

He saw many similarities there to what is happening at Pickering, and it left him with a sense of awe at the complexity and impact of such a project.

"Personally, I didn't come back converted to one side or the other of the controversy over Pickering," Mr. Lawrence said in an interview.

"I haven't flipped over," he said, an obvious reference to critics who claim a second airport here is not needed, that it would harm the environment and absorb prime agricultural land. Opposition parties in the legislature have been clamoring for the province to pressure Ottawa to abandon Pickering.

Energy Czars Meet

In Ontario, both the provincial and federal governments are involved but the British government has the sole jurisdiction in deciding on the superport, planned for Maplin Sands, about 30 miles east of London on the North Sea.

Mr. Lawrence feels the province has gone far as it can go, constitutionally, in assuming a planning role for serving the land, particularly with such facilities as roads, sewers, public transit.

"But as a politician and a Progressive Conservative I think there's a lot of room for action among the federal Tories to . . . help them do it," he said, indicating strongly that if the Pickering airport is to be altered or abandoned it will only come through pressure from opposition parties in the House of Commons.

Mr. Lawrence clings to the constitutional fact that the Pickering decision is primarily Ottawa's and not the provincial government.

"So I think you have to be uneasy since Pickering because the airport is such a tremendous undertaking. You're gambling millions of dollars and your knees (factors) are uncertain."

Three Left for UCS Director

At a special caucus meeting early in February, United Community Services directors are expected to choose one of three candidates for the job of UCS administrator.

The position, vacated as one with fewer responsibilities than that of an executive director, was vacated in July 1973 with the board's acceptance of Isidore Cooperman's resignation.

The controversial executive director offered his resignation after charging that, "a campaign of harassment and vilification" had been waged against him. At the same meeting he accepted his resignation, the board at his own motion the mechanism to find a replacement for its only paid professional staff member.

Now seven months after that meeting, Martin Hamelink, personnel committee chairman, has thinned out the numerous candidates for the job. He will be presenting what he considers the "top three" to board members Wednesday, Feb. 6.

As yet, only members of the personnel committee have interviewed the candidates. The entire board will have the opportunity to do so next week.

At that time, Mr. Hamelink is hoping the board will make a decision as to the best suited individual for the job.

Not all the candidates are local people. Mr. Hamelink said yesterday, but he refused to elaborate further. It is believed that one candidate, a woman, is from Belleville.

The board won't know who the candidates are, therefore, I'd like to play it close to the chest," he said.

Board members have repeatedly lavelled criticism at one another for making facts public without prior knowledge of the entire board. Mr. Hamelink refused to make such criticism, saying, "I haven't made a full report to the board for some time now."

Whether the three candidates will be present at the meeting with board members is not known. Letters calling for their attendance were sent last week, but difficulty in replies have been received.

The search for a paid professional to head UCS day-to-day operations has been a long and arduous one. Charged to look for a replacement in July, the personnel committee was forced to suspend operations three months later when board president, Wayne Wickson, disputed the UCS's need for such a replacement. A needs-study was called for an August.

At the time, Mr. Hamelink was close to presenting his recommendation to a full board meeting.

In December, the search was reactivated as a result of a motion, passed unanimously by directors under the strong urging of social planning chairman, Virginia O'Hearn.

At the time, she said, "If we don't hire someone within the next month, I'm seriously questioning the stability of this organization."

Trenton Bureau
Council Looks To the Future

By COLIN BRUCE

Trenton is emerging as a well-rounded, well-administered municipality. It's easy enough to sit and criticize municipal governments. It happens every day.

On the whole, town council here has taken some lengthy and steps in making the best of the resources of the area.

There have been lapses and bumblings but the general picture shows council as a concerned body, trying to keep pace with the ever-changing demands of the public.

In recent months Council has deliberated over a number of items that in themselves are of no consequence but combined work toward the promotion of the community.

Council is taking a real interest in the revealing of Highway 33, the highway traveller's route around the town. The roadway is a disease as it stands, looking for some frustrated grand prix driver's idea of the perfect balance of curve and combination.

The city is being cleaned up. The road straightened and modified and most importantly, overhead wires and services are being buried out of sight.

The Trent has the potential of being the most beautiful river in the area. Council is making a move to show it off by doing the Paul Burpee routine, felling the forest of poles that line the bank.

In a giant step, the town is updating its sewer system. A project expected to cost about $500,000 by the time it is completed.

Work and work on sewer lines will allow more development in town.

Possibly of even more consequence than the highway and sewer projects is the most recent handling of a grandiose greenbelt program for the town.

Inspired by the Lower Trent Region Conservation Authority, a conceptual plan has evolved depicting a bank-hide park running the length of the Trent as it flows through town.

We can never have enough green space.

Council still unaware of the ramifications of the project, is being represented in talks by the Board of Parks Management.

The first meeting was held this week, showing a strong feeling of inquisitiveness on both sides and the eagerness for co-operation.

Green space may not mean much to Trenton now, as it is lost in the midst of some of the finest green country in Ontario, but one day green space will be at a premium -- even for Trenton and the fabric area.

Council is attempting to apply good planning, tempered with local wishes, in order to accomplish what is proclaimed rejuvenation of the downtown, a major consideration and a complex package set of bylaws will be amended soon that will enforce the current planning principles for the town.

Crash, Then Lights Out

Police reported the accident occurred about 8:30 before 2.30 a.m. Linemen were still working at 8 a.m. to restore power.

The accident occurred when a northbound late model pickup driven by Samuel J. Colladine, 43, 332 Front Street, Belleville, left Highway 14 a short distance south of Springbrook, ripped out a mailbox and smashed through the pole, said police.

Why Let the Scenery Do All the Tourism Work?

By MARGARET HAYLOCK

Prince Edward's draft official plan has hamstrung the sacred cow "local tourism" with the observation that tourism comes from higher income groups do not visit the county.

The plan states that many of the local tourist establishments" suffer a general lack of commercial attractiveness" and the contribution of tourism as a source of direct income and employment in Prince Edward "has not sufficiently large."

The remark contained regarding tourism in the draft plan do seem to overlook the consistent efforts of some local resort operators to improve their facilities. No progress in the tourist industry is reported despite several significant forward steps recently.

Dining lounges at Inn-On-The-Bay and Rickarton Castle now fully licensed and both of these old castles have been renovated extensively.

The so-called "derogatory" comments of the draft official plan gain greater clarity as the reader considers the available tourist activities.

The county, dubbed in tourist brochures as "sleepy Prince Edward" and "scenic Prince Edward", abounds in natural vistas. There is Lake On-The-Mountain, the Sandbanks, Outlet Provincial Park, Salmon Point and Consecon among the most spectacular.

A paradise for the outdoorsman, the county is crossed by the Quinte Trail and boasts additional hiking routes at the provincial parks and in conservation areas.

He cannot catch a movie, go dancing on a whim, spend an evening bar bopping or tour a shopping district.

Neither can he find a parking space on Main Street or a public washroom.

The vacationer seeking to get away from it all will enjoy his holiday in Prince Edward. The "high income" tourist mentioned in the draft official plan could suffocate in pastoral peace if he is tuned to an urban society.

Prince Edward County would gain little in attempting to be what it is not. A quiet, rural community cannot blame with neon lights after five to wor

Chairman Again

PICTON—Henry Leavens of Bloomfield has been re-elected chairman of the Prince Edward Region Conservation Authority for the sixth consecutive year.

Vice-chairman Donald Bond of South Marysburgh also was re-elected for the term ahead at the annual meeting of he PERCA held this week.

Chairman of finance is Jack Stenning, Chairman of land use is Donald Walker, Wildlife committee is headed by Clinton Green and water control by Roger Redner. Ross Benway was elected chairman of the information and education committee defraying incumbent George Hall.

Vestry Meets

MARMORA—At St. Paul's Anglican Church recent vestry meeting William Lavender was re-elected people's warden and Don Mullan accepted re-appointment as rector's warden for the coming year.

Mrs. Bernice Young was appointed Parish Central Treasurer. Mrs. Madeline Frost accepted the posts of vestry clerk and St. Paul's Church treasurer again. Mrs. John Apperly remains envelope secretary.

Lay delegates to Synod will be Mrs. Hazel Lavender and Mrs. Mr. and Mrs. John Don Mullan, with alternates Apperly.

The financial reports indicated a fairly successful year with Rev. Canon Staples, rector of St. John's Church at Stirling, attended part of the vestry meeting and explained what is done with the appointment of the church's budget which goes for Diocesan Outreach.

Chamber Meets

TRENTON — The Chamber of Commerce here will hold its annual meeting Saturday in the Trenton Country Club.

The meeting will include previous year's business, election of officers and a special tribute to a Trenton citizen.

I can, however, develop its resources to full potential to the benefit of varying on scenery to do all the work.

Marg Column Take 3 indent

Picton merchants last summer planned a shopper's festival complete with Bingo games, street dance and tug-of-war.

This type of promotion is needed on a larger scale to entertain visitors.

If street cances prove popular, perhaps they could be held more often during the summer. Local square dance groups might be asked to take part in a special hoedown.

Arrangements for outdoor band concerts could be considered as a summer attraction, Hopefully, Picton's one theatre will be reopened in the future to offer evening entertainment for residents and visitors.

Tennis was popular at Benson Park last season and seemed a residents noted that there was always a lineup for this sport. Additional courts might be introduced to permit more persons to participate in the sport, visitors included.

The responsibility of attracting tourists should not fall primarily to the merchants. Resort operators ought to be equally willing to expand their facilities whenever possible.

Fine scenery is a selling point for any community but visitors need activities to enjoy during their stay.

Perhaps Prince Edward can not lure the "high income" holidayers but it can offer a pleasant vacation in a progressive community.

The county's draft official plan has attempted to put tourism in its proper perspective and realistically has pointed out that the big spenders prefer to holiday in a different atmosphere!

Dental Health Plan Is Rolling

The public dental health program recently introduced into Hastings and Prince Edward counties schools is moving rapidly ahead, statistics given the area's health board Wednesday indicate.

The program was launched in September and examined about 20 per cent. of elementary students have been covered by a preliminary dental examination survey.

To the end of January, some 4,250 public school students had been surveyed. There are more than 20,000 elementary students in both counties. Two dentists work part-time on the survey.

Sunday Churchgoers Increase at Roslin

ROSLIN — Over-all church attendance for St. Paul's Anglican Church at Roslin was down slightly 1973, but regular Sunday church attendance showed an improvement.

This was shown in reports given at the annual vestry meeting of the church held recently at the church hall.

During the year there were 57 regular church services with an average attendance of 61. Financial contributions for the year showed an improvement. There were two Lenten services and a Good Friday Easter pageant was staged.

The report of the Anglican Church Women was given by Mrs. A. Bates with Mrs. M. Gray gave the Sunday School report.

Total contributions were up $1,000 over the year previous when the parish expenses was up $300. The church minister will receive $600 salary increase.

During January, church members held a compliance of the energy shortage and held services in the church hall to cut heating expenses.

The annual cemetery board meeting was held in November with Arnold Barker rebired as cemetery caretaker.

Early in December officers of the whole parish -- Tweed, Roslin and Moneymore -- met. It was decided to paint the rectory exterior in 1974.

St. Paul's church officers for this year are: Rector, Rev. Virgil Earle; Wardens - Ted Wilson and Albert Alford; parish treasurer - Everett Geen; Rolls treasurer - Phyllis Sills; envelope secretary - - - Annie Bates, Vestry Clerk - Earl Gray; delegate to the Synod - - Thelma Goodfellow; organist, Audrey Hodge; assistant organist, Marjorie Gray; caretaker, Alex Pudy.

CJBQ Plans Bancroft Transmitter

CJBQ Radio, Belleville, is planning to provide broadcast facilities in the Town of Hastings Bancroft region.

An application to the Canadian Radio-Television Commission is being prepared to install a 1000 watt transmitter in Bancroft which will operate at 1240 on the dial.

With the addition of this new outlet, CJBQ will be providing local and national service to all of Hastings County.

QUINTE COUNTRY

Our Heritage Antiques Being 'Picked Clean'

By COLIN BRUCE

CARRYING PLACE—Soaring prices are the consequences of a rush on Canadian antiques, in Quinte country.

Canadians — around 1967's Centennial Year — began carrying on a love affair with their heritage. So says, one Carrying Place dealer who notes a movement back to the natural warmth and durability of early Canadian craft.

The statement is supported by other area dealers who have grown in numbers around the Quinte district in recent times, an increase paced by the demand in an area rich in pioneer heritage.

Scott Anderson, near Carrying Place, says "you can not buy the old estate. But because children are more interested in furniture, all you're getting are the left overs."

Quinte country was among the earliest scenes of enduring Ontario settlement, therefore a natural focus for heritage hunters.

Earlier household items, once a necessity to the early settlers way of life, have become treasured possessions, avidly sought after as the temporary interior design.

Some dealers have settled in recent times. Others are long established both as Quinte dwellers and collectors and distributors of antiques.

The established dealers are to be found in communities large and small and along the country roadways -- all rendezvous points for the seekers of heritage items.

Mrs. Markvart left England "some 14 years ago" and came in 1952 with her husband Frank, a 41-year association with Bata Shoe.

Until the mid 1950s "people couldn't see beneath the dirt when they looked at old furniture," she said.

Since then "there has been a renaissance of heritage Canadian furniture...driving prices up."

The Quinte area, still littered with dozens of estates for auction, has been "picked clean", she says.

"The Quinte area when she first arrived used to be a gold mine." Now the mine is being emptied because people are recognizing the treasures of value in old furniture -- particularly pine, which is ear-marked Canadian by most buyers, she says.

"The prices are becoming outrageous", she says. "Dealers are now going into the United States to buy back Canadian furnishings."

Mr. Anderson says the time of readily-accessible antiques is over. "Now the days are when you could get a pine table inexpensively."

Because the general public is becoming aware of heritage, "you're going to see a lot of dealers fall by the wayside."

Mr. Anderson, owner-operator of a sprawling shop south of Trenton on Highway 33 says he's thinking of getting out of antique dealing.

"People are asking a lot more for furniture, they're getting to recognize the value. They're getting a lot smarter."

Mrs. Markvart, says she will continue his re-finishing operation and says, "I don't know how a dealer can survive on sales of articles alone."

Area antique dealers have recognized a trend among young people who want solid wood rather than plywood and plastic, says Mrs. Markvart.

"Today's furniture is built to last 15 years. We're in the plastic age and its cold," says Mrs. Markvart.

According to her, the art of making furniture is lost. She sees the federal government taking steps to help get solid Canadian heritage back after "the Americans came here and stripped us bare."

Mortgages Unchanged

Purchasers of prime resale homes and new homes are generally quoted 10-10.25 per cent interest rate, reports A.E. LePage in its regular mortgage market report. Purchasers of older homes or those in less favored locations may expect to pay an extra .25 or .5 per cent.

Industrial and commercial mortgage interest rates remain unchanged at 10-10.5 per cent. Availability of funds is fair to good.

Apartments For Retarded Meeting Topic

The concept of apartment living for the mentally retarded will be presented to members of the Belleville and District Association for Retarded Children at their regular meeting Feb. 5. The meeting will be held at Bird's Hill Public School on Palmer Rd. at 8 p.m.

The film on apartments for the retarded will be shown by two representatives from the retardation unit in Kingston Psychiatric Hospital. They will be joined by D. E. Cardwell, co-ordinator of the behavioral science program at Loyalist College.

Snowmobilers Warned To Stay Off The Tracks

Don't drive your snowmobile on or near train tracks. By doing so you could face a stiff fine or worse, lose your life.

This is the message from CP Rail which this winter is carrying on a program to protect snowmobilers from heavy fines and from the danger along or near the company's rail lines.

CP Rail personnel are making weekend patrols along rail lines to prevent potentially dangerous trespassing by snowmobile operators on railway property.

Also, the railway is issuing warnings to snowmobile and sports clubs. These posters are a constant reminder of the potential dangers of snowmobiling along railway tracks and will be displayed in CP Rail stations in many areas across Canada.

During the winter of 1972-73 six snowmobilers died while travelling on or alongside railway tracks or while crossing them.

In most such accident cases, the operator was the victim of the snowmobile's engine drowned out all sound, and the driver's general awareness of his surroundings was temporarily lessened.

Hazards for the railway by snowmobilers operating their machines along the tracks are also created aside from the great personal danger to snowmobile enthusiasts.

Travelling in groups, the drivers illegally cross the rails and pack down the snow. Ice forming as a result can cause derailments. Also, snowmobiles following the railroad can accidentally slice the wires that control switches.

"Our inspectors will be continuing their efforts this winter to stop further trespassing on railway rights of way by snowmobilers," says Eric Lewis, sub-inspector for CP Rail's Investigation Bank.

"To protect snowmobilers from themselves, we will be forced to prosecute those found trespassing on railway property."

Section 359 of the Railway Act provides for a maximum $20 fine to trespassers on railway property. The Act also provides maximum $100 fines to operators of any motor vehicle on railway property without the railway's permission.

Canadiana

Canadiana takes a multitude of forms — aside from much-sought original pine furniture. Prized are items like Canadian silver, here being polished by Quinte antique dealer Irene Markvart. But the supply of heritage goods, now falls far behind the demand, say those in the trade in Quinte area.

Where Does It End?

Federal Government Spending: we have all heard about it. Those millions of dollars and then which Ottawa allots to us not with happy abandon and which it takes from the pockets of taxpayers.

Does the Government really care how it spends our money? Is there any real control over it? Does Finance Minister Turner have any control over it, beyond presenting a budget every so often? Is any real effort made to avoid wasteful spending, or spending on those many and varied shadow-world initiatives that invite so much controversy?

Like junk art outside Government buildings. There are those who say yes, they do understand such offerings, they enjoy it, it really is art, they say, and the rest of us are philistines. But is that really the issue? Can we really afford these and other flights of bureaucratic and political fancy when we are all living, as James Coyne said so eloquently a decade ago, "grandly beyond our means."

Can we afford also to fund those trips overseas for a couple of hundred students and bring a like number here?

Or pay for so-called refugees who actually are avowed Marxists to come to Canada from Chile and support them after their admittance to Canada, when there is many a potential immigrant overseas trying to gain admittance and who has no ambitions toward overthrowing established order here or anywhere else?

We wonder about these things at a time when we are all concerned about Government spending, but nothing is done to control it, not even in the wake of the annual revelations of the Auditor General.

This coming Monday Hastings MP Jack Ellis will be speaking on this very subject to the Rotary Club. He has had his own concerns in this realm, in connection with the Unemployment Insurance Commission rip-offs for instance.

It will be interesting to see if he has any answers to such questions as we have posed. And to the ultimate question, for whatever it is the ravages of inflation ultimately bring down upon an unsuspecting society?

Care of Dogs

We have commented on occasions on the way dogs are kept tied up for lengthy periods, left out in all kinds of weather, and generally treated in less than kindly fashion.

Of course the low says dogs cannot roam at will and therefore must be kept tied, but this leaves owners with a responsibility in providing the animals with necessary exercise.

All too often this is neglected, with the dog left alone and forlorn in some damp and joyless backyard — like one we saw recently in a street not far from downtown. It was a Sunday morning and who knows maybe the pooch gets an occasional weekend romp, but, ideally, a brisk walk with its owner is what is needed: the kind Belleville fireman Glen Emerson was pictured giving his long-lost beagle the other day.

In Britain there is greater awareness of this sort of thing. In Scotland there is concern even for badgers. A tunnel is being built under an expressway at a point where badgers cross regularly. It is in the interests of their safety, as well as that of motorists.

In Canada little creatures like this are killed in their hundreds on our roads every year. Sad, it is unavoidable for the most part, but nonetheless a sad aspect too of our mechanized world.

Price Down

It is pleasant to be able to report another price drop in at least one supermarket in town carrying imported biscuits. No it is not that 15-ounce pack mentioned recently but an 8-ounce offering from another manufacturer. From 41 cents it is down, incredibly, by more than half that amount, to 19 cents. Which goes to show that rip-offs are being made on many items most of the time.

Diplomatic Ripples

Peking Expels American Following Death of Chinese Girl

By JOHN D. HARBRON
Foreign Affairs Analyst
Thomson News Service

Expulsion of foreign diplomats and the invasion of an offshore island archipelago are two signs of unexpected belligerency from an otherwise quiescent Peoples Republic of China.

The diplomatic expulsions began with instructions for the immediate withdrawal of a young member of the U.S. diplomatic office who had unexpectedly killed a Chinese girl on a bicycle when she swerved in front of his car on the narrow and crowded road between Peking and the Great Wall.

Anyone who has travelled this approximately 60-mile route knows how tricky driving along it can be since hundreds of Chinese driving bicycles line each side of the road. In any case the killing of a Chinese by a foreigner is a most serious offence and privileges have been taken, if a surprise to the resident Americans.

China and the U.S. do not yet maintain diplomatic relations in the capitals but have opened so-called offices following the 1972 visit to Peking of President Nixon.

The expulsion of five members of the very large Soviet diplomatic mission in Peking, the largest there, was more understandable given the decade-long and deep-seated feuding that pots between China and Russia.

The Chinese Government officially claimed full knowledge of the Soviet diplomats' missions and activities but nevertheless said relations were comfortable, if a surprise to the resident Americans.

Arabs Fear Western Solidarity in Energy Crisis

By BRUCE LEVETT

WASHINGTON (CP) — Arab oil-producing countries are showing signs of concern that the big consuming countries may somehow become united in a protest against the huge oil price jump.

Observers here feel the first-est indication that the Arabs want to keep oil negotiations strictly on a bilateral basis was enunciated in Tokyo by Ahmed Zaki Yamani, oil minister for Saudi Arabia.

Yamani, on a world tour explaining Arab oil policies, specifically warned that President Nixon's Feb. 11 conference of oil-consuming countries may be an effort to block such traditional country-by-country deals and confront the Arabs with a united front.

Experts here feel that the Arabs, having witnessed the effectiveness of their own concerted action, are naturally wary of a similar banding by consumers.

As outlined by State Secretary Henry Kissinger, the Feb. 11 meeting may be a step toward multilateral agreement on buying selling, sharing and developing of the world's energy resources.

However, some commentators here feel the U.S. may be placing her prestige as a world leader on the line in calling the conference.

They point out that far from slowing firm inclination toward a united front, some Western countries hit hard by the oil crisis might have been driven to cool toward the proposal and are going ahead making their own deals.

Canada was one of the first countries to accept the Nixon invitation which also went to Japan, Britain, West Germany, France, Italy, Norway and the Netherlands.

Kissinger says the Feb. 11 meeting is intended as a prelude to further discussions with other oil-consuming countries, especially the less-developed nations.

In the cards, also, is a third meeting, to involve both consuming and producing countries.

Yamani told the Japanese he believes the purpose of such meetings is to block bilateral agreements, such as the one recently concluded with the Japanese.

If the meetings of the consumer countries are in the interests of co-operation with the producing countries, the producers can have no objection, Yamani said, but if they are intended to set up a confrontation, the talks are in for "serious trouble."

In the last few months, Western and Japanese interests have concluded $8 billion in contracts with the oil-producing countries for trade deals, installing nearly that much, are under negotiation.

It is against this background that the Feb. 11 conference is shaping up—the U.S. calling, broadly, for a world-wide pooling of research and development and a subsequent sharing of resources available to the individual nations, while interested in co-operating, feeling they must go ahead with what they have and make the best deals possible on their own.

France Decides to Let Its Currency Float

By KEVIN DOYLE
LONDON (CP) — France's decision to abandon a fixed exchange rate for its currency may prove to be the most effective and perhaps the least destructive course available to the French government in its efforts to deal with a growing balance-of-payments deficit.

The move, which prompted similar action by Spain, has nevertheless raised violent criticism since it poses a clear threat to the future of world trade unless the float is carefully managed.

In the first place, many observers tend to overlook the fact that the franc was floating under a rigid formula in relation to most major currencies long before the announcement that it was being set free altogether for at least six months.

French currency floated in a package with four other leading European currencies for more than a year, with its value pegged to theirs and with all five moving freely against the dollar, sterling, Japanese yen, Swiss francs and others.

What the French finance minister, Valery Giscard d'Estaing, decided was to withdraw his government's pledge to keep the franc's value constant within the European package—a decision taken by the British, Italians and Irish months ago—in order to let it float against all currencies and effectively devalue the franc by about 4.5 per cent.

France, like most countries in the nine-member European Common Market, faces a major payments imbalance this year as a result primarily of greatly increased oil costs.

Well aware of this, speculators jumped on the government's sure on francs by selling large amounts to buy dollars, which had been gaining strength as North America is among the areas least affected by the oil situation.

Most experts seem to agree that had France resorted to foreign exchange controls and imposed restrictions, this is the most obvious alternatives to devaluation—the consequences might be much more serious. The devaluation so far is relatively small and may just be enough to make support of the franc feasible.

Trade restrictions tend to similar action fairly quickly, raising the danger of a "trade war" such as the one which crippled international trade prosper-ity during the 1930s.

Devaluation, of course, can lick on the tiny but apparently oil-rich Paracel Islands 200 miles south of the big Chinese island of Hainan and about the same distance east of South Vietnam, who had occupied them.

Not since the 1962 Chinese invasion of northern Indian territories during the brief but bloody Indo-Chinese war of that Year had Peking reached out to occupy new territory.

China has claimed the islands for years as has South Vietnam. China also claims another group called the Spratly Islands where oil drilling is now under way.

This search for oil seems to be the only logical reason for the Chinese move at this time, although China is known to be more than oil-sufficient and is negotiating to sell very large amounts of it to oil-hungry Japan.

During the recent very friendly talks of Canadian and Australian prime ministers to China last October and November, prior to the government officials present found it hard to believe China, at the present time would seek a hard line or even a military solution to a peacetime problem.

This euphoric view often evolves during such high-level visits where the best in Chinese hospitality is genuinely offered toward nations with which Peking maintains new and increasingly close relations.

On the much larger scale of China's new, fitful after Chairman Mao, (81) and Premier Chou En-lai (76), have left the scene, no one can predict a peaceful passage. In 1966-67 the Cultural Revolution brought its own terror and violence. Including a reaction to resident foreigners not unlike that of the Boxer Rebellion at the turn of the century.

China's future political destiny remains very uncertain.

Hospitalized Americans' Praise for Belleville

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

During the past summer, Ken and Barbara Hanley of Buffalo were on their way to Montreal for their honeymoon. A few miles east of Belleville they had a car accident.

Luckily for them a nurse arrived; also a member of the St. John Ambulance Brigade and Thurlow Rescue unit. They were given first aid, made as comfortable as possible and reassured — until the ambulance arrived.

They were both badly injured and particularly Ken who had a fractured spine. At the time it was a problem in hospital receiving the best of care. My husband and I visited them daily and did our best to help through the difficult days.

When I went to "Queens Self Care", Barbara was my room mate and so we became very friendly. We both realized what Queens Self Care did to help both of us. It is a marvellous place to go when you are unable to return home — Please always let us have Queens Self Care — Belleville is lucky to have it.

During the Christmas Season we visited Buffalo, Buffalo friends and their relatives whom we had gotten to know and like very much during the time Ken and Barb were here.

Their return to Buffalo by ambulance Ken was admitted to hospital. The doctors were amazed at the wonderful work done here by Dr. Green, his staff and Queens Self Care unit. Ken had it happened in Buffalo, he would not have received the skilled work done on him, that he has had. They have just not or facilities to do what our Belleville doctors did.

While there, Ken told us, that when they return next summer on their way to a delayed honeymoon, he was definitely going to see Dr. Green to thank him personally. I tell him how lucky we Bellevillians are — they are so grateful.

EX-PATIENT

Three Rs

Brockville Recorder and Times

Leeds and Grenville board of education has been severely confronted with charges that today's children are graduating from high schools without a thorough knowledge of the three Rs.

Indeed one trustee, for some time, was insisting on an investigation of the education youngsters are getting today. What ever became of that idea?

In the same vein, parents and employers are concerned about the lack of ability on the part of many students in arithmetic as well as high school who can spell or write and then have trouble with simple arithmetic.

In Kingston recently a group of parents and teachers assembled to agree that the standards of writing and spelling levels must to be desired. Mr. Norman Bowman, director of education for District 26, Ontario Secondary School Teachers' Federation, addressed the high school department head, said he was appalled at some of the written material submitted to him. He said teachers try to correct the faults for which he blamed to some degree on audio visual education and television. It's a case of gaining more knowledge in the one hand through electronic teaching while losing ground on the basics.

One trustee felt concern over education today was directed, possibly, at the wrong generation. And it is a fact that many parents do not use the work of the school system. Parents need to do a lot more to educate their children than some of them do.

Regimental Badge Quest

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

I hope that you may be able to help me in a small way in your newspaper for my request please.

I have a very interesting hobby of collecting Regimental Badges. I do have a pretty fair collection up to date, with my main interests being the badges of the Canadian Armies — especially those worn in the militia, also the CEF badges of the 1914-18 War — I do have several gaps. These are in infantry, artillery, Railway Troops, the Forestry Corps, etc. Please help me with my problem. I have been collecting now since my demob. from the Royal Army Service Corps., in 1946. I did most of my service in the Middle East.

Fiery KKK Cross Flamed Over Quinte Countryside

By LENNY WILLIAMSON
Staff Reporter

Nobody talks about it, but everybody living here in the 1920s remembers when the fiery cross of the Klu Klux Klan flamed over the Quinte countryside.

The flames of the Klan were fuelled by fear and insecurity.

Sociologists say the Klan revival of the 1920s was part of the rural protest movement of that era. In that decade farmers were heading in droves to the cities, threatened by a slump in the rural economy, by mechanization, post-war uncertainties and the growth of big business and big government. The closely-knit farm culture of their youth gone, some turned to the Klan to fill the gap.

Founded in the United States in 1865 by ex-officers of the southern army, the KKK aimed to combat loose morality and to safeguard white, anglo-saxon protestantism.

Its credo was the "Klan creed", Section 12: – "I beseech you therefore, brethren, by the mercies of God, that ye present your bodies a living sacrifice, holy, acceptable unto God, which is your reasonable service."

Its first Belleville rally was held in December, 1921 over the eastern approach to the Dundas St. Bridge. There a cross was burned and a special attempt was made to recruit "respectable men" — veterans disgruntled with the government's meagre demobilization benefits.

The veterans had had their share of violence and drifted away when the coal-oil soaked, burlap-covered cross was ignited. They formed their own organization — the Legion, which, in its own way, was also part of the 1920's protest movement.

But for a decade, sporadic cross-burnings were reported in Hastings and Prince Edward counties.

An old newspaperman remembered the incidents.

"The Klan?" he said. "You might say it was like a militant branch of the Orange Lodge — only with incendiary tendencies."

* * *

A Belleville woman who claimed to be the last living person associated with the Klan denied KKK relics to the Hastings County Museum when volunteers to share her reminiscences before her death several years ago.

* * *

She was a large woman of indeterminate age. Like the old terms weasel or out-of-childbed — faceless, shapeless, a baggy sweater fastened by one button across her bosom, she received us in her kitchen. She looked as though she never left it.

Interviewed for the first time in her life, a nervous centre stage, she became oddly coy and girlish and giggled and winked each time she turned a question back against her interrogators.

After the passage of almost 40 years, she was still guarded in her replies, revealing little, telling much.

* * *

What do you want to know about the Klan for?

There isn't much to say, but my, we had good times!

We once marched from the farm in Prince Edward, my husband and I, to Belleville and back a long way, right to the first pioneer house in Sidney, the Quakers, not many left now. Don't never been to a Quaker service? I wouldn't, wouldn't like it. Everybody stayed still and quiet and sang and we, used to get so bored. We kids used to go to Sunday church, you know? I'm Presbyterian see.

Well, my husband belonged to the Klan. I can't remember when, along during the twenties, after we come over from the country. Along about then.

What did we do?

Well, we used to have meetings. About 12, 14 there I guess. Oh, I don't remember who. They'd all gone now but me, my we had good times!

The men used to meet and the women went upstairs and we served the robes, all white. Yes, you could have any sort of like the ladies' auxiliary of the Klan, but we didn't have any secrets.

I don't know what the men did. It was secret. A secret society for men you know, sort of like the Masons, but we didn't have a hall. They met at houses, at our house a lot of the time.

What were they against?

Well, I dunno. No, we didn't have any negroes here. There were very against negroes in the States, but we didn't have THAT here. Well, they were against wildness and running around and things like that. You know. If a married man run around with somebody he shouldn't, he got punished. The Klan didn't like that. There was a rich man, owned a factory, he got somebody in trouble against her will and they fined him.

How?

Beat him up. They fixed him good. He shouldn't of done that, don't know what they did. Yes, he lived right here in town. May be you heard about that? A long time ago, all of them gone now.

They used to go out at night. After 12 o'clock, after I was asleep, my husband would get up and I'd hear them under the window and he'd go off and come back before dawn. Giving somebody a good scare. They never did nothing, but they give the ones that were running around a good scare. I got up and give them a good breakfast after.

They rode horses, oh, about eight or nine of them. The horses wore robes too. We made them. Had to, so nobody'd recognize anybody's horses. They brought them with them, the ones from the farm mostly. Everybody's everybody's plaugh horses. They were long blankets, right down to the ground and a sort of hood like a nose bag over the faces, the horses' faces, and they had burlap feed bags tied on their feet.

Why?

LENNY WILLIAMSON

Well because we they wouldn't make any noise with their feet. They were all like that.

The bags sort of, what do you say — muffled the sound.

We made them, all white. I come in off the farm and I could sew pretty good, so I showed the others. We'd get together and sew the robes. My, we had good times, sewing and laughing. So you still do the robes? Get together and sew?

We put green maple leaves on the chest of the robes. We were Canadian, you know. We had red crosses and a green maple leaf. The Americans didn't have the maple leaf, because we were Canadian.

The Americans come up, once, twice, maybe more. Just the head man. They come up for our big outdoor meetings. Just once a summer.

Where did we hold them?

Well, down in Deseronto, on that flat limestone pasture, just scrub land, you must know where it is. And once we had one at the back end of Col. Ponton's farm. (W. N. Ponton prominent Belleville lawyer and politician).

You know, up in Sidney, at the back end of his farm. Just scrub pasture.

Was he one of us? He never said. He let us use his farm though.

Was he there? I dunno. He must have been though but he never said so.

Oh, I don't remember what we did. It lasted all day. We women brought the food, lots of food. There were lots of sponsors and they had rode horses. That's where those pictures in the museum got come from. One of the big meetings. Did I burn a cross?

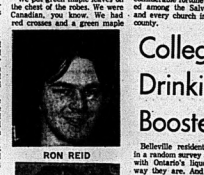
What do you want to know about those things for? I guess it's history now, but, my, we had good times!

Once we paraded right through Belleville. Yes, down Front St. in the robes with the horses and everything.

Why?

Maybe it was something like the Santa Claus parade and we were in it? No, the public didn't do nothing, or nobody else either. We just marched. I think it was something to do with one of the outdoor meetings in the summer. We always got good weather. Hot, but real nice.

What were we against? Well people running around and things like that, Catholics? Now they run pretty wild. I'm a Presbyterian. Lot of things people do nowadays, the goings on! Maybe we should bring it back? What do you think?



I wasn't in it. It was for the men, you know. Why don't you ask Archie — no, he's gone too. Nice fellow he was. He doc road. I'll remember his name yet, he's gone too. I guess I'm the only one left.

But my, we had good times! Do you have good times like that nowadays? Maybe we should bring it back. What do you think?

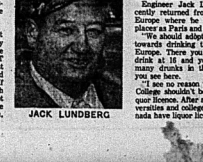
College Drinking Boosted



RON REID

DON GARIEPY

RAYNA ROLUF

JACK LUNDBERG

Belleville residents contacted in a random survey are satisfied with drinking liquor laws the way they are. And all see nothing wrong with granting a licence to Loyalist College for their pub nights on campus.

He thinks pub nights on campus are a good idea. But he thinks the drinkage should be kept at 18. "They couldn't make it any lower," he says.

"I think the hours the hotels are open are good. I wouldn't want to work any longer. I also think we should be more like the United States where you can buy beer and so on in grocery stores."

Don Gariepy runs a variety store on Bridge Street. He says he has never thought about the situation that much.

"I don't see anything wrong with giving a license to Loyalist. It's the best thing as it isn't a matter of drinking in school areas. I see nothing wrong with having pub nights or a lounge in school.

Rayna Roluf is 22 and works at Rolui's downtown. She attended Loyalist College and said she enjoyed the pub nights they had on campus.

"The pub nights were a lot of fun. A lot of the colleges have them and when we had beer in the cafeteria I didn't notice any fights there.

"We should adopt the attitude towards drinking they have in Europe. There you are able to drink at 16 and you don't see many drunks in the street as you see here.

"I see no reason why Loyalist College shouldn't be given a liquor licence. After all, other universities and colleges across Canada have liquor licences.

Loyalist Produces A Proof of Age

By TOM NEW President
Loyalist College Student Council

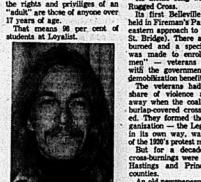
An intelligent dissertation on such a fundamental subject, a liquor Licence being granted to Loyalist College, is impossible unless an overview of the larger situations is offered.

Alcohol is a drug - therefore it should be banned. A self-righteous and pious statement like that seems to be a main argument flung to the wind during any debate about alcohol.

It's a drug. Do you drink coffee or tea? Smoke a bit too much. Do you have margarine on your "enriched" bread? Ever eat peanut "butter" or jam, Sir or Ma'am, with your meal? Iodized salt, refined sugar or cocoa? Take a look at the ingredients on Aunt Jemima's Pancake mix.

What do all these things have in common? Drugs are the basic ingredients. Food preservatives, food colorations, food flavorings are all drugs.

Our whole society is drug-oriented for a logical reason. From before birth a child is startled by the wide-spread use of drugs. Many are necessary for good health; the body is a veritable warehouse of different types of drugs.



But the use of non-integral drugs has been so insidiously increased in recent years itself the extraction of these same chemicals cannot take place without a large across-the-board legislative and social changes, which will not happen until a vast majority of people are aware of the situation.

Loyalist College has been the target recently of a fringe group who has been trying to force their beliefs on us. This is not to be too surprised at as we are used to attempts at impingement. The law resists change missing some basic premises.

The average age of Loyalist students is 20-28 years. The number of full-time students who are under 18 is minimal: an accurate ball-park figure would be 15. I realize that it is common knowledge (but there are some who do not seem to know it) that the age of majority in Ontario is 18.

If the government decrees that a person is a "legal" adult at 18, then it follows that the rights and privileges of an "adult" are those of anyone over 17 years of age.

That means 98 per cent of students at Loyalist.

TOM NEW

If the students of the Administration do not concur with the students want to obtain a liquor licence, then they have every right to obtain one without misguided zealots casting about the protection of our children.

The key here is self-determination and it boils right down to the preceding sentence. This is a pseudo-democracy; if a majority of people within the context of direct involvement want something (especially if it is already legally sanctioned) then they should have it.

Do not sit in judgement about something that has nothing to do with you and then above your "objective" verdict down somebody's throat.

All we want is equality.

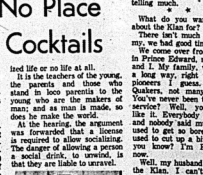
College No Place To Have Cocktails

By JOE COX
City Alderman

What price will future generations pay for the permissiveness that we accept and allow in the facets of todays society?

I speak specifically of the action Bill 81 in September and 2 territories, of this country, in allowing a reduction in the drinking age from 21 to 18 or 19 years of age. The Province of Ontario went further to change their Liquor Licensing Act to confer rights and universality.



Our own Loyalist College of Applied Arts and Technology has applied for one of these licences. In spite of a host of many objections, petitions and letters, a hearing was held in the Council Chambers of City Hall. Objections were heard and still exist as representation hewd by those in favor of the said license.

On the face of the hearing, I objected to the granting of such a liquor license to Loyalist College as I do now.

There is no room in an educational institution for liquor. Our tax dollars were not intended on such a beautiful building as Loyalist College to have it supply as a pub or cocktail lounge. Halls of learning are to house students seeking a better education.

The educators' responsibility is to reconcile that each single unique person is the bearer of a special task of being, which can be fulfilled through him and by him alone. It is what man makes of man that makes the difference between a fully realized life or no life at all.

It is the teachers of the young, the parents and those who stand in loco parentis to the young who are the makers of man; and as man is made, so does he make the world.

JOE COX

Just remember, human lives will be affected tomorrow by decisions made by man today. Our human personality is like a three-legged stool, supported by body, mind and spirit; collapse of one of these creates chaos and disaster.

Alcohol in Loyalist College? I say NO!

Courtesy Two-way Street

By CASH MAHAFFY
Intelligencer City Editor

Pedestrian crosswalks can be a great convenience - for pedestrians, but many drivers think differently.

In Belleville we have five "courtesy" crosswalks, two on Pinnacle Street and three on Front. So far, according to Police Chief Douglas Crosbie, they are working quite well. There has only been one serious accident since they went into operation.

There are problems, however, and most of them are caused by pedestrians - - many of whom we suspect are non-drivers with no appreciation of drivers' problems.

No driver likes to be forced to slam his brakes; it's unsettling, to say the least. Besides, it isn't good for the car.

Nevertheless, there is a breed of pedestrian that seems to think that those two painted white lines are impregnable walls that will keep him safe no matter what.

These are the blithe spirits that, without a glance, step out into traffic while waiting drivers try to stand their cars on their noses and the crunch of rear-enders is heard across the city.

We have wondered if it would be better if we had those lighted, X-marked (and expensive) walks they have in some cities - - and have come to the conclusion that it wouldn't.

With those crosswalks the onus is all on the driver, regardless of whether he's been given a chance to stop or not. The driver is automatically and legally liable. The pedestrian is always right — and that's not fair.

While Chief Crosbie is "of two minds" about the type of crosswalk we should have in Belleville—courtesy or X-marked — he obviously leans toward the "courtesy".

In this context courtesy means nothing more than common sense. Pedestrians must remember that it takes time to stop a couple of tons of moving metal and drivers must keep a wary eye out for anyone waiting patiently to cross the street. Courtesy is a two-way street.

And while we're on that subject, there's one nagging reservation in all this. We question the safety of crosswalks on one-way streets where one lane of traffic can hide a pedestrian from drivers in other lanes.

Family Life Stressed

Joyce and Dave Sargent are becoming closer to each other and sons Adam and Davey with the help of two missionaries of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

The Mormons, who have come to the Quinte area from their native Utah, are introducing the Deseret family in the church's family home evening program.

A central part of Mormon life for more than 50 years, the program sets aside one evening a week as a special time of family togetherness.

Elder Martin Simthon and Elder Thomas Wilding are currently instructing several local families in the program; the area's 300 Mormon families already largely participate in the program.

Like the other newcomers to the program, the Sargents are not members of the Mormon church.

"I think it brings the family closer together; it opens lines of communications so we can talk together all the time, not just during the program," Joyce adds.

The latter in each home usually leads a short discussion and is part of the family home evening.

This week Dave Sargent chose to talk about family development and the need for expressing love.

Using paper cutouts illustrating elements of family life parents, children, a family goal, faith and God he constructed a rocket to show that "together a family can go anywhere."

Afterwards, he read aloud a story-sermon.

Adam, who is four, was then asked to discuss the story.

Later, games were played, all including some teaching. One, for instance, imposed a penalty of having to answer a question on the evening's story or from the Book of Mormon if the player mismatched numbers.

A prayer closed the program which was followed by a special family treat.

"You say you're talking about something in a book but later you realize that the theme applies to your own lives," he said.

Elder Wilding says the program is a time for the family to get together "without watching television".

"I've grown to love the program because I see what it's done for families here." The pair usually attend a few programs to help families get started.

Elder Simmons adds that it's an impetus to start families communicating.

Even at age four, Adam is encouraged to take part in the family home evening program. Little Davey, nine months old, observes the evening's activities.

Puzzle

Adam Sargent, who is 4, answers a question posed by Elder Thomas Wilding of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. The question was a penalty imposed by a game the Sargent family played during their weekly Family Home Evening. The Mormon-inspired evening is designed to create family solidarity.

Bob Nixon Talks Women

"I consider myself an emancipated male but if I try to convince anyone of it, I come out sounding like the worst kind of chauvinist."

In Belleville to address high school teachers Thursday, Robert Nixon, Ontario Liberal Leader, discussed women in the Liberal party during a press reception.

Mr. Nixon said he has been aware of the need for more women in his party since 1967.

"I've recognized it as a real issue since that time. Then it was a good thing; now it's an impressive thing."

Mr. Nixon said he circulated a letter to regional Liberal presidents to ask for the names of women who, by education or experience, qualify for appointment to government boards and agencies.

"Now we'll be able to say not 'why don't you appoint some women' but 'why hasn't so and so been appointed',' he said.

"I really believe that appointments and certainly elections must be on the basis of ability," he said, pointing to Margaret Campbell MPP, St. George, (Liberal), as "something more than our token woman, believe me."

"I don't know a woman who would disagree with that," he added.

Mr. Nixon said he believes the lack of women in decision-making positions can be attributed to the unwillingness of women to come forward on a competitive basis to seek and win elections.

He said a time will come when the legislature has the same ratio of women as the population.

"But you can't overplay it because that's part of the problem. It's going to happen, though, let me tell you."

Robert Nixon

Anniversary Celebrated

Mr. and Mrs. John Joseph Trudeau clebrated their 50th wedding anniversary recently with a family dinner party at the Four Seasons Hotel.

Mr. and Mrs. Trudeau were married January 8, 1924 in St. Cecilia's Church, Toronto. Mrs. Trudeau is the former Mary Veronica McGoldrick of Shenebro, Quebec; Mr. Trudeau was born in Tweed.

They have seven children, two sons and five daughters. Sons John and James both reside in Belleville. Their daughters are Mrs. Albert (Doris) Bunton, Belleville; Mrs. Yvon (Cecilia) Loubert, Ottawa; Mrs. Maurice (Jeanne) O'Connor, Oshawa; and Mrs. Edward (Cletus) Plata, deceased. There are 14 grandchildren.

With the exception of a short time spent in Pennsylvania, Keene, Ontario and 5 years in Tweed, Mr. and Mrs. Trudeau have lived for the last 42 years at their resident at 140 George Street.

As well as celebrating their 50th wedding anniversary, Mr. and Mrs. Trudeau is this year celebrating his 50th year in the automobile business.

Following the family dinner on Saturday, Jan. 6, the couple celebrated by attending a special Mass Sunday in St. Michaels with all members of their family. An At Home was held Sunday afternoon attended by more than 200 friends, relatives and dignitaries.

Floral tributes, good wishes, telegrams and gifts were presented to the couple. They received congratulatory messages from the Governor General, Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau, Robert Stanfield, Jack Ellis, Charles Rollins, Mayor Robin Jeffery and other municipal officials. An Apostolic Blessing was received from Pope Paul VI. Members of the staff at Mr. Trudeau Motors presented the couple with an oil painting by C.R. Bone.

Currently, Mr. and Mrs. Trudeau are in their Florida home where they will spend the winter.

Golden Wedding

The golden anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Green was celebrated New Year's Day by a family dinner at the Sun Luck Gardens.

An Eaton House at their home, at 22 Charles St., Belleville, was also held in their honor.

Present were the Greens' three children (Burt Green from Campbellford, Carl Green from Barrie and Lois Kelly of Belleville), their seven grandchildren and two great-grandchildren.

More than 100 friends and relatives attended the occasion. Greetings arrived from Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau, Robert Stanfield, Leader of the Opposition, Jack Ellis M.P. and Roland Michener, then Governor-General. Many gifts, flowers and cards were also received.

Mrs. Green (the former Naomi Brown) had on top of the anniversary cake the heirloom ornament that decorated her wedding cake 50 years ago, that had also been on her mother's wedding cake.

Touring tea in the afternoon were grandchildren Linda Kelly and Judy Green, and in the evening Grace Wilson and niece Helen Brown. Grandchildren Carolyn Kelly and Janice Green served cakes and sandwiches.

Wedding

Linda Lee Langabeer and Simon Ernest Cobb were married January 12 in St. Michael's Church, Belleville.

Linda is the daughter of Clarence and Mary Langabeer, Belleville; Simon is the son of Richard and Muriel Cobb, Ottawa.

The couple will reside at Box The couple will reside at Box 156, Sunyani B-A, Ghana West Africa, until August.

Answer

Dave Sargent finds answers to game -- and life -- questions in the Book of Mormon. Leader of the family home evening, Dave poses a question for the Elders. They were all participating in a game, part of the home evening program designed to bring families closer together.

Fewer Babies Born

The provincial fertility rate has declined to the point where Ontarians are reproducing themselves, but not much more, according to an article in the Ontario Economic Review.

From a high of 3.8 in 1960, the fertility rate has dropped to about 2.2 which means that on the average, an Ontario woman produces 2.2 children during her child-bearing years.

The figures available in Belleville show that a decrease in fertility has occurred in this city in direct reflection of provincial trends.

In 1960, the population of Belleville was 29,076. The births registered at city hall that year numbered 1,476.

In 1973, although there are now 36,140 persons living in the city, only 1,167 babies were born.

However, although there are fewer infants entering the province, the population is continuing to rise.

Projected figures show a provincial population of between 9.3 and 9.9 million by 1986, from 7.7 million in 1971.

The continuing increase will be partly because of a steady rise in the number of women aged 20 to 29 (the most fertile age group), offsetting the decline in fertility per woman, and partly because of continued migration into Ontario, which has run at about 60,000 for the past decade.

Changing economic situations could influence the migration patterns in Canada, so that fewer migrants decide to come to Ontario, but unless that happens, the province will continue to grow rapidly, fewer babies or not.

Platform Shoes Criticized Again

One more indictment for those dreadful platform shoes. Doctors have been warning against them for months and now the Industrial Accident Prevention Association is adding more evidence that they're dangerous.

The IAPA says if you must wear them, don't drive. They says it's hard to shift your foot from accelerator to brake in an emergency wearing a platform shoe. They lengthen your sense of touch - all of this applies to men's and women's platform shoes - and could cause you to overaccelerate. Not much better are women's high heels. They could become wedged in the base of the accelerator.

Other non-driving shoes are those comfortable wooden sandals so popular this summer. Definitely too floppy for driving.

Consumers of whole grains and legumes like lentils and kidney beans can get their favorites at bargain prices if they're willing to travel for them.

Sunrise Mills, RR 2, Cambridge (Preston), Ontario, (519-653-6661) sells untreated flour, whole grains, beans and seeds and their own fresh cereals. The helps they generally much lower than local prices for similar products, but if you're thinking of driving to pick up two pounds of kidney beans, forget it. Ace-operative shipping trip for several families with gas costs divided among them might be worthwhile, though.

Whole grain wheat is sold by the Gallon for $5.50 per 10 pounds. Untreated white bread flour is $6.75 per 50 pounds; Red kidney beans are 50 cents a pound; lentils, from 30 to 65 cents per pound. You can buy five pounds of wheat germ there for 95 cents and sesame seeds at 65 cents per pound.

Sunrise Mills will mail a complete price list on request. It's open on Saturday, too.

Along with tvendors permits, the government ought to issue dictionaries to retailers.

One local shoe store offered boots for sale. "Greatly reduced" the sign said. "Once you're in the store, you discover that the great reduction is 70 cents. Big deal.

Scott and Ann Orfold hand out literature during the seminar on sexuality held recently at Loyalist College. The Orfolds presented the Unitarian-Universalist course for young people which is designed to stimulate discussion about sexual values and behavior. The course is given by means of tapes, slides, music and written material.

Local Adults Study Teens' Sex Course

The second in the five seminars on sexuality sponsored by the Loyalist Planning Association was held at Loyalist College this week. Speakers were Scott Orfald, a local minister, and Ann Orfald, a psychologist.

The program, "Sex and Sexuality" included material from the Unitarian-Universalist course for young people called "About Your Sexuality".

The multi-media course use music, slides, books and taped discussions in order to involve the students in the program.

The emphasis is on values rather than factual information, in order to help young people set their own standards thoughtfully.

The course also seeks to involve parents in the discussion of sexual values, to help their children develop healthy attitudes.

The Orfalds showed the course material to the audience, who then formed small discussion groups to talk about their reactions to the songs and tapes they had heard.

The informality of the evening led to discussion.

The next session, dealing with "Responsible Sexuality" will be held Tuesday, February 5.

Dear Wash: Sounds as if the years haven't changed conscience might be bothering him and he is conveniently transferring his guilt to you.

Tune him out as you would a bit of nonsense on the radio or TV. Don't attempt to defend yourself or waste energy on denials. Accept the fact that in this one particular area he is senile.

Dear Ann Landers: I am a faithful reader and I agree that herself as a faithful reader would not know that I have addicted myself to this very problem dozens of times. Here is the answer—again.

There are many places a person with limited (or no) financial resources can go for professional help. For the names of these places choose your state from the National Institute of Mental Health, 9000 Rockville Pike, Rockville, Maryland. There are hundreds of County and State Mental Health Associations eager to help. Look in the phone book. Also look for Recovery, Inc. The Family Service Association, and the Catholic Charities. Good luck and get going.

Prayer Pulls People Together

By DORIS CLARCK

...This man had a crushed spirit... he just didn't believe in anything anymore.

Early one bleak, cold morning he entered a coffee shop for breakfast...He could hear the crackle of eggs cooking on the grill...he noticed about a dozen people in the place...two weary nurses, a yawning policeman, a couple of truck drivers and a sullen teen-ager...No communication between these people as our miserable friend seated himself on a stool.

At the end of the room was a young mother with a little girl. All of a sudden in the midst of the silence silence the little girl piped up in her childish voice and it carried all over the place. She said "Don't we say grace here, Mommy?"

The big, burly chef, with his white hat cocked rakishly on his head, looked at the little girl and growled, "Sure we do, honey. Will you say it for us?" And he glared at everybody up and down the counter. "Bow your heads, you people!"

One by one the heads went down. And the little girl, head bowed and hands clasped, said:

"God is great: God is good And we thank Him for our food

By His hand we are fed His gives to us our daily bread.

In Jesus' name, Amen."

All of a sudden the atmosphere in the place changed. No longer were the customers isolated islands of dull interest. They came alive to life; they flowed together; conversation started and became spirited and friendly. The plain old diner magically turned into a meeting, because a little girl gave thanks to God for her food.

All of a sudden, said our miserable friend, "my heart seemed to expand and a light came into my mind. I found myself being drawn to all those people. And I was deeply moved by that little girl. In that moment I had a new insight into myself.

"And as I walked down the street a Bible verse came to my mind: It must have been something that I learned in Sunday School long ago. I could only remember a fragment, but I looked it up later. It was Matthew 4:19: 'Fear thou not: for I am with thee: be not dismayed for I am thy God: I will strengthen thee; yea, I will help thee'....In the world, loneliness, fear, and, most important, disbelief in myself."

Being 'Mom' to Eggs

VANCOUVER (CP) — Susan Gabe's traumatic 2½ months as stand-in mother to 19,000 baby chickens has come to an untimely end.

Those that didn't starve to death or eat each other died in a power cut during the New Year holiday.

It was the final blow in a long series of misfortunes since Mrs. Gabe began an octopus-breeding experiment at the Vancouver Public Aquarium last March.

The accidents have included the death of both parents, cannibalism, starvation, amputation, and an arm stuck down a drain.

The first tragedy was the death of the male octopus in May, after he was mated with a female.

At first, all went well for the female, who went on a 15-day egg-laying spree in April. She laid tens of thousands of rice-sized eggs which covered more than two square feet of space on the tank wall.

In October, as the eggs were beginning to hatch, tragedy struck the dedicated mother.

"We think the probably died of shock because of the a nasty accident just before she died," said Mrs. Gabe, who is a research assistant at the aquarium.

She managed to pull the plug out of the drain in her tank, but one of her arms got stuck down the hole and prevented the water-draining out.

Although the damaged arm had to be amputated, the mother octopus started to be recovering—her color returned and she continued caring for her eggs. Then, suddenly, she died.

Knowing the eggs wouldn't hatch it they weren't agitated in the way the mother would do it, Mrs. Gabe took over the job.

For 2½ months she agitated eggs about one hour every day, moving her fingers through them in imitation of a mother octopuses arms.

As soon as the eggs were hatching, another problem arose.

"I didn't know at first the right food and the right quantity to feed them," she said. "I tried all kinds of things, but they would eat nothing and thousands of them died of starvation."

Finally, when she was down to her last 100 babies, she hit on the right combination of brine shrimp and fish fry and they began to eat.

"It was really so enthusiastic about it, they started munching on each other.

"I suspected they were eating each other because there would be 30 alive when I left the aquarium on Friday but only 15 on Monday—and there were no bodies," said Mrs. Gabe.

She remained optimistic that a few of the hardiest would survive, until the final tragedy occurred. A power cut over the New Year's holidays left them temporarily without air or water.

The few babies that had survived every other disaster died in this one.

"It was really too bad after raising them all that time," Mrs. Gabe said.

Bible Has Fertilized Field For Growth of Civilization

This last installment on a five-part series on the Bible deals with its influence.

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer

Like moisture in the soil, the Bible has fertilized the growth of civilization.

It spawned mass education. It set the laws patterns of justice and law. It has motivated some for the neglected, the prisoners and the poor and hospitals open to all. It has inspired music, art, literature. It is a linchpin of human dignity, the original charter of human equality, liberty and brotherhood.

It is the "foundation of Western civilization," said the great social historian, William Lyon Phelps.

The old book has fired revolution, set nations against each other in hostile blocs. Armies have marched to the call.

Today in the Middle East, the modern descendants of the two rival sons of the Biblical patriarch Abraham—the Jewish offspring of Isaac and the Arabian of Ishmael—confront each other in deep-seated antagonism.

Their common Semitic ancestry, their essential brotherhood and also their opposition, is rooted in the Bible.

On a lesser scale, when president Dwight Eisenhower once said, the free world's difference with communism involves basically a conflict between deification of the state as absolute and belief in the individual's ultimate responsibility only to God.

Bibles in hand, the Pilgrim and Oriental philosophies which accepted gradations of human rank and privilege, the Bible opened up a new, perspective with shared, fundamental equality and value gracing all human beings made alike in the divine image. As St. Paul put it, there neither is a "neither, Jew nor Greek . . . neither slave nor free . . . neither male nor female."

That view of common humanity, whether not couched in religious terms, underlay the drives for enfranchisement of the world's ordinary people, for equity to all persons of whatever race or class, for the emancipation of slaves.

However, the Bible also figured in international power struggles of history—the ruthless medieval Crusades to wrest the Holy Land from "the heathen." the Thirty Years' War between Roman Catholic and Protestant states. Its 1648 settlement redrew the map of Europe and opened the era of mutual religious tolerance.

In its calls for social justice, the Bible's influence propelled industrial, labor and prison reforms, including the movement for a benighted 18th-century England. In the Bible's insistence on compassion for the sick and needy, it generated a global web of charitable facilities and hospitals and led Florence Nightingale to pioneer modern nursing.

The religions of the book started general education. The first common schools were not the work of governments, but of the rabbis, the "ecclesia," the gathered believers. In the Middle Ages, learning centered in the monasteries. In the later Western world, the Bible induced schools to teach it.

Europe's intellectual renaissance coincided with the emphasis of the 16th-century placing the Bible in the hands of the people.

Leading universities were launched under religious auspices, impelled by the Bible's Bible, including its moving effect on the work of painters such as Rembrandt and Michelangelo, on composers such as Bach, Brethoven and Handel, on writers such as Milton, Dickens, Defoe, Browning, Whitier, Longfellow and Bryant.

As poet-philosopher Samuel Taylor Coleridge put it, "The words of the Bible find me at greater depths of my being than any other book."

One researcher checked 1,065 titles of contemporary non-religious books, and found 252 of them were quotations or acknowledged Biblical passages. Russian author Vladimir Dudintsev, for a daring novel criticizing the obstacles of Soviet red tape, found his title in the Bible: Not by Bread Alone.

Even popular given names are habitually derived from the Bible. Almost thought of it—John, David, Joseph, Samuel, Peter, Thomas, James, Andrew, Phillip, Stephen, Paul, Mary, Ruth, Sarah, Elizabeth, Anne and many others.

Aside from its cultural impact, the Bible has been a goad to the physical sciences. Although it offers no scientific specifications, the Bible sets forth broad premises of life which have whetted scientific reaction, sometimes through misconceptions.

This was the case in the 1825 Scopes trial about evolution, an artificial clash since the Bible does not specify the means used in creation, and in Sigmund Freud blaming the Bible for modern's sense of guilt, although advanced psychology recognizes their need to acknowledge guilt in order to accept themselves and others.

While Galileo in 1672 was rebuked and silenced for concluding that the earth moves rather than the sun, this was by ecclesiastical authorities and not a collision with the figurative way of the Bible.

The astronomer who pioneered his findings, Copernicus in 1530, was also a priest. Bible scholar and ecclesiast canon. Other noted scientists influenced by the Bible include:

Blaise Pascal, the 17th-century mathematician who developed the modern theory of probabilities; Isaac Newton, laws of gravitation and motion; Michael Faraday, who harnessed electricity in the early 1800s; Albert Einstein, the modern father of the relativity theory unlocking nuclear energy; Werdher von Braun, a leading engineer of space flight.

Contemporary nuclear physicist John A. McIntyre says the attractiveness of the Bible is in its very comprehensive and beautiful theory of existence, plus the fact that everywhere that I could say it is my own experience it rang true."

Noting that science deals with paradoxes, he adds: "The physicist isn't terribly surprised, then, when he runs into paradoxes in the Bible, for scientific doesn't shy away a good theory because of a few difficulties."

Overall the Bible's interaction in various fields, however, its theory of history as moving forward toward a goal, and its constant call for repentance and change, and achieving it, has been regarded as an underlying impetus to the Western world's progress.

The Bible set loose the vision of a better tomorrow, a world of end and abundance. Imbued subconsciously in the Western mind, it is that dream which has animated the West's energies and given it a continual push toward that horizon.

Decline Said Price Of Sexual Freedom

By DR. GORDON C. SMYTH

Several weeks ago a letter appeared in newspapers of the county in which we live. It was a protest by a mother who had received a few Christmas invitation to the public for an evening of family entertainment sponsored by the local collegiate.

Being a parent too, I felt I had a right and duty to go to the source of the protest before drawing any conclusions. I found the source in the "idea book" for drama, "A Different Drummer," by David Kemp. It is apparently one of the texts recommended by the Ontario Department of Education.

Chapter six, "All My Loving", acted by senior students, was the subject of study. At the theatrical risk of being branded a heresy hunter in pursuit of academic freedom, I feel conscience bound to express myself now. I have no personal axe to grind. I am convinced that nobody of any longer afford to be nonchalant about any aspect of ethics.

The scenes in chapter six are supposed to show "four very different kinds of loving." The fact of the matter is that only each setting really changes. For instance, no scene depicts love in a happy marriage, the love of community that puts a policeman's life in danger, the love of truth that could lose an order a leading advertiser, or the love of God causing a promising career from medical college to wrestle with a challenge to go to a mission field.

In the first scene of "All My Loving" a lonely high chester teenager invites a sailor friend to stay with her for the holidays. He chides her for being a "naught girl," but clearly wants only one of the sort.

In the second scene a New Yorker tries in vain to get the telephone message across to her boy friend that she desperately needs him back from Detroit since she is pregnant.

In the third a bride and groom are nervous and excited as a train takes them nearer to the city where they will spend the first night of their honeymoon.

In the fourth scene a couple have another round in a combat marriage they seem to enjoy. He storms out. A mutual friend stays to comfort her with caressing hands. They talk about the possibilities of an abortion. A triangle might develop.

What do such scene add to the knowledge of young people in a permissive society? What inspiration do these scenes supply? It seems to me that concerned parents are the ones who ought to be unionize!

However, they should be sure they have done their own homework. One of our sons went through university with the intention of teaching English. When he graduated, he had to join the ranks of the unemployed. When he did manage to get a few days, he phoned us and said, "That's not for me. I spent three quarters of the classroom time trying to keep order."

Dr. J. D. Unwin of Cambridge University made a study of eighty civilizations ranging over a period of four thousand years. He concluded that a society either chooses sexual promiscuity and decline, or sexual discipline and creative energy.

Writes Dr. Unwin, "Any human society is free to choose either to display great energy, or to enjoy sexual freedom: the evidence is that they cannot do both for more than one generation."

As the human twig is bent, in home and school, so the tree will grow.

Sprayed Slowly

NEWLYN, England (CP) — School teacher Bobby Waters wanted his car resprayed and a friend recommended Harold Thomas's garage in Camborne, Cornwall, as "slow but thorough." True enough—that was in 1939 and Waters is still waiting for his car. Meanwhile Thomas lends him cars, "calls me Bobby and invites me in for tea," said the frustrated Waters. "But each time all he does is tell me the car is nearly ready."

City's Winter Carnival Bustles Along As Snow Awaited

LOW LIST COLLEGE
FEB-4 1974

By JIM SMELLIE,
Staff Reporter

There's a forecast of some snow tonight but the air anyway is bright and brisk.

Like last night — when it hit full stride with a program of social events that drew hearty public response.

Today, the CFB Trenton weather forecaster said there was a chance of about an inch of snow overnight into Sunday, with high temperatures at 15-20 degrees.

But the lack of snow — preceded by a thaw — saved the carnival opened Wednesday night has forced the cancellation of one of today's events. Free snowmobile rides at Zwick's Island Park have been called, said Norm Mowers, Nose Lonesome Riders Snowmobile Club and the Quinte Snowmobile Club were running the event. But the carnival isn't lacking for events or response.

Last night's activities began with a teens dance at Belleville's armory. About 650 young people came to listen and dance to the music of Benjamin and Smoke Stack Lightning. Organizer of the event was the Quinte Kiwanis Club.

Art Chartrand, Belleville Lions Club vice-president, said the Lions were starting to run short of beer stems about the 11.00 p.m. mark.

Although 300 steins had been provided for, the supply quickly ran out. They had to bring in another 300 steins.

George White, carnival chairman, for the organizing Belleville Jaycees, was quite pleased with the four-day event so far.

"The only thing that didn't go well was the sale of programs which sold for $1 and also included a chance at a draw for a snowmobile. I was disappointed with the reaction of the people towards buying these programs," said Mr. White.

Last night bowlers were also testing skill at Brunswick Bowl in Belleville Plaza — until 2.30 a.m.

Another way today was a men's dart tournament at the ANAF Club. There was also a fishing derby at Zwick's Island from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m.

Also on tap is a broomball competition at the Quinte Skating Club at 1 p.m.

For sports buffs tonight there is a high school tournament at Belleville Memorial Arena, increase at 9 p.m., and more late-night bowling.

Tomorrow's activities will start at 8 a.m. with a pancake breakfast at Ben Bleecker Auditorium sponsored by the Quinte Kinsmen. Heard-growing contest winners will also be judged.

The carnival hits its peak tomorrow with events centred on Zwick's.

Quinte Route to Fuel Dissent ?

Farmers Ponder Pipeline

By ROY PEACOCK
Staff Reporter

Any new pipeline constructed to bring Western oil to energy-short Eastern Canada should pass through wheat-growing areas of Northern Ontario and not prime agricultural farmland in the south of the province — including those of the Quinte counties.

That's the stand being taken by the Ontario Federation of Agriculture and the view of the provincial organization has full support from farmers and Federation officials in the Quinte district.

"We agree entirely with the OFA stand," says Ivan May of Foxboro, the OFA's Hastings County branch president. "We must protect our prime farm lands."

He says that even though assurances are given that the land will be restored in its initial state, it doesn't always work out that way.

Also in addition to temporary loss of farm production, farmers on whose lands pipelines cross have to contend with telephone service disruptions, land drainage problems, and also livestock-handling difficulties.

Typical instances from his native Holland, where ditches were dug as wartime tank barriers, Mr. Hoogland says that even after 17 years and the use of large amounts of fertiliser, full farm production had still not been regained.

Mr. May said federation members had put a lot of thought into the matter and the decision was that pipelines should not mean loss of farm production.

"We don't oppose the pipeline. But land should be constructed through poorer farming areas rather than across prime agricultural land," he said.

Any losses in farm production would result in higher food production costs and ultimately, higher food prices for the consumer.

He said that when pipelines and hydro lines are built they should be placed in special corridors so the environment will not be hurt.

"Then we would have a set policy and not a hodgepodge."

The county OFA president also said when pipelines are to be constructed farmers should negotiate with pipeline owners on an area basis and not individually.

So far the county organization has made no official protest against the proposed pipeline for routing Southern Ontario. But Mr. May said that when more details were known there would be some local interest.

Even more outspoken in support of the OFA position taken for the proposed pipeline to cross Northern Ontario was Jack Dingo, of Carrying Place, former OFA director for Prince Edward-Hastings, and well-known Quinte-area broiler producer.

He agrees that the pipeline route should be through the rocky area north of the Great Lakes on to Montreal down the Ottawa valley.

"Sure it will be harder digging and more costly. But with a threatened world food shortage we should look ahead" he says.

"We are really concerned in this area," he told The Intelligencer.

He Pointed out if the oil pipeline went across Simla to Montreal it would take up to 4,000 acres of prime agricultural land temporarily out fo production. In all probability such a line would cut directly across the front townships Hastings county. Just north of Belleville Mr. Dings said.

Must Protect "Prime" Farm Areas

He said that in the prime farming areas of Ontario one foot of land even temporarily out of production meant the loss of at least 100 cwt. or two tons of milk to the consumer.

Steps must be taken to protect prime farm lands or "we will lose it to the city in concrete or asphalt," he said.

Burton Hubble, farmer on Sidney township 2nd concession who already has two underground Fgalines cutting across his farm - - a 10-inch oil line and a bigger gas line - - says he wants no part of another pipeline.

He says the amount of farm production lost following construction of a pipeline depends upon the degree of disturbance and the depth of the lines.

But even under the best of conditions it takes "several years" for full production to return.

Disruption of natural drainage patterns and water tables was said to one of the bigger areas of farmer complaints, he said.

Mr. Hubble said that where pipelines pass through rolling land the natural water table is disturbed. The result is the refilled ditch picks up underground water. The water then flows in the pipeline to lower ground where it bubbles and keeping the fields wet and unworkable.

Policy of pipeline companies when building lines is to purchase easements across farmers properties and not pay for damages.

But determination of actual damages is sometimes difficult to achieve, he said.

Mr. Hubble totally favors the proposed pipline crossing the relatively uninhabited province's north, rather than across Southern Ontario. He said the fact that the northern route was mostly wilderness and owned by the crown then should be given consideration.

Minister Has Alternative, But Little Support

Stewart, Ontario Agriculture Minister, was working to get the northern route accepted. But, so far, he was getting little support.

Government have a record $1.2 billion budget and are then talking to the farmers, Mr. Hubble said.

Mr. Hubble questioned whether assessment and taxes Ministry municipalities from pipeline companies compensation would be offset by reduction in prime agricultural areas.

Officials at the regional assessment office in Trenton note that pipeline assessments are the same according to value and are prescribed by provincial statute.

However, tax revenue received from the pipelines can be considerable. If a pumping station is located fin the municipality, it means still added assessment.

Carnival Calendar

Belleville's 1974 Winter Carnival peaks this weekend.

A busy round of events — in and out of doors— tonight and Sunday is planned as a wrapup to another year of carnival camaraderie.

Some of the outdoors program depends on the elements. What the winter carnival needed earlier to clinch its weekend was wintry weather — especially, snow, about an inch now being predicted for overnight.

These are among the highlight events remaining for the carnival's weekend peak:

SATURDAY

Broomball — Quinte Skating Club, starting 1 p.m.

High School Hockey — Two finals, starting 7.30 p.m., 10.30 p.m., Memorial Arena.

Klondike Days — Big social event at Ben Bleecker Auditorium, 9 p.m.-1 a.m., includes beard-judging contest.

Lacrosse — Memorial Arena, 8 p.m.

Moonlite Bowl — Brunswick Bowl, Belleville Plaza, 11.30 p.m.

SUNDAY

Outdoor camping display — Zwick's, 2 p.m.

Skydiving, Zwick's 2 p.m., 3.30 p.m.

Tug-o-war — Zwick's, 2 p.m.

Cross Country Ski — Leaves Loyalist College 2.30 p.m. for Zwick's.

Tobogganing — snowshoeing skating will also be held at Zwick's depending on weather.

Education Beat

You CAN Fight Queen's Park

By LENNY WILLIAMSON

A low in the direction of Rev. Louis Casartelli of the separate school board, that Maynooth-based champion of the north, who was the first to lead local opposition to daylight saving time in winter.

Daylight saving is not feasible in a northern country," he remarked dryly, backing up his argument with the fact that more energy would be expended in domestic lighting, school buses and school distribution in the early hours of the morning than would be saved at dusk.

Only low out kids, and we want the best for them.

Or do we?

Dudley Hillier, vice-principal of Centre Hastings Secondary School, was the only voice crying in the wilderness of the education week committee on behalf of students.

Since kids are what education week is all about, they should have their part in committee plans, he argued.

There isn't time, was the rebuttal. Maybe next year, when Hastings county is host to the official provincial opening.

They won't get their chance in 1974, but we applaud Mr. Hillier and add our support to his cause in 1975.

A Belleville man has been fined $200, in provincial court after he was convicted of failing to remain at the scene of an accident on Station St. Dec. 1.

Thompson was the driver of a car that ran into two parked cars on Station Street around 6 p.m. Dec. 1.

He was charged by police after they found his car parked behind the Flanders Hotel on Front. Street around 11 p.m. the same night. Damage arising from the accident was estimated at $800.

Papineau Protest: Rollins To Meet Council

The proposed Papineau Lake provincial park development — which has drawn protest from cottagers around the north shore of county lake — will be defined to local government in the area next month by Ontario ministry officials.

At that time, says Clarke Rollins, MPP Hastings, he personally will discuss the proposal with any protesters present.

Public announcement of the Papineau development last month — one of several provincial park projects planned by the Ministry of Natural Resources to increase outdoor resources for public recreation — has brought dissent from an association of cottagers with properties around Papineau.

Fmcists have been written to both the ministry and himself, says Mr. Rollins. Some of the mail is based on the formation which is not factual," claims the MPP, who is also chairman of the St. Lawrence Parks Commission.

Despite the volume of mail "I'm not going to be pressured into anything," said Mr. Rollins.

He said the intent of the Papineau scheme is to develop a facility "for use that they would not add to pollution problems."

By 1978, when — and if — the project is developed, the provincial government will be spending just $2,3,000 a year on maintenance and development alone, he said.

Mr. Rollins says he has contacted the ministry and is bringing a representative to explain the project to local township councillors.

"If there are any cottagers who wish to discuss the matter with me at that time I will only be too willing," said Mr. Rollins.

The township hall meeting is Feb. 13 at 1.30 p.m.

Situation Shortage For Car Anti-Freeze

You can thank your lucky stars that Canada has had a mild winter so far this year.

There is a glycol shortage right across the country.

Glycol, a fuel base used to manufacture automotive antifreeze, has been in short supply for nearly three months.

Belleville's gas station owners and managers and several garages in Belleville report that they have found it virtually impossible to purchase sizable quantities of the freeze.

While conducting a survey of gasoline prices in the Belleville area last week, The Intelligencer found that several gas station attendents complained they were unable to supply their customers with antifreeze.

One dealer claimed that most suppliers were out of stock and that when he was able to get his hands on some anti-freeze, the price was double what it was in previous years.

"Our company put in an order for nearly one million gallons of anti-freeze sometime in December," he said, "and we found that we were just not in field. The suppliers just aren't able to meet the demand for anti-freeze. We ran out of our stock nearly two weeks ago and , even though we are able to buy a few quarts of anti-freeze from local wholesalers, we simply can't meet the demand being made by our customers. It's a serious situation."

Mr. Golden also predicted a price increase of between 40 and 50 per cent for anti-freeze next year.

The glycol shortage has also affected the supply of windshield washer anti-freeze and paint.

Like Mrs. Ethier, he has a method of predicting winter conditions in the autumn. Only he depends on muskrats.

If the muskrats build their houses high out of the water then you can expect a cold, long winter. If the houses are low and close to the surface of the water, the winter is just the opposite."

Church Receipts Are Up

Total receipts of Christ Church last year were $66,194, parishioners were told at the 109th annual vestry meeting Jan. 27. Expenditures, including the apportionment of $12,620, were$61,190.

Highlights of the year, given by the rector, Rev. R.B.D. Wright, were the complete renovation of the rectory, the restrance of four young men of the parish to college to prepare for the ministry and the support of parishioners and readers in the work of the church.

Vestry clerk was Mrs. Mary Fletcher and wardens were Alan Gardiner Leake William and George Dey. Diary Readers in the new warden, replacing the restring Mr. Gardiner. Lay Delegates to Synod are Mr. Gardiner and Kenneth Bartlett. Rev. John Utley is curate and interim organist, and choir director.

Cars Collide

A total of $1,500 in damages resulted from a two-car collision Friday.

The accident occurred shortly after 3 p.m. on Highway 37 north of Belleville.

A vehicle driven by Elizabeth Jean Bruce, Scarborough, sustained $1,000 in damages. A second vehicle driven by Raymond Lewis Dec. Weston, received $300 in damages.

Turn Of The Coin

This morning's temperature was not the coldest of this winter season. It just seemed that way.

The weather office at Canadian Forces Base Trenton reported the mercury dropped to one below at 8 a.m., for the coldest period of the night.

The Force Will Provide

Belleville police officers will not have to buy their own gloves and caps.

At this week's meeting of the Belleville police commission, the commission members agreed a resolution recommending that the police department issue winter gloves to officers starting in January 1975.

In the past, police officers had to purchase their own gloves. They did come with the city's uniform allowance.

Loot Recovered

Belleville OPP have recovered items stolen from the Eastern Business Equipment and Supplies at the Westgate Plaza on Dundas Street West.

Just before midnight on Jan. 30, a person or persons unknown made entry into the building by smashing a shopping cart through the front window. After gaining access, an electric typewriter, Polaroid camera and tripod were removed.

The suspect or suspects fled on foot southwards and the stolen items were stashed at the bottom of a nearby fence.

Constables Ted Arthurs and Bob Burkholder recovered the items worth about $800, about 9 a.m. the morning of Jan. 31.

No one has been apprehended and police are investigating.

'Twasn't That Chilly

This morning's temperature was not the coldest of this winter season. It just seemed that way.

The weather office at Canadian Forces Base Trenton reported the mercury dropped to one below at 8 a.m., for the coldest period of the night.

Suggestions Sought

Belleville's centennial is four years away but already committees are have a say as to what they would like done for a centennial project.

A steering committee of 11 members headed by Gerald Thompson met this week at City Hall to consider the best way to go about celebrating the city's centennial.

It decided to let the public voice their feelings concerning a centennial project for the city in 1978. They will have an opportunity to do this through an advertisement in The Intelligencer next week asking for their suggestions.

A public meeting will then be held to consider what projects would be best for Belleville in her centennial year.

Members of the centennial committee have been chosen from organizations throughout the city. The are: Marten Lewis representing Sherwood House; Gerry Boyce of the Hastings County Historical Society; Fred Bemis, industrial commissioner; Dick Chambers past president of Chamber of Commerce; Lorne Williams of the city's recreation department; Doug Sweet, of the Quinte Labor Council; Alderman Roger Porter representing the city and Don Lamont representing retail merchants.

Contest Suggestion

By MIKE BRADSHAW

Supposing the weather forecast for today read: "There will be no daylight today due to a slight mixup in the sun's timetable."

That synopsis would be al-

A weather prediction like that might tend to confuse the grounding, since this is his big day of the year. The time for his Big Event is Groundhog Day, Feb. 2 is the date he is supposed to make his traditional appearance and proceed to look for his shadow which, if seen, is supposed to mean another six weeks of winter.

Per Mrs. Ethier, the groundhog isn't the only omen of a long — or short — winter.

Mrs. Ethier, who lives on her own farm for 40 years, says that one can predict an elongated winter by autumn.

"All you have to do is look at your windows in the fall and watch the squirrels gathering. If they aren't busy gathering a lot of nuts, then the winter will be short and mild. And, if they've busy, then the winter will be cold and long.

Mrs. Ethier, a life rural Hastings County resident, says all her relatives and neighbors put a lot of faith in predictions made by the groundhog — through his appearance.

They appear ready to get up early if the morning in those days," she said, "and you knew if it was cloudy at daybreak then there was a pretty good chance that the winter weather was breaking up."

The Ethier's Stoney Ground-hog Days Mrs. Ethier has seen the first well-kept secret. Even the members of her immediate family don't know the correct number, but she has put her faith in omens like this one for at least 50 years.

Harry O'Neill, a long time Quinte-area residents, has owned a farm for 51 years, but he didn't ever go by the groundhog.

"I always went by the bear," says Mr. O'Neill, "and it came out on Feb. 2 and saw his own shadow, back he went to sleep for another six weeks."

"It's better for farmers if Feb. 2 is sunny," says Harry.

"Usually if you've a longer winter, then a farmer has a much better harvest season. Groundhog day (Feb. 2) is half your wheat and half your hay!" adds Harry.

Cranston Dazzles Crowd With Artistic Compulsory Skate

MONTON N.B. (CP) — Toller Cranston stole the show at the Canadian figure-skating championships Friday night.

Cranston, 24, of Toronto, dazzled the 6,000-plus crowd at Moncton Coliseum with his artistic style in the senior men's compulsory free-skate program that almost assured him of his fourth straight Canadian title.

Lynn Nightingale, 17, of Ottawa, jumped into a slim lead in the senior women's event for the lowing compulsory figures.

Barbara Underhill, skating of North Vancouver, who is third in the over-all standings in the senior women's event, chided with reporters and Lynn during an interview. Both skaters were calm and ready for the final free skate Saturday.

Miss Terpenning said she enjoyed skating before the Maritime crowd Friday. "I'm under less pressure when I'm away from home. It's always harder to skate in Vancouver than anywhere else."

Miss Nightingale disagreed.

"I love to skate at home. Doria Prychun of Toronto dropped to second place in the over-all senior women's event with 211.05 points and 101.02. She led after the opening round figures. Miss Nightingale has 12 ordinals and 100.61 points and is third-place. Miss Terpenning has 13 ordinals and 100.32 points.

The Sopers, Louise and Barry of North Vancouver, won their fourth senior-dance title and earned a trip to the world championships in Munich, West Germany, March 5-10.

The husband and wife have set their sights on finishing in the top five in the world competition.

Barbara Berezowski of Toronto and David Porter of Port Perry, Ont., will accompany the Sopers to Munich. They finished second in the senior dance.

Ron Shaver of Cambridge, Ont., received the first standing ovation of the figure-skating event for his performance in the senior men's compulsories. But he remained second to Cranston in both the compulsory skate and the over-all total points.

Cranston, who also received a standing ovation, had seven ordinals and 109.16 points. Shaver had 12 ordinals and 104.77 points.

In other events Friday, Ontario skaters won three junior championships.

The brother and sister Sandra and Val Bezic of Toronto won the compulsory short programme of the two-part senior-pairs event.

Marion Murray and Glen Brown of Vancouver were second with 14 ordinals and 34.29 points. Peggy Fleming received seven ordinals and 26.34 points.

The free skate in the senior pairs, along with all other free skate events to be completed, is scheduled for this afternoon.

Cahill Signs Four Year Pact to Manage Northmen

TORONTO (CP) — Leo Cahill set a record Friday when he joined his third professional football team in 10 years by signing a four-year contract to become general manager of the Northmen in the World Football League.

"All I can say is its nice to be back," Cahill, 45, told a news conference called to announce his signing and the name of the franchise in the league which will begin operation in July.

He directed Toronto Rifles of the Continental Football League to two successfull seasons and then was appointed coach of Toronto Argonauts of the Canadian Football League in 1968.

He was fired in 1972 after the Argos fell from first to last position to last place in the Eastern Football Conference in one year.

Ironically, the man who fired Cahill, John Bassett, is the father of his new boss, John F. Bassett, who also includes Toronto Toros of the World Hockey Association and the city's World Team Tennis franchise in his sporting conglomerate.

Although nothing has been confirmed, Cahill appeared mollified by a grizzly bear head on their white helmets-are believed very close to sign a contract to play out of CNE Stadium. horse of the Argos, bold of their training camp next Toronto.

Herb Solway, chairman of the Northmen's board of directors, said there was no real financial problem involved in getting Cahill, WFL team started.

"As a matter of fact," he added, "I think we may have too many investors."

Cahill said he hopes to hire a coach within the next few days to get a head start on the opening of training camp in June.

The WFL plans to play a 20-game schedule from July to September, with Wednesday nights the busiest night to avoid conflicting with the rival National Football League's weekend games.

Bassett, who owns the only Canadian WFL team and has the rights to all of Canada, said he heard from three other groups in major Canadian cities interested in a franchise with the new league.

"But there's no way he will give approval to any other city within the approved 20 the current CFL club in that community."

Cahill, who said his firing from the Argos developed from disagreements with the executive, said he didn't expect a repeat of the Super Bowl champion Miami Dolphins.

Bassett said the Northmen still are interested in Morrall, as a coach.

ASPEN, Colo. (CP) — Canadian skiers finished high on the list Friday in the Roch Cup section of the Can-Am ski series.

Karen Imrich, 17, of Lorraine, Que., won the girl's downhill race with a time of 109.36 seconds. Lolly Moss, 21, of Spokane, Wash., came second in 109.71 and Jane Rollins, 24, of Orange, Conn., placed third.

First place went to Steve D. vin, 20, of Seattle with a time o 207.29 seconds.

Second was Ken Read, 18, of Calgary at 207.32 and third Bob Miller, 20, of Vancouver, René Cloutier, 19, of Lorrainville, Que. finished fourth with a time of 208.36 while Bob Safrata, 18, of Toronto tied Gary Allen for fifth spot.

Leading the women's standings is Leith Lende, 19, of Castle-de-Richard, N.Y., with a total of 148 points. She finished fifth Friday in the women's downhill run.

Other Canadian finishers in the men's competition were: Tom Irwin, 21, of Kelowna, B.C., placing 14th; Gerry Sorensen, 21, of Hilton, 19, of Kamloops, B.C., ninth; Rick Todd, 19, of Calgary, 13th Steve Podborski, 16 of Toronto, 23rd; Dave Murdoch, burn, 18, of Chicoutimi, Que., 24th; Andre Senecal, 22, of Laval, Que., 26th; and Ken Hilland 18 of Calgary, 36th.

Cheryl Gushman, 18, of Calgary placed 11th in the women's downhill. Other Canadian finishers were: John Wilson, 15, of Port Hawkesbury, N.S., 13th; Ruth Seidenmayer, 17, of Vancouver, 30th; Susan Aslett, 16, of Toronto, 36th.

Competition continues today with the men's slalom run.

OFFERED COACHING JOB

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Tennessee State University football coach John Merritt says he has been offered $65,000 to coach Detroit Wheels of the fledgling World Football League. However, Merritt, 45, said Friday he would not accept the job at that salary. Merritt said he would go to Detroit this weekend to discuss the job with Wheels' officials.

Changes Tactics, Leads All the Way

CHRISTCHURCH, N.Z. (CP) — Glenda Reiser, the 18-year-old Commonwealth Games 1,- 500-metre champion, said after her victory today that she deliberately changed her tactics.

"I decided I would try to lead the whole thing," said the Ottawa runner, who had been the existing world record as a 16-year-old in a heat of the Munich Olympics while running second behind Soviet world record holder Ludmila Bragina of the Soviet Union.

"That's a change for me," Glenda explained. "I haven't led a race of this either by myself before. I usually hand behind somebody, but I thought it was time to lead by myself."

In the Munich semi-final, Glenda had been badly mauled by more experienced European runners when she tried to emerge from the pack. She finished seventh after considerable buffeting and was thankful to get away from the opponents and lost her chance

Nicklaus Leads Hawaii Open

HONOLULU (AP) — Jack Nicklaus had a four-stroke lead, a record score for the year and a record for the course going into the third round today of the Hawaiian open golf tournament.

He shot 67 Friday gave him a 132 total for two rounds in the $220,- 000 event.

The 12-under-par total was the lowest 36-hole score of the year on the pro tour and a course-round record for the Waialea Country Club course.

"I have to be playing well to be leading the tournament and to break the course record when the scores, generally, are going up," Nicklaus said.

But he said he is about a month away from feeling confident about his play.

"I haven't missed that many shots yet. I don't know what shape my short game is in. And that's usually the weakest part of my game."

Only Gibby Gilbert, who had a 69 for a 136 total, could keep Nicklaus in sight.

Jipcho Upset in 1500

Canadians Total Twenty Five Golds at Commonwealth Games

CHRISTCHURCH, N.Z. (CP) — A 20-year-old army lieutenant from the foothills of Mount Ellasmere's Banks to Ben Jipcho's bid to become a triple gold medallist at the Commonwealth Games today and broke a world record in the process.

Filbert Bayi of Tanzania, setting the pace from the opening gun, won the 1,500 metres in three minutes 32.2 seconds, nine-tenths of a second faster than the world mark set in 1967 by Jim Ryun of the United States.

John Walker of New Zealand surpassed the old record by three-tenths of a second as he won the silver medal and Jipcho, the Kenyan who had won the steeplechase and 5,000 metres, just missed it with a third-place time of 3:33.1.

It was the third world record to fall in the nine-day Games. The others were both in the Games pool by backstroker Mike Cook of Vancouver and freestyler Steve Holland of Australia.

Glenda Reiser of Ottawa, also setting her own pace, was a comfortable winner in the women's 1,500 metres, maintaining the Canadian record of winning at least one gold medal on every day of competition.

It brought the Canadian total to 25 golds, five more than they had won a any previous Games and an improvement of seven over their showing at Edinburgh in 1970. Australia, with victories in the men's and women's 4x100-metre relays and the cycling road race, had 29 golds. England finished with 28 on the strength of four last-day triumphs.

In the unofficial point standings based on a 12-8-4-3-2-1 basis, they are first six placings in final events, it was Australia 249, England 231 and Canada 219½. The Edinburgh totals were Australia 644, England 611 and Canada 484.

Jane Heaps of Toronto and Brigette Bittner of Elliot Lake, Ont., were second and third behind Barbara Lewton of England in the high jump and Thelma Wright of Vancouver won her second consecutive bronze in the 1,500 metres.

Bruce Plesse of Saskatoon was the bronze medallist in the shot put behind two English women, Geoff Capes and Michael Winch, and the team of Margaret MacGowan of Waterloo, Ont., Maureen Crowley of Vancouver, Brenda Walsh of Edmonton and Yvonne Saunders of Toronto, was third in the 1,600 relay.

Bruce Reiser, abandoning her customary stretch-running tactics, ran the equivalent of a 1:58.7 half-mile to win the 800 metres, recording her best time in two years as she won in 4:07.2.

Her only faster race was the 4:04.7 that first brought her into international prominence, a heat of the 1,500 at the Munich Olympics in which she finished behind Izolinda Bragina of Russia and both girls broke the world record. Glenda's time was her fastest ever, but she failed to survive the semi-final.

It was the baffeling she received from more experienced European runners when she tried to move out of the pack in the semi-final that started Glenda thinking about going to the front early, but she said today that front-running has its disadvantages.

"You don't have a rear-view mirror," she said. "You can't tell if they're 10 yards back or 30 yards back."

Mrs. Wright, who won the bronze in the event four years ago, was happy to be third again. Her time of 4:12.2 was her personal best and nearly seven seconds faster than her performance in Edinburgh.

Brad told reporters he could have run faster if he had been pressed in the men's 1,500. He was looking over his shoulder as he entered the stretch but Walker had left his challenge too late.

Jipcho said he was bored in on the final bend and lost his stride.

Otherwise I would have barrelled along the straight to the tape and Bayi."

There was an upset in the men's 400 metres when Ron Jones, anchored by sprint champion Don Quarrie, was relegated to third place. Canadian runners fumbled their baton exchanges and both Indians finished fourth behind Australia, Ghana and Jamaica.

Canada's other foursome of Lynn Kelford of Burlington, Ont., Elizabeth Damman of Kitchener, Ont., and Patti Loverock and Marjorie Bailey of Vancouver was barely beaten out of a bronze in the women's 1,600 relay when the team was the event comfortably with a strong anchor leg by Australian champion Raelene Boyle.

Rick Dowinell of Sarnia, Ont., was fourth in the Javelin, which was won by Charles Clover of England with a Games record throw of 278 feet 7½ inches. Dowswell managed 242-6½.

The 114-mile cycling road race was won by Clyde Sefton of Australia in the Games record time of five hours seven minutes 16.87 seconds. Max Grace of Vancouver was seventh and Tom Morris of Victoria 11th in the field of 44.

Watt Gets Winner

Goal With 8 Seconds Left Gives Cats Win

By MARK BRETT

The Belleville Memorial Arena was the scene of some hard hitting, fast end to end hockey last night as the Belleville Bobcats slipped by the visiting Markham Royals 3-2 in Metro Jr. B hockey action.

The winning goal came with only eight seconds remaining in the game as Mike Watt deflected a John Sergeant shot behind Markham goalie, Jim Baxter.

Robbie Foster the Cat's speedy centre did the work to get the puck out to Sergeant. John let a hard wrist shot go into a mass of players standing in front of the net and Watt was in the right place at the right time.

Belleville opened the scoring at 3:46 of the first period on a goal by Paul King with Foster and Barney Holmes picking up assists.

The lead was short lived however, as a mistake by a Belleville forward set up Wes Murray's unassisted goal 73 seconds later.

Markham outshot the home team 15-14 in the first period.

The second period was scoreless but certainly not without its exciting moments.

Some of the season's harshest body checks were dished out by Bobcat policeman Dave Taylor, who played an outstanding defensive game for the Cats. Taylor was chosen the game's second star, a rare honor for a defenceman, but his checks forced the visitors to keep their heads up throughout the contest.

The home team seemed to have the combination as the constant forechecking of the Belleville forwards kept the Royals hottled up in their own end. Goalie Bruce Clark came up with his usual consistent play to help keep the score to a minimum in his end.

Clarke picked up first star honors for his superb performance in the contest. Belleville outshot the visitors 14-8 with both teams having several missed opportunities.

Mike Watt picked up his first of two in the third to put the Cats in front 2-1 with Sergeant and Mark Coates adding assists.

Tempers flared at the 6:00 minute mark as Cats' Brian Cousins and Markham's Mike Labatte engaged in some unpleasantries; each receiving five minutes for their efforts.

The Royals came back to tie the game up at the 14:38 mark on a goal by Joe Colosimo who was wrestled down on the ice by a Belleville defenceman but the momentum carried the puck and both players into the net.

Coach Jim Hunter was pleased with his team's performance and classed the win as the "team to beat" to gain a playoff berth in the close standings of the Metro Jr. B league.

The Cats have five games remaining including one more with the Royals and Hunter is confident that his team can pull it off. The Royals have seven games remaining so it could prove to be a very exciting finish to the season.

The Cats' next game is an afternoon contest on Sunday when they travel to Brantford.

Kyle Controls It

Loyalist Lancers' Bill Kyle has got control of the ball and has no intentions of losing it as he makes his cut for the Peterborough basket. Kyle scored 18 points against Sir Sandford Fleming to help lead the Lancers to an 87-66 victory in last night's Eastern Ontario College Athletic Association contest at Loyalist.

Sorry, Not This Time Mark

Although the pass got through from teammate Mike Watt, Belleville Bobcat Mark Coates couldn't make this chance count in last night's Metro Junior B game at the Arena, having been foiled by Markham Royals' goaltender Jim Baxter. The Cats did beat Baxter three times during the course of the game, coming up with a 3-2 win over the visitors to move into sole postession of second place in the league.

Culmer Leads Loyalist to Third Win

By MIKE BRADSHAW
Sports Staff

Dave Culmer, Loyalist Lancers big centre, hooped 27 points last night to lead his team to an 87-66 victory over Sir Sandford Fleming of Peterborough in Eastern Ontario College Athletic Association play.

"He was really driving," said Loyalist coach Rob Stinson, "and once he starts breaking for those boards I don't think too many people can stop him."

Loyalist hasn't been too successful in basketball this season but last night's win, the Lancers were at the bottom of the five team EOCAA loop.

"Basically," says Stinson, "we are at a real height disadvantage. We're just about the shortest team on the whole in the league. Because of that, we have a lot of trouble pulling down rebounds, especially offensive and defensive backboards."

Despite the fact that the Lancers might be the shortest team in the league, they're tall on scoring power.

Bill Kyle, another Lancer, holds down fourth position in the list of top scorers with 23.9 points per game.

Still, there is a third Loyalist player in the top five. Harvey Sharpe is in third spot with an average of 25.2 points per game.

Just off the scoring pace of the five leaders is Jim Sutton, in seventh position with close to an average of 13 points per game.

With four players in the top seven scorers in the league, any disadvantage should be minimal.

Unfortunately, those four players, Culmer, Kyle, Sharpe, and Sutton, constitute nearly the entire team's scoring power.

In last night's contest for instance, along with Culmer's 27, Kyle scored 18, Sharpe had 16 and Sutton got 14. That leaves 12 points out of 87 to be scored by the remainder of the team, Paul Chewater got six of those.

"I'd really like to see our scoring balanced over the whole team," commented Culmer, "it would give us a chance to play more defence."

Harvey Sharpe, who played a year of college ball before coming to Loyalist said: "We can score points and we can play well enough on defence but when the opposition scores low. We just can't seem to put both offence and defence together at the same time."

Well, from the basketball display that was put on last night everything looks as though it's coming together fast.

Loyalist fell behind in the early minutes of the game as Peterborough came at them with a fast breaking offense and a full-court press on defence.

The Lancers adjusted quickly to the outburst, moved into a lead at the three minute mark of the first quarter and stayed there for the rest of the game.

Loyalist stuck to a regular defence throughout the game playing man-to-man half court.

On offence, the Lancers went to a two-one-two system, but broke the pattern with intermittent set plays.

Peterborough on the other hand, used several different offenses and shifted their defensive presses from full, to three-quarter, to half court.

Much to the dismay of the Sir Sandford Fleming squad, none of the systems was effective enough and the Lancers pulled into a 41-29 half time lead.

Loyalist let down a bit in the third quarter and by the 2:36 mark of the fourth quarter Sir Sandford had pulled to within five points at 57-52.

The Lancers came back to life quickly and in the remaining eight and a half minutes of play outscoring Peterborough 30-14.

In one three and a half minute span the Lancers outscored the visitors 14-2 stealing the ball five consecutive times on defence to put the game out of reach.

The basketball Lancers are posting things together but the hockey Lancers still can't seem to get off the ground.

"They got that first third period goal and it just broke the game wide open" said Loyalist hockey coach, Bruce Cameron. The game was tied 3-3 going into the third.

Brian Delfino led the Ottawa attack with two goals, while Jacques Nault, Dave Bassett, Roger McNabe, Barry Nicholson and Doug Miller each scored one.

Tomorrow, the hockey team travels to Brockville while the basketball team is idle until next Friday when they travel to Lindsay.

HOCKEY TIPS

By BOBBY ORR
Copyright 1973, Toronto Sun Syndicate

PLAYING DEFENCE CAN BE EASY

People always ask me if I would like to be a forward.

That's where I played when I first started in hockey and in comparing the two positions it's lots easier playing defence. You don't have to forecheck and you don't have to backcheck when you're a defenceman. In fact, it seems you hlve to stand around a lot whether it's in your end in front of your own goal or in the opposing end where you're standing on the blueline waiting for a pass.

Most of our defencemen are offensive minded — Dallas Smith and Carol Vadnais like to rush a lot. When Chicago Black Hawks had Pat Stapleton and Bill White they were two of the game's greatest defensive defencemen.

Look at Montreal where Serge Savard and Guy Lapointe are tremendous offensively yet they don't lack anything in defence either.

New York Rangers have Brad Park, the Toronto Maple Leafs have Jim McKenny and two newcomers Borje Salming and Ian Turnbull look very good.

It seems, then, that while defence doesn't demand as much as a forward position, most of the better teams have a standout defenceman who serves as a leader on the ice.

In general. As an example, Montreal used to have Doug Harvey.

The one thing the outstanding defencemen have in common is that they are capable of using their skating to become either offensive playmakers or key defensive players in the various situations. They also know how to take the men out of the play in front of their goal. You see, a defenceman must be aggressive.

Again, I stress that a youngster should be allowed to play any position he desires. I started as a forward because I wanted to play there not because anyone told me.

Minor hockey would be much more fun if children were allowed to play wherever they choose. And in my opinion, being a defenceman doesn't require as much work as playing goal or forward.

All-stars Take 8-7 Victory

FICTON — The Trent Valley All-Stars defeated the Tweed BP Oil Kings here last night 8-7 in an exhibition hockey game in benefit for the Wellington Arena Building Fund.

The game, a fast scoring, fast skating affair, raised some $350 for the fund from the approximately 450 fans in attendance.

Wellington Dukes' Bob Lavender and Tamworth's Jack Smith each tallied twice for the All-Stars, with Steve Campbellford players adding the remaining goals. Craig Bennett, Ed Stapley, and Dale Loucks, fired one goal each for the All-Stars.

Terry Leagge scored three times and added one assist in a losing cause for the 1973 Valley Chargers. Glen Hagerman, Terry McGregor, Richard Holmes, and Paul Farrell each scored once for Tweed, while Grant Hagerman added five assists.

Three Southpaws Sign

CINCINNATI (AP) — Cincinnati Reds announced Friday the signing of left-handed pitchers Tommy Hall, Mike McQueen and Pat Osburn to 1974 contracts with the National League club. McQueen didn't play baseball last year after suffering a hip injury in an auto crash. Hall was a key reliever for Reds last season while Osburn spent the year with the Reds' Indianapolis farm club.

Norris Comes Good On Goaltending Promise

By JOHN SHORT
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Beleaguered goaltender Jean Norris of Edmonton Oilers made a promise Friday night and he's team-mates applaud after a 3-2 victory over Chicago Cougars in the World Hockey Association that he kept his word.

He promised to work aggressively to cut down shooting angles in his attempt to help the mates work out of a slump. The result was Norris' best goaltending display in several weeks as he turned aside 31 shots as Edmonton ended a three-game losing streak.

The third-place Oilers failed to move up in the Western Division standings because Winnipeg Jets protected their two-point margin in second place by shutting out Los Angeles Sharks 4-0.

In the only other WHA game Friday, Quebec Nordiques won their fourth game of the week at home by defeating Toronto Toros 3-1 in a battle of Eastern Division rivals.

Norris, criticized along with goaltending partner Gerry Wheldy for Edmonton's recent difficulties, received high credit for his outstanding play.

"The defencemen agreed they would cover the front of the net against passes if I went out to cut down the angle on shots," Norris said. "That's the way it worked.

"I think the worst of our slump is over now but a slump sends one slap at a time and this game was just one step."

Harrison earned the winner on a perfect goaltender's pass from defencemen Dave Dunn at the third period. It was the tough centre's first game after a two-game absence caused by a broken nose suffered in practice and he wore a football-type helmet to protect himself.

"I had trouble breathing," he said afterward, "but not too much trouble with the mask it-self."

Hamilton suffered a heavy cut above the eye early in the third period but returned to help set up Lunde's goal. Edmonton fought off a Chicago attack launched after netminder Dan Newton was pulled with an extra skater.

Wheldon 4 Los Angeles 0

Outstanding goaltending also was a factor for the Jets, as Ernie Wakely blocked 28 shots, 20 in the third period.

Linemates Norm Beaudin and Chris Bordeleau dominated Winnipeg's scoring. Beaudin tallied twice in the first period and Bordeleau, who assisted on both, connected in the second. Bob Ash also scored for the Jets.

Quebec 3 Toronto 1

Renald Rochefort scored with 1:39 remaining in the third period for the Nordiques' victory.

He connected on a pass from Bob Guindon after defenseman Alain Beaule started the play.

Wayne Simpson opened scoring for Toronto in the first period with his 32nd goal of the season but Pierre Roy earned his first of the year two minutes later to tie it for the streaking Nordiques.

Houson Arena, leaders of the Western Division, visit New England Whalers while Minnesota Fighting Saints journey to Cleveland to play the Crusaders tonight.

Los Angeles visits Edmonton and Chicago visits Winnipeg on Sunday games. Other Sunday games have Minnesota at Toronto, New Jersey Knights at Quebec and New England at Cleveland.

Flames Play Habs' Own Game, Beat Them 5-3

By GLENN COLE
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Tom Lysiak, the outstanding rookie centre of Atlanta Flames, had a simple explanation for Atlanta's 5-3 National Hockey League win over Montreal Canadiens Friday night.

"We played the Canadiens style of game," said the exMontreal Kel Tigers star who was Atlanta's first amateur draft pick last year.

"We just bent on skating . . . It's the first time our team has looked this good against the world champions."

Lysiak had two assists on goals by defencemen Arnie Brown and Jean Lemieux as the Flames posted their second win over Montreal this season.

Bob Leiter with two and Leon Rochefort were the other Atlanta scorers as the Flames remained in fourth place in the NHL's West, four points ahead of Los Angeles Kings.

Jacques Lemaire, Guy Lafleur and Peter Mahovlich scored for the Canadiens who remained second in the NHL's East, eight points behind Boston Bruins.

Montreal left winger Frank Mahovlich collided with Lysiak along the boards and was cut near the right eye. He was kept in hospital overnight but was expected to join his team-mates for today's trip to Detroit where they meet the Red Wings Sunday afternoon.

Jacques Lemaire, back in the Montreal lineup after missing four games with a knee injury, hurt his shoulder and did not see action in the latter half of the game.

Atlanta took a 2-0 first-period lead when Leiter scored his 15th goal at 9:16 and Brown got his first of the season 86 seconds later.

Lemaire got his 19th goal of the season before the period ended and Lafleur tied the score at 2:16 of the second, with his 15th goal.

Lemieux got his first goal of the year only four seconds after Montreal retimdder Wayne Thomas was penalized for interference at 6:46.

Leiter won the draw and snapped the puck back to Lysiak at the right and he quickly relayed the puck to Lemieux, who drifted a screen shot into the Montreal net.

Atlanta then outscored Montreal 2-1 in the final 20 minutes.

Leiter's game was scheduled with Detroit visiting Philadelphia Flyers in an afternoon clash. Tonight, Boston visits Toronto Maple Leafs, Philadelphia Penguins play host to Chicago Black Hawks, New York Rangers travel to Minnesota to meet the North Stars, St. Louis Blues are at home to Buffalo Sabres, Vancouver Canucks play host to New York Islanders and California Golden Seals meet the Kings in Los Angeles.

Aside from the Montreal-Detroit game Sunday, Toronto meets Buffalo, the Rangers play host to Minnesota, the Islanders visit the Seals, Philadelphia is in Boston, Chicago is at home to St. Louis and Philadelphia is in Atlanta.

Lochead's Hat Trick Gives Generals Tie With Knights

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Bill Lochead scored all three Oshawa Generals goals Friday night, two of them 38 seconds apart in the third period, to establish the Generals to tie London Knights for Ontario Hockey Association Major Junior A action.

Dennis Maruk, Ron Zanussi and Tom Rowe scored for London, the last two goals coming 66 seconds apart in the final period to give London a short-lived 3-1 lead.

Oshawa outshot London 37-28.

In other OHA action Friday, Oshawa 9th downed Sault Ste. Marie Greyhounds 4-2, Toronto Marlboros defeated Kingston Canadians 6-4, Sudbury Wolves edged Hamilton Red Wings 3-2 and Kitchener Rangers shut out St. Catharines Black Hawks 4-2.

Wh 4 Greyhounds 2

Peter Lee, Hal Pearson, Tom McDonal and Derek Smith scored single goals for Oshawa to give the Wh 4 firm hold on ninth place in the standings.

Jack Valiquette and Gary Gill scored for the Greyhounds.

Marlboros 6 Canadians 4

Bruce Boudreau scored a power-play goal at 17:48 of the final period to give Toronto the home-town victory.

Craig Crawford, Mark Napier, John Wells, John Smrke and Kevin Devine scored the other Toronto goals—Devine's into an empty net with 50 seconds remaining.

Brad Rhiness scored two goals for Kingston.

Wolves 3 Red Wings 2

It was the 19th game without a win for Hamilton.

Hamilton's Kevin Cornforth scored the game's first goal at 10:42 of the second period but Crowley tied the game three minutes later.

Rangers 4 Black Hawks 2

Kitchener extended its unbeaten streak to 11 games with the victory over the Black Hawks before 6,306 Kitchener fans.

Joe Fortunato and Ron Sedlbauer put the Rangers in front 2-0 in the first period with Dave Maloney increasing it to 3-0 early in the second period.

The Rangers outshot the Hawks 33-25.

In today's only game, Hamilton takes on the Petes in Peterborough. Sunday, Sudbury plays in St. Catharines, Sault Ste. Marie is at Kingston, Ottawa travels to Malton, London plays in Toronto and Peterborough travels on the Rangers in Kitchener.

Foresters Drop 4th

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Brantford Foresters went down to their fourth straight defeat in Ontario Hockey Association Senior A action Friday, losing 7-3 to Cambridge Hornets.

The Hornets led 3-1 at the end of the first period and 5-3 at the end of the second.

At Orillia, Barrie led 2-0 at the end of the first period on goals by Bob Baird and Paul Regan. Doug Acomb scored the other Barrie goal in the third period.

Gaff Milroy scored the Orillia goal.

The Flyers outshot the Terriers 29-26.

Ontario Teams in Silver Stick Semi-finals

PORT HURON, Mich. (CP) — Teams from Bowmanville, Waterford and Smith's Falls in Ontario and Toledo, Ohio, moved into the Bantam 2 semi-finals in Silver Stick Hockey's 13th annual international championship play Friday night.

Ten more games were also played in the Peewee 3 division, with Sister Creek taking Toledo 4-3; Dieppe, N.B., beating Washington, D.C., 8-3; and Buckingham, Que., edging Espanola 2-1.

In team classifications, Peewee and Bantam 2 entries represent communities with populations of 15,001 to 30,000 and No. 3 divisions, communities of 5,001 and 15,000.

RETAINS RING TITLE

VIENNA (AP) — Jacques Kechichian of France retained the European super-welterweight crown Friday when he knocked out Austrian challenger Hans Orsolics in the ninth round of a 15-round title fight.

BIRTHS

MILLS — To Tom and Pat Mills an 8 lb. 2 oz. daughter, Jennifer Ann, on Wednesday, January 30, 1974, at 7:30 p.m. at Belleville General Hospital. Sister for Michael, Jack and Jeanne Mills.

IN MEMORIAM

BENNETT — In loving memory of our dear mother, Ethel Bennett who died February 2, 1973.
Father knows best what we need
And many an hour he is in our thoughts
But daily he is broken,
And we miss him more than words can say
—Lovingly remembered by son Ken, daughter-in-law Jean and family.

JOHNSTON — In loving memory of our dear mother, Ellen Elizabeth Johnston, who passed away on January 31, 1972.
Always remembered by her family, Evelyn, Beverley and Shirley. P1-4

BRENNAHEY — In loving memory of a dear husband, John (Jack) Brennahey, who passed away February 2, 1967.
Sadly missed
Yet he tried to be fair,
He had his faults we know,
We got more than our share,
But he loved us so.
—Wife Ida and family.
We are so grateful for
The time he had to stay,
And thankful for the love of daughter June and son-in-law Bill.

BRENNAHEY — In loving memory of our dear father, John (Jack) Brennahey, who passed away February 2, 1967.
Sadly missed by
Ken, Jean, Jeffrey and Jacqueline

Time passes but memories remain
Dear Dad
As we spoke and smiled,
How little we knew that God did,
Sit with us at the table,
Share in our memories,
He's here in our hearts
Until the stars forget to shine.
We will always remember.

CORNELL — In loving memory of our dear mother, grandmother and great-grandmother, Mrs. Ethel Cornell who passed away February 2, 1972.
As time unfolds another year,
Memories of you are always near,
Though we cannot see you,
Still memories that will last forever.
—Sadly missed by Lottie, Barb, Sharon, grandchildren.

BELTON — In loving memory of a dear husband, father and grandfather, Harold B. Belton, who passed away February 2, 1972.
In life he endured, life's hardships untold
But he left us memories we are proud to hold
He treasure him God, in your garden to keep
He was lonely and longed for sleep
But in memory you are with us
Till we meet again.
—Sadly missed by wife Gertrude, daughter-in-law Amy and grandchildren Ken and Brian.

KENNAN, Mr. William W. — Who passed away the 2nd day of February 1st, 1968.

GOULA — In loving memory of a dear husband and father who died on the second day February 2, 1973.
In light is peace, in darkness pain,
In life he left us memories we are proud to hold
He treasure him God, in your garden to keep
He was lonely and longed for sleep
But in memory you are with us
Till we meet again.
—Sadly missed by wife Georgina, Carol, son-in-law Doug and grandchildren Todd and Mark.

HOLBRICK — In loving memory of our dear father who died just one year ago today, Roy Holbrick, who passed away February 2, 1973.
Though in our hearts you are fondly remembered
Your memories cling to your home.
Sweet memories of you we treasure
Those hearts that loved you will remain
Forever sacred.
Always will love you in death just as in life.
—Lovingly remembered by, wife Bets and family.

GOULA — In loving memory of a dear husband and father Dominic (Dan) who passed away February 2nd, 1973.
Sadly missed and fondly remembered by wife Georgina, daughter Carol, son-in-law Doug and grandchildren Todd and Mark.

B.C. Hydro Railway Profitable

VANCOUVER, B.C. (CP) — One of the most profitable railways in North America is thriving over just 101 miles of track in the British Columbia Interior.

B.C. Hydro railway which earns most of its heavy hauling freight with its 20 diesel locomotives and only 16 box cars and three flatcars, has a profit of $10.8 million and a net profit of $2.5 million in 1973.

The company rents cars from other railways and pays them for mileage, for Hydro rail's major expenses of $1 million, construction of a transmission line to the Mainland and Fraser Valley areas.

B.C. Hydro railway which earns most of its heavy hauling freight with its 20 diesel locomotives and only 16 box cars and three flatcars, has a profit of $10.8 million and a net profit of $2.5 million in 1973.

The company rents cars from other railways and pays them for mileage, for Hydro rail's major expenses of $1 million, construction of a transmission line to the Mainland and Fraser Valley areas.

B.C. Hydro railway can make its profits as a transformer's back door and deliver the goods to any of five major railways.

It has been Hydro's policy for the last 20 years to buy property along the railway right-of-way for resale to rail-oriented industries, said Bill Mundell, Hydro rail's manager.

The line now has more than 200 spurs owned or leased to private companies which are provided with access to four transcontinentals and British Columbia Railway and Pacific Great Eastern Railway.

The railway opened June 29, 1960, as one of North America's last electrified railways to serve minister and Vancouver Transways Ltd.

After financial difficulties a London syndicate headed by the Vancouver and Victoria rail companies and incorporated them in 1897 as B.C. Electric Railway Co. Ltd.

By 1911 the company had 253 miles of track and 647 passenger and freight cars, but low population growth, material shortages and buses were put the railway in 1962 and changed its name to B.C. Hydro.

The line has not had a serious accident for years its top speed is 34 miles an hour and there a no schedule. It leaves when it's ready and as long as the goods arrive on the appointed day there are no quarrels about the hour.

Among The Last

PICTON — An old store — among the last of its kind — has a new look in Picton because of William (Bill) Ballas, youthful businessman who resides in Belleville.

Mr. Ballas purchased Lew's Dairy Store on Main Street East last July.

One of Picton's last "general stores," the small corner grocery now has new equipment.

Belleville resident for the past five years, Mr. Ballas also plans a business venture in his home city.

He will take over operation of the Star Food Market at 60 Dundas Street on the corner of Dundas and Church Streets.

Retired Teacher a Student

By LENNY WILLIAMSON
Staff Reporter

Some people never settle down.

Like Loyalist College student, George Mayhee, they job-hop all their lives.

Mr. Mayhee's last switch was his most dramatic — from retired high school science teacher to full-time, day school student in the communication course.

But, for Mr. Mayhee, his latest venture follows a lifetime pattern. He has alternated the role of pupil and teacher ever since he graduated from normal school in the 1930s.

Last June he retired from teaching science at Moira. Within two months he was back in school again, as a Loyalist student. Sharing classes with him are two of his former Moira students. He scorns the idea of a generation gap between classmates young enough, almost, to be his grandchildren.

"I don't feel any tensions and I don't think they do," he says. "We're all on a first-name basis here. The Loyalist kids are very polite, very friendly. They're all here because they want to be and that builds good relationships."

From his experiences as a secondary school teacher, community college student and father of two university student sons, Mr. Mayhee has drawn some conclusions about the function of colleges like Loyalist.

"For the kid who is at loose ends, who doesn't know what he wants, who is just drifting, Loyalist is the place," he asserts. "He gets a chance to sample anything he wants, while he makes up his mind where he's heading. This place is marvelous!"

Long before it became a pedeogogical fashion, Mr. Mayhee set out on a career of continuous education.

He taught in one-room country schools for eight years in Smithfield and Murray Canal before enlisting in the air force during the war. At his last elementary school he taught all grades from 1 through 10.

After his discharge he was part of the veteran's invasion of universities, earning a BSA degree in entomology from Ontario Agricultural College (now Guelph University).

He joined the civil service as an entomologist with the now-defunct Research Institute here, and left his research officer position after 11 years.

More schooling qualified him as a high school teacher and he taught two years in Brighton before moving to Moira to teach science in grades 9 through 11.

Last year he realized that his accumulated 13 years of high school teaching, war service in Canada and England and government service gave him the necessary 25 years to qualify for full pension. So he retired five years before he had to and went back to school.

Because of his degree and a night school typing course taken several years ago at BCI Mr. Mayhee can earn his communications diploma in two years instead of three. He is padding out the required courses with others in drama, person printing and drawing.

"They're not my thing, but I've enjoyed sampling them," he says.

With all the options available, why did a man trained in science choose an arts diploma in photography and news writing?

"Retirement is a problem," says Mr. Mayhee "I began thinking about it five years ago and went in for sports."

He took a course and got a glider pilot's licence. He took up golf and skiing.

"But you can't play at that all the time," he says. "How many people retire and quit life — either dying within a year or developing so many illnesses they can't enjoy themselves?"

Photography had long been a hobby so Mr. Mayhee decided to tackle it systematically and a course of paper denoting competence.

"It's the widest choice I ever made," he says. "I'm more relaxed than I ever was before. I'm here for the fun. I don't even care if I pass."

He has found classroom techniques an endless fascination and looks forward to getting into color next year. Relieved of the academic cregilia required of all university students, he has Wednesdays and Fridays free of classes, but returns to the college to put in an eight-hour stint each day in the darkroom. He goes back one night a week, while his wife, also a teacher, is taking an interest course.

"I didn't intend to put this course to use in a commercial way when I began," says Mr. Mayhee. "But I might do a little free-lancing. That's why I'm taking editing. I want to take feature writing next year. Who knows what the future holds?

"I don't know what's so unusual about me. I'm just doing what hundreds of others up here are doing, going back to school at night, except that I can do it by day."

Linda Lovelace Under Arrest

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (Reuter) — Linda Lovelace of the pornographic movie Deep Throat was arrested Thursday night on charges of possession of cocaine.

She was arrested with David Winters, 34, who testified himself as a producer and director.

Police said narcotics and vice squad officers raided Miss Lovelace's room at a hotel here and seized a vial of cocaine and a number of other illegal drugs.

Also in the room at the time were Miss Lovelace and Winters were arrested was George Spirari, a Las Vegas lawyer, who said he was there delivering a book to Miss Lovelace and Winters.

Temptation to Leave Land Is Increasing

MADOC—"Temptation" was the topic broadcaster-author H. Gordon Green chose for his subject as guest speaker at the annual banquet of the hastings Federation of Agriculture in the Kiwanis Centre here, Jan. 25.

"The temptation of -the farmer to leave the industry - and farming is an industry these days - is increasing. Now is the time to reassess the situation that farmers must operate so progressively and wealthily that they own hundreds of thousands of dollars," he said.

"In agriculture", he said, "we are no longer able to choose the kind of products we can produce. There are just too many people telling the farmer what to do".

Reminding the over-300 people present of the advantages of being a farmer, which are often taken for granted, he commented with fond memories on the neighborliness of the country folk.

"The farmers are kneed the last of the truly neighboring people -- it's part of the heritage..."Who will be the dear hearts and gentle people after this generation?"

Anglican Priest On Trial

He affirmed he would tell the truth and added: "As a Christian, I believe it is not proper to swear on the Bible."

The court refused a request from Heap's lawyer that the charges be withdrawn as Heap has dropped assault charges against Metropolitan Toronto policeman James McInnis.

The 43-year-old alderman said Toronto executive council has urged that charges laid during the strike at the company be withdrawn where possible to lessen bitterness.

At the time I laid the charge I was pretty angry at what happened to me and a lot of others," said Heap who says his glasses were knocked from his face on the picket line. "I have no quarrel with any one person."

Constable McInnis testified that Heap came up behind him, grabbed his lapel and shoved him in the chest causing the policeman to his grip on another man being carried to a police car.

The trial continues Feb. 11.

Your Horoscope

By BERNICE BEDE OSOL

Sunday, February 2nd, 1974

Aries (March 21-April 19) Whale you're in the mood this would be a good time to take care of correspondence and paperwork. Catch up before things pile up.

Taurus (April 20-May 20) Lay out a sensible budget now for present and future needs. You'll stick with it once you see on paper ways you can save more.

Gemini (May 21-June 20) Continue to pursue goals you've recently set for yourself. Get the support of persons who'll help further your aims.

Cancer (June 21-July 22) You won't be comfortable today if you try to set the pace for others. Go along with things as they are--a surprise is in store.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 23) Information will be gained from a serious discussion you will be having with a friend. A new insight will result.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Keep alert. Unusual opportunity is about you at this time. Don't dismiss it lightly because it comes from a strange source.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Let others know you are serious about an idea you've been toying with so they can help open doors you couldn't on your own.

Scorpio (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Don't take information that comes your way today at face value. Dig into things. You'll be a tough one to fool.

Sagittarius (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) You're likely to be in the middle solving a misunderstanding between two friends. They couldn't ask for a better arbitrator.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Responsibilities may be a little heavier today. Keep your eyes on the light at the end of the tunnel. Nothing you do now is in vain.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Social contacts made now offer more than just pleasant companionship. One in particular has a role in your future.

Pisces (Feb. 20-March 20) You may need to set an extra plate or two for dinner this evening. Someone who hasn't been with you for awhile is thinking of dropping in.

CP News Roundup

Commuter Train Said In Offing

TORONTO (CP) — The Globe and Mail says the Canadian transport commission will order train commuter service between Toronto and Barrie, Ont.

The newspaper quotes Ottawa sources as saying the commission will make public Monday its decision on an application by Canadian National Railways to discontinue its passenger service between Toronto, North Bay and Sudbury.

It quotes the sources as saying that rather than allow CN to abolish the passenger service, the commission will order the railway to set up convenient train service between Barrie and Toronto, including intermediate stops.

CN tested such a run for six weeks, beginning Nov. 1, 1972. The stops were Barrie, Bradford, Newmarket, Aurora, Maple and Union Station in Toronto.

Currently, CN has only one train a day running in each direction between Barrie and Toronto.

Expect Growth

QUEBEC (CP) — The Canadian construction industry should experience an 18.5-per-cent growth rate in 1974, a spokesman for the Canadian Construction Association said Friday.

Real L'Heureux, outgoing president of the association, told a news conference the industry's volume of business could rise to $32 billion in 1974, compared with $18.5 billion in 1972.

Seek Plant

OTTAWA (CP) — Negotiations for the establishment of a manufacturing plant on an Indian reserve at Sarnia, Ont., are nearing completion, the Indian affairs department said Friday.

Chippewa Industrial Developments Ltd., a band-owned corporation planning an industrial park on the reserve, is negotiating directly with Polorex Corporation of Buffalo, N.Y.

Plans call for the plant to manufacture plastic aerosol containers to be sold in the North American market.

Plan Envoys

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada has decided to establish diplomatic relations with four moderate Arab countries, External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp announced Friday. The four countries are Bahrein, Oman, Qatar and the Union of Arab Emirates. Canada imports only small amounts of oil from the four countries, but the external affairs official said recognition of the countries "couldn't do anything but help" any desired expansion of oil trade.

Act Criticized

TORONTO (CP) — The Ontario Federation of Labor (OFL) says the Ontario Labor Relations Act is a stumbling block to organized labor and discourages collective bargaining.

In an 18-page brief to be presented Wednesday to Labor Minister Fern Guindon, the OFL also criticizes the administration of the act by the Ontario Labor Relations Board.

Need Change

FREDERICTON (CP) — There is something "drastically wrong" in Canada in the application of the law among native people, the federal assistant deputy attorney general said Friday.

Dr. G. V. La Forest said native people need to know more about the country's legal system, which seems alien to them at times.

May Strike

SUDBURY, Ont. (CP) — Lloyd Wagner, a political science professor at Laurentian University, said Friday the faculty association is considering a strike to support its call for a 25-per-cent wage increase.

He told students the faculty has not had a wage increase for four years and has become the lowest paid faculty on any Canadian campus.

Suspend Rule

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States Environmental Protection Agency announced Friday the granting of a one-year suspension of 1976 standards for nitrogen oxide emissions to American Motors and 35 non-U.S. automakers.

A similar suspension was granted last July 3 to the "big three" U.S. manufacturers — Ford, General Motors and Chrysler.

Lewis Says GPs Unfairly Treated

EARLTON Ont. (CP) — Ontario's medical health plan discriminates against family doctors, Stephen Lewis, provincial New Democratic Party leader, said Friday.

Mr. Lewis, speaking at a news conference on the first leg of a northern western tour, said he will also take him to New Liskeard and Kirkland Lake, says 52 per cent of Ontario doctors earn general practitioners but receive only 41 per cent of total medical care payments.

He was commenting on statistics released Thursday by the health ministry giving the cost of operating the plan for the 1972-73 fiscal year.

Mr. Lewis said the figures show that family doctors earned an average gross income of $35,000 a year, almost $20,000 below the average for all other specialties.

"That discrepancy is so startling as to be indefensible," he said.

"What it means is that the Ontario Medical Association has no manipulated the fee schedule over the last several years that the position of the general practitioner is severely weakened."

Gas Mixup Fixed In Five Minutes

SUDBURY, Ont. (CP) — A plumbing foreman named Aldo Defend sawed through two parallel pipes last Sept. 24 and reversed their connections in the medical-gas system at Sudbury General Hospital. The job took about five minutes.

After hearing 39 witnesses in 15 days of testimony, a coroner's inquest into 23 deaths at the hospital has not yet been given a clear picture of what caused a fatal mixup in gases that the young foreman straightened out so quickly.

Already the longest inquest in Ontario history, with about 700, 000 words on the record and 89 exhibits stacked on tables in an improvised courtroom in a hotel ballroom, the inquiry appears likely to run for at least another three weeks.

Crown Attorney John Takach is filling pieces of a jigsaw together methodically, and more than 160 witnesses have been summoned, though not all are likely to be called.

Next week may find the inquest closing in at last on the central problem: Where and when were two pipes misconnected to send anesthetic nitrous oxide into lines leading to oxygen outlets in parts of a new medical wing last year?

Until the time is established, the five-man jury will have no way of determining how many of the 23—all of whom were prescribed oxygen in the wing between May and September— received nitrous oxide instead.

The only death firmly pinned to the gas switch is that of an 82-year old Catherine Dominic, who was given supposed oxygen to speed her out of an anesthetic last Sept. 7. Her immediate death after a minor bone-setting procedure aroused suspicion and led to the discovery of the crossed lines.

It was after this that Aldo Defend made his simple repair. But this was done a ... movement to straightening out cas delivery to the new section, rather than where the cross-connection occurred, as that it has no evident relationship to the original point of error.

Where this mistake happened will help to indicate when it happened, which in turn will likely determine how many of those who died may have been given the anesthetic mistakenly.

Imported Auto Parts Said Called 'Canadian'

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP) — Demands for guaranteed, stable, free trade for the United Auto Workers Union, said Friday he has evidence that the Big Three car producers are using parts made in low-wage countries in Canadian cars exported to the United States.

Speaking to the UAW's auto tariffs committee, meeting here for the third day, Mr. Gray said more and more "bastard" parts are finding their way into vehicles assembled in Canada.

The UAW intends to seek federal government investigation of imports of parts made in low-wage countries because of "the ever increasing integration of offshore parts in the Canadian auto industry," he said.

"We are seeing more and more evidence that the Big Three are bulking an auto-parts industry in various low-wage sections of the world, importing these parts and calling them as 'Canadian content' under the Canada-U.S. auto pact," he said. The new figures of the Canadian auto parts industry may be at stake.

The federal government should follow the United States government's example and carefully monitor the movement of such parts, he said.

The Canadian parts industry has also been hit by plants even more widespread than layoffs by the auto manufacturers, Mr. McDermott said.

The UAW intends to ask Ottawa to set up a special assistance fund to help industries affected by the energy situation, he said.

Mr. McDermott said Canada finished 1973 with a deficit for its car industries under the terms of the Canada-U.S. pact.

Stanfield Wants Sales Tax Pared

EDMONTON (CP) — Removal of federal taxes on clothing and building materials was demanded Friday by Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield as he continued to travel throughout Canada blasting the Liberal government.

Removal of the 11-per-cent federal sales tax on building materials would take them "to the edge off the soaring cost of housing," Mr. Stanfield said in a hard-hitting speech to the annual meeting of the Progressive Conservative Association of Alberta.

His appearance highlighted the opening day of the convention, which attracted about 1,000 delegates. Alberta Premier Peter Lougheed will address the convention today.

Mr. Stanfield, on a four-day visit to Alberta and British Columbia said living costs have risen 10 per cent in the 15 months since the narrow Lib-

Ontario To Admit Truckers

LANSING, Mich. (AP) — Wherever highway violence breaks out in Ohio and Pennsylvania, Michigan truckers will be permitted to use Detroit-area roads as a detour around the trouble, Michigan officials announced Friday.

The officials said Ontario has agreed on the waiting period normally required for Michigan truckers to obtain an Ontario licence permitting them to cross the province.

Normally such a licence, called an L licence, takes a minimum of three weeks to obtain. There will be no change in the $30 one-way fee for the L licence.

"Apparently some of the trouble (in Ohio) resulted when the secretary of the Michigan highway reciprocity board, Ralph

Roach said the board reached the agreement with the Ontario ministry of transportation and the Ontario transport board therefore.

Under the agreement, truckers company owners would notify the ministry of transportation that a rig is heading into Ontario.

When the driver reaches the border, he will present a special emergency L licence or a telegram from the ministry waiting for him, Roach said.

The Ontario route is several miles shorter between Michigan and the U.S. Northeast than the Pennsylvania route, Roach said. The Canadian route is longer, however, for trucks heading for the U.S. southeast.

The special licence will be good for two weeks and may be extended if trouble persists in Ohio and Pennsylvania, where highways have been blockaded by independent truckers protesting rising costs, Roach said.

Trade Chances In Iraq Good

OTTAWA (CP) — Three MPs have returned from a 10-day visit to Iraq where Canada is missing out on business opportunities there—not to mention its future oil supplies.

Ralph Stewart (L—Cochrane), Heath Macquarrie (PC—Hillsborough) and Douglas Rowland (NDP—Selkirk) said Friday they got the impression the government and national oil company of Iraq want to use Canadian technological help in return for guaranteed oil supplies.

They indicated a distinct possibility of a bilateral arrangement," said Mr. Rowland.

The best of the agreement would be that Canada supply the technical help and equipment to help Iraq develop its new oil fields.

In return, he said, Canada would be guaranteed supplies.

Save Energy

WASHINGTON (Reuter) — The adoption of daylight time in the United States has resulted in a two-per-cent reduction in use of electricity, the US government agency said Friday.

However, the Federal Energy Office added, at least five school children have been killed in the pre-dawn hours since the clocks were changed Jan. 6.

Whisky Helps Heart Victims

VANCOUVER (CP) — A shot of whisky can help a heart attack victim through the first crucial moments of the attack, says Dr. Pierre Grondin, head of surgery at the Montreal Heart Institute.

Dr. Grondin, here Friday to attend the annual cardiac symposium sponsored by the British Columbia Heart Foundation, said acute pain and anxiety are the two most frightening experiences for the heart attack victim.

He said if there is no medicine available one should administer a shot of whisky to the victim.

"Alcohol is an excellent painkiller. It also calms the nerves. That's very important," said Dr. Grondin.

If there is no whisky available and no other medication, the doctor said to give the patient aspirin or "anything to serve as a painkiller."

Contractor Argues Gifts Legitimate

TORONTO (CP) — Walter Zanussi, president of Structform Ltd., told the royal commission on violence in the construction industry Friday he saw nothing wrong with giving expensive trips as gifts to four building executives connected with his company, giving him more than $1.7 million worth of business.

County Court Judge Harry Walsberg said he found it "shocking" that Mr. Zanussi could not see anything wrong with giving gifts.

"Not only is it wrong, but it might be illegal," the judge said.

Mr. Zanussi disagreed, saying he does not think it was wrong and that "I never will so long as the gifts were not solicited."

Mr. Zanussi testified that he gave trips valued at more than $7,000 as Christmas presents to four and said the real cost was less.

Irwin Gelkie and partner Peter Burgess of Gelkie-Burgess Ltd., a contracting and engineering company, testified Alexander Johnson, vice-president of Structform Ltd., asked Ltd., W. Hanke, who said he was recently fired by Canada Wire, about the inquiry Thursday of the gifts from Mr. Zanussi.

Bruno Zanol told the hearing he had often been accused of belonging to the Mafia, but that the accusations were only part of a campaign to smear him and destroy his concrete-forming union.

Mr. Zanol, 52, who has been in the Teamsters, steelworkers and garment workers unions, said he helped organize various tradesmen into the concrete-forming union in 1960. It dissolved because of union rivalries, he added.

In the spring of 1968, he said, Agostino (Gus) Simone, business agent for Local 562 of the Labors' International Union, asked him to reorganize the concrete men and "I'll buy you a new car." Mr. Zanol said.

"Frank Gilles (of the crane-operators' union) and I then had it all arranged," Mr. Zanol said, and later that year they got the contractors to help them form the union.

During this period, some companies that did not sign with Local 562 were hit with more than $750,000 in arson and sabotage.

Bomb On Bus Kills Eleven

LEEDS, England (Reuter) — A bomb believed planted by Irish guerrillas blew up a bus on a North England highway early today, killing eight British soldiers, two children and an army wife.

The bomb ripped the bus in two and left the highway littered with wreckage and torn bodies. The bus was carrying soldiers and families home from leave.

"It was worse than anything I ever saw in Northern Ireland," said one surviving soldier.

At least 16 other persons were seriously injured.

The explosion came just 20 minutes after midnight when the bus, packed with servicemen and their wives, was heading back to Catterick army camp and Leeming air force base after picking the men up from weekend leave in Manchester.

Suspicion immediately focused on the Provisional wing of the Irish Republican Army which eight days ago announced it was increasing guerrilla activity on the British mainland.

The threat was followed by a fresh pair of letter bombs. The latest was one sent today to the London office of the Daily Express newspaper. A security guard lost part of his hand when the letter-bomb exploded.

About 20 persons survived the bus explosion and were taken to hospital.

"I was in France and Germany in the war but I never saw anything like this," one fireman said.

81 Per Cent Of Miners For Strike

LONDON (Reuter) — British coal miners have voted 81 per cent in favor of a national strike to press their pay demands on the government, it was announced today.

The announcement plunges crisis-ridden Britain into even more gloom.

The four-to-one mandate for a strike increased the likelihood of a crippling stoppage in the coal fields starting next Sunday unless a compromise solution is found in crucial meetings in the next few days.

The result of the strike vote, held in the coal fields Thursday and Friday, gives the miners' leaders authority to call a strike but does not automatically mean a strike.

The decision to call a strike rests with the union's 27-man national executive which meets Tuesday to consider its next move.

Union president Joe Gormley said immediately after the result was announced: "What we need is more cash on the table."

"This result will prove to a lot of people that we (the union leaders) know what the miners are thinking, rather than vice versa," he said.

The 81-per-cent majority was the highest for a strike in the union's history.

Truck Strike Idles 20,000

WASHINGTON (AP) — The strike by independent truckers made idle an estimated 20,000 workers in the United States today as it began crippling deliveries of meat and produce in some areas.

New violence was reported, .

Two drivers suffered shoulder wounds from bullets which struck their trucks near New Buffalo, Mich., and Louisville, Ky., Sunday night. A Pennsylvania official said there has been 14 shootings at trucks and up to 100 other violent incidents since last Wednesday. One trucker died in violence related to the shutdown last Thursday.

About 3,000 National Guards troops stood watch today on Ohio and Pennsylvania highways. Federal and state officials received a Washington meeting early today without settling the growing shutdown that has affected at least 28 states. Thousands of trucks are not operating, hundreds of truck stop stations-cafes have closed since Thursday.

Federal energy chief William Simon, Gov. Milton Shapp of Pennsylvania, representatives of five other states and spokesmen for some independent drivers participated in the Washington meetings that were to resume today after two unsuccessful sessions Sunday.

Simon said the ICC is opposed, but did not rule out, a rollback in diesel-fuel prices. A rollback is a key demand by the strikers. They say diesel fuel has gone to 47 cents a gallon from 33 cents in eight months. A U.S. gallon is three-fourths of a Canadian gallon.

Shapp proposed a 65-day moratorium on the truckers' shutdown to avert "pending economic disaster." But spokesmen for the striking independents, and drivers interviewed in several states, said they won't roll again until diesel fuel prices are cut, freight rates are raised and until they are allowed to pass along higher fuel costs.

By Sunday night, the shutdown was having some affect in 20 states from Connecticut to Florida, across the South and Midwest and from Texas to California.

Pennsylvania activated 2,500 National Guard troops to relieve 1,400 others who had been watching highways since Friday. Ohio Gov. John Gilligan ordered 900 troops into similar duty.

One immediate concern was food. An estimated 20 meat-packing plants in Iowa, Michigan, Oklahoma, Texas and Pennsylvania were closed or reducing operations, making idle at least 8,000 workers.

The head of a grocers' association in Massachusetts said the flow of meat, citrus and produce into his area has slowed to virtually nothing, and he predicted an impact on consumers in a few days.

Golan Guns Are Firing

From REUTER-AP

Syria said artillery and tank battles between the Syrians and Israelis broke out along the entire length of the Golan Heights today.

A Syrian spokesman said the Israelis started the bombardment and Syrian artillery returned the fire.

The fighting was continuing two hours later, he said.

Syria reported heavy fire all day Sunday on the Golan Heights and said its guns inflicted severe damage, on Israeli positions in the heaviest fighting since the October war.

The Israeli command in Tel Aviv denied there were any Israeli casualties and said the Syrians fired only sporadically with machine-guns, artillery and anti-tank weapons.

Damascus said its guns destroyed a missile site, three tanks, a mortar batteries and two halftracks with their occupants. Israel said "a few shots have been fired" and denied any of its tanks or halftracks were destroyed. But it made no comment on the other Syrian statements.

Teachers Said Unionized

Trustee Body Asks Labor Act Apply

TORONTO (CP) — About 550 school trustees from across Ontario resolved Saturday that teachers should be subject to the Ontario Labor Relations Act and should have the right to strike.

The two-day conference of the Ontario School Trustees Council (OSTC), attended by representatives of about 145 school boards, produced strong motions urging that teachers be treated as unionized employees, to be dealt with by collective bargaining, not by individual professional contracts.

The theme of the conference was whether to revise or reject Bill 275, proposed legislation governing negotiating procedures between school boards and teachers.

Unanimously, trustees voted by show of hands to ask Education Minister Thomas Wells for major revisions in the bill to eliminate centralized government control of compulsory arbitration as the means of resolving deadlocks.

Instead of compulsory arbitration, trustees called for teachers to have the right to strike, but to be subject also to other provisions of the labor act, as any other group of employees.

The resolution asked that "teachers be given the right to strike under legislation similar to that in the Labor Relations Act, but tailored to the needs of the educational system."

An amendment called for a review of all protection now enjoyed by teachers under various school laws, with a view to replacing individual teacher contracts by collective bargaining.

Saturday's session under the chairmanship of Peter Bargen of the Grey-Bruce Roman Catholic Separate School Education, attempted to collect resolutions to be formalized at the OSTC's executive council meeting next week.

Mr. Hillyer came under sharp attack for conducting show-of-hands votes on resolutions instead of having school boards vote by letter with a weighted-vote system which would give large boards greater influence in decision-making.

Fiona Nelson, chairman of the Toronto board of education, the largest in the province, condemned the attempts of the OSTC executive to "railroad through" resolutions.

In an interview following the final plenary session, Mrs. Nelson said she is disgusted by the "spirit of spite and vindictiveness against teachers" that dominated the conference.

Referring to a speaker from the floor who said, "Let us at those bastards, we will beat them to a pulp," Mrs. Nelson said such an ugly attitude towards teachers is an ill omen for our educational future.

A strong theme repeated by many trustees was that the new legislation must prohibit teachers from taking disruptive actions such as working-to-rule, withdrawal of "co-curricular services, sick-ins and study sessions.

The conference also received resolutions calling for principals to refrain from negotiating on behalf of teachers and for teachers to be disqualified from membership on school boards.

The conference chairman ruled that a motion calling for the resignation of Mr. Wells could not be considered by the OSTC.

Mr. Hillyer's decision in this matter was defended by OSTC chairman Gerard Barbeau of Sudbury who said "rational dismissals" is preferable to "a kick in the teeth."

Trustees unanimously adopted a resolution calling on Mr. Wells to take no action on Bill 275 until he has time to consider the contents of a brief which the OSTC is preparing for him as a result of the conference.

The OSTC 16-member executive is to meet this weekend to begin drafting its version of Bill 275.

Executive director Peter Bargen said the bill as it stands would make it "almost impossible" to limit teacher bargaining only to direct and indirect money matters.

The bill would allow teachers to bargain over "terms and conditions of employment" and the OSTC says this unlimited scope would dilute the effective management of schools. It says, for example, teachers should not be allowed to bargain over class size.

The OSTC also said laws should be amended to eliminate compulsory membership of teachers in the Ontario Teachers' Federation (OTF) and school boards should no longer be required to collect OTF membership fees from teachers.

The OSTC added the bill would make the OTF the teachers' bargaining unit but the OSTC believes bargaining rights should lie with the local teachers' groups.

Essex, Huron-Perth Disputes Settled

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

Schools will be open in York and Essex Counties today but will remain closed in Huron-Perth, although negotiators reached a tentative agreement between the separate school board and the 139 teachers early today.

A board spokesman said the teachers will meet to ratify the agreement today and the board will meet tonight.

The 19 separate schools in Huron-Perth, where the board accepted the resignations of 107 teachers Friday, were closed Friday and were scheduled to remain closed today for "professional development days."

The agreement was reached after a 13-hour bargaining session Sunday. Talks had broken off earlier Friday.

In Essex County, the 27 separate schools were closed Friday. However the teachers voted 172 to 168 Sunday to ratify a two-year compromise agreement which covers working conditions for both years but salaries for only one year.

The agreement provides for an 8.7-per-cent increase in salaries which will range from $5,524 to $18,264, depending on academic qualifications and years of experience.

The board's contribution to fringe benefits will be raised to 100 per cent from 66 per cent. The teachers also gained grievance procedures.

In York County, all 15 schools will open today but Myrna Osbourne, the board chairman, said "we still have the right of early dismissal if the staff who didn't go on strike can't cope."

Of the 822 teachers employed by the board, 687 have resigned.

Two MPs Back Nurse

TORONTO (CP) — Two members of Parliament have thrown their support behind a nurse in nearby Oshawa who charged last week that she was demoted from her job in an Oshawa hospital for refusing to assist at abortions.

Ed Broadbent, New Democratic MP for Oshawa-Whitby, and Norm Cafik, Liberal MP for Ontario, told a panel discussion Sunday night that it was wrong for any worker to be forced to do something against his or her conscience.

Miss Marie Palmer, a Roman Catholic nurse, charged last week that she was reassigned to another nursing unit at J.O..Ruddy Hospital because of her reluctance to help in abortions.

Embargo May Go

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Omar Sakkaf, Saudi Arabian foreign minister, says the Arabs will lift their oil embargo "when the United States proves it takes no pro-Israeli stands." Sakkaf's statement in an interview published Sunday in the Beirut newspaper Al Anwar coincided with a report in the Lebanese daily An Nahar which quoted informed Arab sources in Washington as saying the embargo will be lifted March 1.

Ships Icebound

SAULT STE. MARIE, Mich. (CP) — Four ships were icebound Sunday in the St. Mary's River including a ferry connecting Sugar Island to the United States mainland, a spokesman for the U.S. Coast Guard said. However, a spokesman for the ferry service said operations were expected to resume late Sunday.

Greeks Released

CAIRO (AP) — A Pakistani airliner landed here today with three gunmen who had held two hostages aboard a Greek freighter in Karachi harbor. The hostages were released after the Greek government agreed to commute the death sentences of two Palestinian terrorists.

Builders Questioned

SAO PAULO, Brazil (Reuter) — The builders and architects of a skyscraper destroyed by a blaze in which more than 220 persons died appear before a court of inquiry Tuesday. The court will be sifting evidence in the survivors of Friday's disaster to establish whether there was any negligence in construction or planning the 21-storey building. Mayor Miguel Colasuonno said he believes the building contained large quantities of inflammable plastics.

Gunmen Still on Boat

SINGAPORE (Reuter) — The government has offered to take four guerrillas holding three hostages on a ferry boat in Singapore harbor to any diplomatic mission in Singapore because their boat is in danger of sinking, the government said today. Earlier, a government spokesman told a news conference that finding a place to take the gunmen and finding a place for them to go are the main obstacles to a settlement of the problem.

Want British Reactors

LONDON (CP) — An all-party House of Commons committee today urged the British government not to buy United States nuclear reactors but to concentrate on the construction of British reactors instead.

Mr. Redditt died Jan. 30 in Trenton Memorial Hospital following a lengthy illness.

Born at Richmond Hill, he was the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. George Redditt and had lived in Wooler and Trenton before moving to Stirling three years ago. He was a member of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, he had worked as a butcher at Bell's Meats in Trenton before his retirement.

Aside from his wife, the former Ruth Stevens, he is survived by daughters Mrs. J. (Janet Marie) Taylor of Fort Lauderdale, Fla., and Mrs. S. I. (Audrey) Tiffney of Trenton and by sons Wilbert G. Redditt Jr. of Belleville, Thomas of Trenton, nine grandchildren and one great-grandchild.

A son, Donald Redditt and three brothers, Robert, Harry and Wilfred, predeceased him.

Car Hits Guide Posts

MADOC (Special) — An RR 1 Eldorado man escaped personal injury Saturday when the car he is driving went out of control on Highway 62, six miles north of here, and collided with a series of guide posts.

Glen Beggs, 42, the driver and sole occupant was uninjured. The car he was driving sustained $700 damage. Madoc provincial police estimate.

Winter Sports Conditions Good

TWEED (Special)— Snowshoeing, skiing and snowmobiling conditions are good northeast of here, Ministry of Natural Resources officials report today. Snow depth in the bush ranges from 11.5 inches at Tweed to 15.0 inches at Bon Echo, measurements made by the ministry indicate.

With the exception of Matinawa Lake, ministry officials report all area lakes will carry snowmobiles.

Snowmobilers are advised to use caution when riding on Matinaw Lake. The blue ice is not, covered by snow. As of Thursday last week, the lake was ice, the lake was open in some areas.

Trailer, Car Damaged

MARMORA (Special) — A rear-end collision on North Hastings St. here Sunday resulted in $300 damage to one car and a trailer hitched to a parked car.

A vehicle driven by David Brian Brooks, 18, of RR 1 Marmora collided with a car and trailer assembly owned by Richard Weldon Prindle of Octavia St., Belleville. The Prindle vehicle was parked.

Provincial police estimate damage to the trailer at $150, to the Brooks vehicles at $150.

Grin and Bare It

You might say 25-year-old growing contest Saturday night at the Klondike Ball by a hair. But after the winners had been announced the eight-year-old beard of the beagled orderly was cleanly sacrificed with his wife, Hannelor, right, finishing the job started by Joan Kreachbaum. The Sazzon act was part of the winter carnival activities taking place at Ben Bleecker Auditorium.

Later Date Proposed

Carnival Beats Weather Man

This year's winter carnival has come and gone in Belleville with only one important ingredient missing — snow. Many a flake fell in the five days the carnival was on.

Granted the weather was cold and windy with the combination often cutting down participation in some of the activities — namely viewing the torchlight parade and attending the Zwick's Island Park events.

But the indoor activities at Ben Bleecker Auditorium and at the Armory were well-attended and enjoyed by all.

There may be a change to a later winter carnival next year if this year's carnival chairman, Gerry White has his way.

"We'll like to see the carnival held later in February," he said. The weather is more dependable at that time.

"This year our indoor sports received a great response but our outdoor sports didn't do as well because...of the weather," said Mr. White.

The city's five-day winter carnival began Wednesday night with the crowning of 16-year-old Moira Secondary student Martha Bishop as Winter Carnival Queen. The competition was held at Centennial Secondary School.

On Thursday, the torchlight parade downtown was held, ending with a Beef-in at Victoria Park put on by the Outward Bound Club of Loyalist College. Friday evening saw the Carnival Stomp for teens at the Armory and a Lionsfest for the older crowd at Ben Bleecker Auditorium.

On Saturday, the Pancake Breakfast at the Legion Hall was held. Altogether about 500 people took advantage of this even held by the Club Alouette. About 125 pounds of pancake mix and gallons of coffee prepared a winning recipe to the many people who attended.

The ice sculpturing contest, put on by the student association of Loyalist College, was chiselled out of the list of this year's winter carnival activities Saturday due to a lack of participation.

But the men's open dart tournament at the ANAF club on Front Street carried on as planned as 128 players tested their skill at the boards.

Team winners of the day long event were the Whitby Falcons, made up of Al McGuire, Brian Laurie, Vince Astasio, and Gil Pounder.

Winning doubles were a pair from the Belleville Legion, Paul Hannah and Larry Macrae. T. Stock of Kingston was the award for best single dart player.

In the special women's event, the ANAF Jets, took the prize. The team was made up of Gladys Fitzgerald, June Newlands, Fay Evans and Jean Northey.

Rounding out the activities Saturday was the Klondike Night at Ben Bleecker Auditorium. About 500 people listened and danced to the music of The Sounds of Town.

Part of the activities there that night was the beard judging contest. Winner of the full-set beard trophy was Keith Smith of Brighton, while Mel Eckford of Belleville won for the trimmest goatee. Winner of the most original beard style trophy was Ray Dearborn of Belleville.

A happening, not part of that night's planned activities but one that brought a lot of fun anyway occurred when one of the entrants in the beard contest allowed his beard to be cut after the judging.

Winner of the Klondike Night door prize — a night in-Toronto, with accommodation and dinner courtesy of the Four Seasons and hockey tickets donated by H. J. McFarland, was 19-year-old Peter Wilson.

On Sunday at Zwick's Island Park, the planned sky diving had to be cancelled because of strong winds. Also cancelled was the cross-country ski race, snow shoe race and snowmobile rides.

But the outdoor carnival display put on by the Outward Bound Club of Loyalist College under Hugh Pepper went on as planned.

And at Dick Ellis Rink Sunday, Centennial Secondary School defeated Bayside to win the secondary school hockey tournament. The team from Centennial played to a 8-5 over the Bayside team.

Back at Zwick's Island the tug-of-war competition carried on. Some teams resorted to sneak tactics such as enlisting the aid of an immovable tree as part of their team. But after much heaving and hulling Trenton was the winner as the Lions Club.

While all this was going on, hunters made use of the frozen bay to skate or play hockey. And spectators watched as bowerstruck whoosh over the ice in the bay.

All in all, Belleville's fifth annual winter carnival, sponsored by the Lions, was a lot of fun for everyone. The weather may have not been ideal but there is some consolation in knowing that in only three months, the Quinte Exhibition will be in town.

Barrel of Fun

Injuries Are Minor In Spectacular Crash

TRENTON—A carload of young people miraculously escaped serious injury Saturday night when their car careened into the gas pump island at Orville May's gas station here.

Pte. John Robinson of CFB Trenton, reported as driver of the eastbound vehicle, Ricky Smith and Heather Johnson, all of undetermined addresses, received minor cuts and bruises from the crash. Two others, riding in the back seat, were uninjured, in the highway 2 incident, according to a hospital spokesman.

While out of control, the Robinson vehicle crashed into the rear of a pickup truck being refuled at the gas station. During impact, the attendant's office at the station land was demolished and the pickup truck forced several feet ahead.

Both Robinson and Miss Johnson were flung from the car following impact.

Belleville detachment provincial police report only that Robinson was believed the driver and no other information was available. There was no indication of extent of damage to either vehicle.

Channel Open

WELLINGTON — High water pressure on the Welling-ton shores of West Lake has been alleviated by opening a 50-foot channel in the harbor with a backhoe. A four-foot depth of water now is flowing through the opening dug by the machinery.

Efforts to remove the dam by blasting with dynamite failed earlier last week and ministry of natural resources employees decided to clear the entrance to Wellington harbor with a backhoe.

Week of Fun Begins At Trenton Air Base

The Carnival week includes a colection of events and bizzare contests designed to test the best and amuse spectators and participants alike.

According to Col. R. G. Rusch, Base Commander, the winter carnival is meant to brighten "an otherwise dull and dreary winter season."

The wide range of events includes an egg-throwing contest a log-sawing race, a rolling pin throwing contest between the Provincial Princesses) and a mustache contest.

Included in the opening day festivities were a boot-and-skate race, a potato sack race, a nail-pounding race between the provincial princesses and a slooshing race in which the provincial teams sloop, makeshift skis to their feet to complete a figure eight course. All activities took place on the hockey near the CFB yacht club.

The events are mixed parely for enjoyment, not for the sake of rivalary.

At the end of opening day, Trenton Sing-Out, a young people's singing group sponsored by CFB Trenton, provided energetic entertainment with high quality singing performances.

The provincial groups also presented spirited individual songs and cheers and introduced the Provincial Princesses.

The Astra Winter Carnival is scheduled to end on Saturday with finalists competing for top prizes Friday evening.

Decay Prevention Is Dentists' Aim

Smile more in '74 is the theme of Dental Health Week Feb. 4 through 10.

Objective of this year's Dental Health Week is to increase public awareness of the benefits of preventive dental health practices.

The Bay of Quinte Dental Society's 46 dentists are participating in the week with a booth at Quinte Mall Feb. 8 and 9 and a poster contest for grade 5 pupils.

Most dental disease in preventable, say dentists. Fluoridation of the water supply, for instance, reduces the incidence of cavities by as much as 50 per cent in children under 14.

Proper mouth care — brushing and flossing — will go a long way toward preventing cavities.

Dentists are taking this week help the public keep smiling. If everybody develops a bright and shining smile, the dentists will have failed themselves out of a good percentage of their work.

Brushing breaks up plaque and invisible film of germs and food debris that forms over the teeth. Clumps of germs in plaque turn certain foods into acids that eat the tooth enamel and cause cavities. Calcium in water helps deposits eat into the soft plaque to form hard deposits on the teeth.

Plaque is also an enemy to gums. The clumps of germs can attack soft tissue and cause ulcers.

Brushing is fine for teeth surfaces. But to reach the crevices between teeth and break up germ clumps just under the gum line dental floss must be used.

Alarm Box

Belleville firefighters responded to the following calls Sunday:

12.16 p.m. ... Cherney's Furniture World, on North Front St., malfunction of an alarm system. No trouble.

11.25 p.m. .. Queen Victoria Public School of Pine St. investigation into a report of smoke odor, faulty oil burner. No trouble.

Apartment Robbed

Thieves entered an apartment at 60 Bridge St. West over the weekend and stole over $90 in change and a transistor valued at $100, Belleville city police report today.

Chief Douglas Crosbie said there was no sign of forced entry into the apartment occupied by Guy Galbraith.

More on Inflation

Further to our observations on money, inflation and all, here are two interesting pointers on the subject: one taking an optimistic line (and since it concerns Britain there is nowhere to go but up), the other pessimistic.

First, Britain, and a full-page newspaper advertisement noting that the energy crisis has not dimmed the national spirit . . . then into "Your money buys more in Britain than ever before. Since last summer the Canadian dollar has increased almost 17 per cent in value against the pound."

By contrast, Globe and Mail columnist Richard Needham, characteristically gloomy when it comes to government and the way it handles money, had this to say in part: "It is my belief that we in Canada, in the States, in Britain, in the whole industrial world, are well on the way to the kind of inflation that broke the German mark in 1923. The presses are rolling — more, more, more paper money. . ."

He concludes with a warning from the London Economist. Predicting Britain's inflation rate this year will be from 15 to 20 per cent, the paper says that "no country with an annual inflation rate of more than 20 per cent has been or has remained a democracy. . ."

In Greece, in Spain, in Chile, Needham points out, "the colonels have taken over . . . in Japan, Western Europe, North America. They are around the corner. . ."

Could this happen? In Britain or even Canada? It would be against all tradition. After all the English-speaking world is not Greece, Spain or Chile, countries where stable government is alien to the national temperament, and dictatorship the norm. Nevertheless, it is an interesting point. Something in the pressure-cooker economies of the Western world may give, ultimately, and what happens then only time will tell.

Another Jet Down

A jetliner crash in the South Pacific, on virtually the same route and involving the same U.S. airline as a previous air disaster in Tahiti only a few months ago, is disturbing.

Both flights originated in Auckland, N.Z. A Canadian, a young man from Almonte, was the lone survivor of the Tahiti crash. In the crash at Pago Pago in American Samoa last week a number of survivors have been reported but among the 90 or so dead are nine Canadians.

The Pago Pago crash occurred in bad weather, with heavy rain squalls but in this event could the plane not have been diverted? This is only one of the questions the inevitable inquiry will have to answer. And it is this is a second blow to the reputation of the airline calling itself "the world's most experienced," as well as a cause for uneasy among the travelling public.

Happy Ending

Stuck on a hunting expedition with owner Glen Emerson of Cannifton, and taken to Toronto where he was found abandoned and lost by an elderly pensioner walking his own dog, the beagle's experience is not entirely uncommon.

Mr. Emerson hinted as much when he spoke of weekend big-city hunters around 401. He said this is a problem.

The same point was raised by a Quinte area resident in a letter that appeared on this page around the start of the hunting season. She spoke of dogs being stolen, leaving behind sad-eyed children and homes without a treasured pet.

In the case of Mr. Emerson's beagle it escaped the fate of some who, found wanting as a hunting dog, are simply destroyed.

Thanks to someone in the big city who cared, who took time to notice the dog still had its identification collar, Fred is back home again.

While Saltsman Blasts the System...

Andras Tries to Cope with Boredom-on-Job Problem

By RICHARD JACKSON

OTTAWA — Having conceded, in a burst of candor, that "something has to be awfully wrong when month after month we see those high unemployment figures and yet across the country employers complain that they can't find workers," Manpower Minister Robert Andras has offered a partial explanation of the contradictory situation.

It is that, more and more, there are jobs — distasteful, unrewarding, monotonous and perhaps just too grubbily tough — that an ever increasing number of Canadians refuse to take.

This might sound like another propaganda ploy by the Government that's using unemployment is not as bad as it's own figures make it look.

But it is not, for one reason because Robert Andras made the statement, and he has never gone for that "it's better than nothing" line with which some other members of cabinet have tried to window-dressing the figures.

Instead, Robert Andras, who inherited the unemployment and UIC mess from former Manpower Minister Bryce Mackasey, has been trying to do something more about it than pretend that it really is not all that bad.

He has now got his "manpower banks" operating in more and more centres where a man looking for work can run down the list of jobs available — something like buying booze at the liquor store — pick the work he wants and go out and nail down the vacancy and its pay cheque.

Further, he is hoping to do something about those "crummy jobs" more and more people avoid on the basis that grubbing along on unemployment insurance benefits is both a softer and sometimes better-paid touch.

He has been looking at a job done by E. S. Rice and Partners, well-known business and industrial consultants for the Council of British Columbia Forest Industries, on why some jobs were so difficult to fill.

The survey showed unemployment "paper" way down in tenth spot as the reason.

It is, the job itself, the survey showed, working conditions, level of pay, length of the working day, absence of any sense of prestige or pride and a dozen other things, that is the core problem.

So what can Robert Andras to about that?

Not much, except by convincing some employers that upgrading working conditions might pay off in productivity and profit.

And of course, when both the convincing is impossible and the job unfillable, open the immigration door to temporary foreign farm workers who are willing to take on the dirty jobs so many Canadians now seem to be scorning.

But the whole "fundamentally rotten" UIC system, by costing the taxpayer something more than an annual $1 billion.

He is a socialist, a graduate of the depression, and a product of the Calvinist article of faith that work is fundamental to society.

So for all his good intentions and his honest efforts, Robert Andras has to be in trouble when a prop and pillar of the NDP like Max Saltsman talks like this.

He insists that it is not only disgraceful but downright foolish for loader to take a job for 30 weeks, pay $50 into the unemployment insurance fund through the nose, and then rip off the taxpayer for $1,500 in benefits.

Max Saltsman worries that the UIC ripoff has become pretty well accepted practice among an ever larger group of non-workers.

He is realistic enough to recognize the world is changing — that it is not his kind of world any longer, and that it is getting less and less so with each easy welfare year.

He is concerned that the younger generation puts far less stock in the worth of work than he and the thousands of others who pulled themselves through the depression by their own bootstraps. No hitch-hiking, no three grim days on the welfare bandwagon which had not been yet officially declared open.

Even now, Max Saltsman sees the making of a Canadian class struggle to be fought in the not-far-off future between those who work, and those who don't and won't.

The workers will be bitter, perhaps even violent; and the lazy layabouts, scornful of the working people, will be laughing all the way to the "pogey" office.

Australia Withdrawing Troops From Singapore

By JOHN D. HARBRON
Foreign Affairs Analyst
Thomson News Service

Singapore, now a country and no longer the historic crossroads fortress of a long-dissolved British Empire in Asia, is feeling lonely these days.

This is because Australian Prime Minister Garth Whitlam announced the Australian army units in the island state will be withdrawn this year leaving only the British and New Zealand units to help Prime Minister Lee Kuan Yew protect his tiny but rich city-state from enemies real and imaginary.

It is true units of the Australian navy and two French-built Mirage fighter jet squadrons are remaining. But with Whitlam's concept of Australian isolation, the Singapore government is certain they will be gone as well by December of this year.

All this may sound curious to Canadians whose armed forces have never been used in this way on behalf of the defence of another Commonwealth nation. But the Australian commitment in Singapore goes back to the days of the Vietnam war when Australia had about 11,000 troops in Southeast Asia, about 8,000 in South Vietnam in combat, the rest in Singapore and their northern neighbor, Malaysia.

The reasons for the Australian decision are clear enough — to help this southern tier of Commonwealth countries fight off any new threat from Communist guerrillas. Their activities are endemic along the Malaysia-Thailand border, perhaps will be more so with the overthrow last fall of the long pro-American Thai military regime.

Yet the threat was not from Singapore which became an independent nation in the Commonwealth in Aug. 1965, five years almost to the week when the huge Japanese garrison surrendered to the Allied armies, in a large Chinese population, the premier himself being of Chinese extraction.

Yet the threat was not from them, since they are mainly the commercial and moneyed class in Singapore as in Malaysia. And if they support any China as all it's more likely to be the anti-Communist "Republic of China" on Chiang Kaishek's island of Taiwan.

The People's Action Party of Prime Minister Yew must suspect some intrusion of Communist Chinese influences in the big and mainly prosperous city or why has he maintained a total censorship on some today's free press? Penalties for violating it includes threats of government takeover of the news paper.

In an Island nation which produced one of the great English language papers of Asia, The Straits Times, this action still is not understood by many of his critics inside and beyond Singapore.

The small nation along with Malaysia has been worried in the past about Indonesian claims to parts of Borneo and Sarawak divided between Malaysia and Indonesia. The Singapore involvement is that the country was a state within the Federation of Malaysia from 1963 until independence and had known self-government in the emerging mainland Malaysia Federation from 1959.

This Asian city originally carved out of jungle and wilderness by Sir Stamford Raffles, one of the great European imperialists in Asia, still is the rich crossroads of Asia. Per capita income is high by any Asian standards, including the Japanese. And like Japan, Singapore is one of the healthiest Asian nations with low infant mortality and a steadily falling death rate.

A fly in the ointment is the unnecessary authoritarianism of the prime minister who always looks like a dictator among the other democratic prime ministers at their regular meetings, then goes home to keep on the clamp.

So far there's no one of the same strength or prestige to oppose him, although the Chinese language press, though censored, still tries to do so.

Robert Nixon Setting New Pace

By DON O'HEARN
Queen's Park Bureau
Thomson News Service

TORONTO — The Liberals are making a determined effort to revitalize their party into a real force in our provincial politics.

Since his confirmation as leader, Bob Nixon has announced plans for reorganization and new drive.

And they look good on paper.

He has named Jim Breithaupt of Kitchener as house leader, an appointment which frees him to get around the province more.

He has added to his staff and got his caucus really working on organization.

He has contacted all delegates who were at the convention which confirmed him, and solicited their views.

He has made the first efforts to try and bring some separation between the federal and provincial organizations so that the provincial party can have more muscle.

He is pushing for the ridings which now have joint federal-provincial executives to have distinct provincial wings.

And he is establishing a provincial council of all riding presidents which will concentrate solely on winning the next election.

Finally, of course, he is getting out into the province much more himself.

There may be some results, perhaps some really good results.

But this has to be a case strictly of seeing is believing.

For 30 years Ontario Liberals have made off and on efforts to revitalize their party.

At least twice they have tried to set up separate provincial organizations.

The efforts have really never worked.

They have started out with vim. Though perhaps not with as elaborate a preparation as in this case.

And always they have quickly lost their steam.

One factor which has always held the party back is that it has been saddled with old riding leadership which have been hard to dislodge.

Perhaps some of these have now passed on. Nixon may be able to shake up others.

It is one party he is vital to any success in rebuilding the party.

Gold was discovered in the Fraser River area of British Columbia 116 years ago today—in 1858. Hundreds of ships jammed with gold-seekers worked their way across the Gulf of Georgia to the Fraser, then made the dangerous trip up the swift-running river. Hundreds of men died without seeing a speck of gold while others made it and panned fortunes. When the gold fever died, thousands of prospectors stayed to found businesses and industries.

Provincial Premiers Show A Growing Sophistication

By DON O'HEARN
Thomson News Service

In modern days our provincial premiers have been on public view in meetings twice.

Once was in 1967 at John Robarts' Confederation of Tomorrow conference.

The span between these meetings is less than seven years. But to anyone who doubts that in those years government in Canada has changed greatly, all that is needed is evidence is a comparison between these two meetings and the participants.

The Confederation conference was a rather clumsy, show affair, not tackling any great height, and attended by a group of men who were reliable but who showed little speed, in the form of quickness of mind.

The energy meeting was a sharp contrast.

There was in the meeting itself and in the participants sharpness and conciseness, speed of thought and considerable style.

To grasp the extent of the change, perhaps the best tool is a look at the people involved.

In 1967 Joey Smallwood was still premier of Newfoundland. It could take Joey 15 minutes to ask you to pass the salt, in the interval probably cheering you up with a few corny jokes.

You can get any corny jokes out of Frank Moores. But you will get solid, sharp and persuasive argument.

At the Ottawa conference he was talking of Labrador's huge hydro potential and he had people thinking seriously about it, many of them probably for the first time.

In 1967 Ike Smith was leading Nova Scotia. He was still in Stanfield's chief money man. And that's the way he came across.

A far cry from Gerry Regan. This shy-seeming fellow is a compelling combination of vision and practicality. He has a sense and he talks it with force.

Alex Campbell of P.E.I. is the only premier who was at both conferences. At the 1967 conference he was the youngest of the premiers. He is still only 41 and he is a man who governs a province with a population less than many Ontario small cities but has a strong voice.

New Brunswick in 1967 had Louis Robichaud, a young but old-style French-Canadian politician. He did many good things for his province. But above all he was an orator.

Richard Hatfield is a lawyer who doesn't waste a word. He's reported to be sharp at a setback if so, it doesn't show. He comes across as a man of quiet intelligence, determined and able to get the break his province needs.

Dan Johnson was on the stage in Quebec in 1967. Quebec politicians are a breed apart. Politics in Quebec are more personal than any other province. And its politicians have unique style.

Robert Bourassa, while a Quebec politician, is probably the epitome of the new breed of provincial leader. At 41, he's relaxed, has style, can arrive when it comes to getting to the point.

Looking Backward

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FILES OF BYGONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO

February 4, 1954

In conjunction with National Safety Week which has been observed across the country, the Belleville Rotary presented a special program at the luncheon on Tuesday in the Centre. Charles Lusk and Don Allen were in charge of the meeting.

30 YEARS AGO

February 4, 1944

Every motor vehicle reported stolen in the City of Belleville during the year 1943 was successfully recovered, according to the annual report submitted to Police Commissioner by Chief Constable R. W. Probert at the meeting which was held to-day. In addition to the recovery of the twenty-two cars presented, a special program at the luncheon on Tuesday in the Centre. Charles Lusk and Don Allen were in charge of the meeting.

In addition to the recovery of the twenty-two cars presented, a special program at the luncheon on Tuesday in the Centre. Charles Lusk and Don Allen were in charge of the meeting.

In Ontario John Robarts was widely known as chairman of the board. This was a tag fitting to his reserved and cautious outlook.

Today we have 46-year-old Bill Davis, a showbiz type who goes for dramatic and visionary transportation schemes and idealistic philosophies such as the Design for Development.

In Manitoba there was Duff Roblin, another chairman of the board, though a more wistful one than Roberts. Roberts' board probably would have been that of a bank. Roblin's that of a company involved in moon shots.

Today there is Ed Schreyer, the most conservative of NDP leaders, but nevertheless an NDPer though more balanced than most.

Ross Thatcher was perhaps the most conservative Liberal Canada has known, even though he also was a former NDPer. When he talked you could vision yourself in the days of R. B. Bennett.

Allan Blakeney who leads Saskatchewan today under the NDP banner has perhaps the sharpest mind of all the present premiers, and a good sense of humor to go with it. You could pick him as perhaps a possible future leader of his party, except for a lack of star quality that national leadership demands.

Ernest Manning was another super-conservative, though under the Social Credit banner, and a man with a clear mind with an extreme caution and evenness for the ways of the past.

Today in Peter Lougheed, Alberta has found a conservative it can buy under a Conservative banner.

Where Blakeney perhaps has the most brains, Lougheed probably is the best poker player among the provincial leaders.

His chances are well calculated in his mind. He doesn't think he has to be all that dry out of a round and wait unless the odds are good. At the same time he is not afraid of some bluffing to build up a pot where the odds are not quite so in and gas.

He has been much talked of as a future PC national leader and perhaps prime minister. All that is to be said about that is that it could rest with what the people happen to be looking at a particular time. For he also has a distinct personality which could turn some people off.

Which takes us over the mountain to the former fiefdom of Ernest Manning.

For years it thrived on its natural resources, most of which it sold in an underdeveloped state.

Dave Barrett is trying to get the economy of his province more diversified and stable.

He may succeed. But he has one habit which has to be diagnosed as sick by anyone who has been in politics for any length of time.

He is constantly trying to prove his case by quoting things he has said. And today, of course, you can find a book to prove pretty much any case.

And anyone who believes that Barrett's words, and presumably Barrett does, has to be a bit naive.

Change in Owners

The John R. Bush Funeral Home on Highland Avenue has been serving local residents for nearly years. Starting out in 1914 as the Belleville Burial Service, the company has expanded and grown in the following 60 years. In 1970, the Canadian-owned company was purchased by a Des Moines, Iowa company, International Funeral Service Incorporated. Recently, the business reverted back to Canadian hands as R. Douglas Rushnell, president of Quinte Funeral Centres Ltd. standing in front of the business, assumed new ownership.

Home Again Under Local Ownership

The John R. Bush Funeral Home has had a long tradition of serving Quinte area residents.

Now once again, the business is locally owned and operated under the personal direction of R. Douglas Rushnell and John R. Bush.

Mr. Rushnell, president of Quinte Funeral Centres Limited, announced this week the purchase of The John R. Bush Funeral Home from International Funeral Service Incorporated of Des Moines Iowa. It had been under American ownership since 1970.

The company originally started as the Belleville Burial Service in 1914. In 1956, it became the John R. Bush Funeral Home and in 1970 was sold to the company in Des Moines.

On Feb. 1 of this year, the John R. Bush Funeral Home assumed a new owner. Douglas Rushnell, Vice-president of Quinte Funeral Centres Ltd. is now the funeral director and secretary to W. A. "Art" Newman. Treasurer is Mary M. Rushnell.

Fleet manager is Stan Healey. Funeral directors are Doug Campbell, James Daniels and Colin C. Tennet.

Besides the John R. Bush Home, Quinte Funeral Centres Limited also operates the Rushnell Funeral Home in Trenton.

Mr. Rushnell started as an apprentice with the old Belleville Burial Service in 1947, the first one of that business. In 1955, he moved to Toronto, still maintaining his association with the funeral business.

In 1959, he and his family moved back to the Quinte area and in 1961 he started the Rushnell Ambulance Service in Trenton and later that year, the Rushnell Funeral Centre which he still maintains.

Mr. Rushnell was born in the Quinte area and attended Belleville Collegiate Institute. Married with five children, he said about the change: "I'm pleased to have the opportunity to serve residents of the Belleville area and look forward to getting acquainted with the people here.

Auxiliary Officers Of ANAF Installed

By HOWARD KOKESH

Provincial Vice-president R. G. Burns and unit president H. G. Ford conducted the election and installation of officers of the Ladies Auxiliary Dale of Edinburgh Unit 360 ANAF recently. The executive for the ensuring year are: Presidents Allen L. Storms, Jr.; 1st vice-president Jean Northey; 2nd vice-president, Anna Feeney; secretary Mabel Galbraith; treasurer, Elizabeth Buckley; executive body Isabel Kellar, Eileen Sills, Joanne Bakwell and Shirley Tapp. Terry Cusack will be the Sgt.-at-arms for the coming year.

The ladies auxiliary lost a valuable member with the recent death of Mrs. Ivy Boyle. A memorial service was held by the members at the Thompson Funeral Chapel and the sympathies of the members are extended to the members of her family and in particular to her husband Pat.

On the sports scene, things will be back to normal this week following the Winter Carnival dart tournament. Both the ANAF clubrooms last Saturday. Some of the best dart players in Eastern Ontario were in attendance and resulted in keen competition. The results are covered in a separate news release back in the local press. Tim Boisvert and his committee deserve a word of credit for a well organized and run tournament.

Mixed euchre will be held in the clubrooms on Tuesday evenings, while the Saturday afternoon dart doubles resume this week. The next Saturday evening mixed darts will be held on February 16.

The most successful Saturday afternoon dart double results are: 1st round winners, Don Watts and Ed Latham; runners up Bill Salter and Bob Benn; 2nd round winners Butch Doolittle and Larry Pope; runners up Tim Boisvert and Ed Latham; 3rd round winners, Dick Thomson and Larry Pope; runners up Paul Hannah and Doug Young; 4th round winners, Rick McNamee and Bill Salter with Paul Hannah and Bob Brooks as runners up.

Wendy Reid and Mamma Cat return for a Friday night engagement of music and singalong entertainment this week. The Friday night meals in the Tartan Lounge will be resumed this week by the ladies auxiliary. Entertainment chairman Cliff Ouderkirk has a big Valentine Dance planned for Saturday Feb. 16, music by Hart and Seal, an evening all members should plan on attending.

Sick—comrades in hospital are: Roy Foran, room 308 and George Slorem, room 321 Belleville General Hospital while Herb Campbell is in Queen's Self Care Unit room 8.

Sam's Sermon: Women have a passion for arithmetic. They multiply their ages by two double the price of their dresses, treble the Prime Ministers salary, and add five years to the ages of their best friends.

South African Election Called

CAPE TOWN, South Africa (AP) — Prime Minister John Vorster today called a general election for Wednesday, April 24, a year before one is required by law.

Announcement of the early balloting had been expected for weeks. It was NOW that Parliament after Opposition Leader Sir Vilikers Graaf moved that the government had lost the confidence of South Africans.

Officers May Now Serve Longer On Board of Bridge St. Church

Property and personnel United Church congregational board may now serve up to three years instead of the one year for which they were formerly elected.

As result, Robert Ord will continue for another two years as chairman and Fred Deacon for a similar period as vice-president.

The recent annual congregational meeting of the church saw division chairmen present reports and new members named to the board.

Church minister Rev. George K. Ward conducted a brief memorial service for the 23 church members who had died during the past year.

Mr. Ord reported that an October congregational meeting ratified transfer of proceeds of the Charlotte Sills bequest to the Bridge Street Church Foundation. A complete report of the Foundation was given by directors.

An amendment to the constitution had been approved allowing the board chairman and vice-chairman to serve up to three years.

William Black, chairman of the worship and membership division, reported a complete study had been made on the "plan of union." In May, George Phillips, former church member, was ordained into the ministry at Sydenham United Church at Kingston.

Stewardship and finance Division chairman Donald McIlvary reported contributions to the Every Person Canvass improved over 1973. However, a special appeal will be made to meet church work needs.

Education and Outreach division chairman Robert McKnight reported advertisements had been placed for a new director of christian education. A donation of $10,000 had been approved from the Bridge Street Foundation to the Dr. Robert McClure Health Care program.

Fred Deacon reported the committee had interviewed several applicants for Christian Education director.

The church budget was approved, subject to any changes which might be made by the finance committee.

Mrs. Ann Colebourne, senior choir president, reported that Robert Reid plans to offer the services of the choir to May. There will be the usual appearances — May 13-14.

She said the choir attempts to serve and enhance, through music, the spiritual impact of the worship service. Events include the hymn-sing, carol service and presentation of an oratorio.

Mr. Ord expressed appreciation to the YOW for their behind-the-scenes efforts, while Mr. Ward in turn complimented Mr. Ord for his service in various areas of church life and expressed thanks for the work of all church staff members.

Nominated to the congregational board for a three year period were: P. L. Allcorn, Cecil Brown, Mrs. R. E. Colebourne, Mrs. Ann Colebourne, Miss Elsie Hunt, Mrs. J. E. Nelles, Miss Rosalyn Robertson, David Thompson, Wm. J. Williams, Mrs. Clara Wilson, Robert Anderson, Mrs. H. W. Blakely, Dr. Bruce Crook, Rev. Neil Cruickshank, Mrs. Donald Prodham, Harold Seldon, Enos Ward, Donald Wilson, Dr. R. Gunsolus, Wm. Belch, A. D. Cameron, Harry Davis, Mrs. Jack Dayman, Arthur Hall, Percy McGuire. Two years: Mrs. D. H. Dalrymple, One year term: R. E. Berry, Victor Williams.

New directors for the Bridge St. United Church Foundation are Judge J. C. Anderson, A. D. Cass, Jack Canning, R. H. Cass, Rev. Harry Davis, John Deacon, Dr. J. G. Demeza, John O'Hara, Mrs. Barbara Nelles, Robert Ord and Donald Williams.

Honored by Town

Mayor of Trenton, Robert Patrick, presents a gift to Roly Whitley at the Trenton Country Club. Whitley was honored by many guests on Saturday night for his outstanding contributions to the Town of Trenton.

Tribute Is Paid To Roly Whitley

TRENTON—High point of Trenton Chamber of Commerce annual meeting Saturday night was the tribute to Roly Whitley honored his service to the community.

Mr. Whitley has served as President of the Victorian Order of Nurses, President of Lions Club, President of the Lower Trent Valley Fish and Game Club, Commodore of the Yacht Club, board of education member and is well-known as a former mayor of Trenton. Among his other jobs, he worked as a tinsmith apprentice, a chauffeur, carpenter, mason and contractor.

As a contractor, Mr. Whitley has constructed several of the buildings in Trenton and many organizations owe him the credit for their establishment.

As a past-commodore, he was a founder of the Yacht Club and responsible for the original Yacht Club building. Unfortunately, as O.G. Larry pointed out, "the building was a victim of vandalism and finally disappeared."

Tributes were heard from Jess Campney, a schoolmate; Bob Smithrim, fellow member of 1953 Council and Rev. V.P. perierces with Roly on the peerinces with Roly on the Board of Education.

Presentations were made by Eric Gordon on behalf of the Lions Club, Mrs. Bob Patrick for Trenton Citizens, James McDonald and His Worship Robert Patrick.

Mrs. Patrick commended Roly for his "effective part in as many citizen-orientated activities."

Mr. Whitley entertained the large crowd of Chamber members and wives with his sharp wit and brief anecdotes balanced with more serious moments of sincere thoughts and feelings.

Reinstated

MISSISSAUGA, Ont. (CP) — A judicial board of reference has ordered the Peel County board of education to reinstate a teacher who was acquitted on a charge of possessing marijuana.

Robert Livesey, who was dismissed from his job as English teacher at T. L. Kennedy secondary school in October, 1973, six months after he was acquitted, appealed his dismissal by means of a legal procedure involving his professional association, the Ontario School Teachers Federation.

Quinte Cuisine

Lynn Elliott, student at Loyalist College, makes this orange bread to serve with afternoon tea. Light and easy, this "bread" is really a cake, but Lynn bakes it in loaf pans and slices it like bread. Since it freezes well, she suggests doubling the recipe, so that you always have a loaf or two on hand.

Orange Bread

¼ cup oil
1 cup sugar
2 eggs
rind of one orange, grated
1½ cups flour
½ tsp. salt
1 tsp. baking powder
½ cup milk

Mix the oil, sugar, eggs and orange rind together thoroughly. Sift the dry ingredients and add them to this mixture alternately with the milk. Stir the batter well, and pour into greased loaf pan (either one medium-sized or three small ones). Bake in a 350 degree oven for 50 or 60 minutes, or until a knife or toothpick comes out clean.

Punch small holes in the top of the loaf with a toothpick or skewer, and glaze with ½ cup sugar dissolved in the juice of one orange, heated to the boiling point before being poured over the loaf.

Snow-shovelling Back Savers

TORONTO (CP) — Try a few warm-up side bends and deep knee bends before you go out to shovel the snow, and you may avoid snow-shovellers' back.

Dr. Leo Rosenberg, vice president of the Ontario Chiropractic Association, says the average shovel-load is magnified to 100 times its weight on the back.

"Coupled with the fact that it's an unaccustomed exercise, it can lead to back trouble."

He offers some tips for pain-free shovelling.

Do warmup side bends and deep knee bends first.

Shovel bilaterally, using alternate arms.

Using a snow-blower can be just as hard on the back if you push it for long periods in a bent position. Stop, straighten up and flex and stretch the spine at frequent intervals.

Crisp Lines in Spring Fashions

Although all her lines were clean and crisp, she presented items almost anywhere between knee and floor, necklines of nearly every style imaginable, and every shape in the rainbow.

She also presented swirling long skirts with off-the-shoulder tops, one-shoulder as well as strapless gowns, and sequinned bodices. Harem slits, and even bathing suits hidden under slim black linen dresses, made the scene, too.

Bikl, another woman designer, "down home" line for her wedding gown—with bridesmaids decked out like farm maids.

Hats played an important role in her designs. The safety man's cap, such as that worn by Mark Phillips, husband of Anne's husband, found a place atop collegiate-looking casual daywear.

Baker – LaRocque

College Hill United Church was the setting for the January 19 wedding of Janet Ann LaRocque and Leo Richard Baker, performed by Rev. Roy Veasey.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A.G. LaRocque and the groom is the son of Mr. adn Mrs. Fred Baker.

Given in marriage by her father the bride wore a gown of sheer organza with Queen Ann neckline heavily re-embroidered with Swiss guipure lace. The front of the gown and sheer bodice had an overlay of appliqued lace and seed pearls and the hemline was edged with lace. The removable train fell from the back of the waist in chapel length Her lace Juliette cap held a fourtiered scalloped shoulder length veil. She carried a nosegay of red rose buds and white pom-pon mums.

The flower girl, Wendy Galpin, cousin of the bride, wore a gown with a white swiss dot top and red velvet skirt.

Best man was Joseph Scott, and the ushers were Stephen Moore and Len Baker, brother of the groom. The ring bearer was Larry Sine, nephew of the groom.

After the reception and dance was held at the Odd fellows Hall the newly-married couple travelled East on their wedding trip.

Mr. and Mrs. Baker will be living in Belleville.

Sullivan – Harrison

WP Mon. with pic indent jm

The winter wedding of Donna Marie Harrison and Peter Raymond Sullivan took place in St. Joseph's Church, performed by Msgr. Carley.

The bride is the daughter of Carl and Juliette Harrison of Plainfield, and the groom is the son of Ray and Marg Sullivan of RRI, Plainfield.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a gown of satin peau de soie with a scooped neckline edged with Viennese lace and long lily-point sleeves. A flowing train was attached to the waist with a bow, and the shoulder-length veil fell from a Juliette cap studded with seed pearls. She carried a cascade of red roses.

Bella Meracle, maid of honor, wore a pink crepe gown with an empire waist and scooped neckline and long sleeves. She carried a bouquet of mixed red and pink roses.

Bridesmaids Elaine Stewart, the groom's sister, and Joan Harrison, bride's sister, were turquoise gowns with scooped necklines, empire waists, and bell sleeves. They carried bouquets of mixed red and yellow roses.

James Cross, the groom's cousin, served as best man. The ushers were Dale Sullivan, the groom's cousin, and Stephen Harrison, the bride's brother.

After a reception in the Plainfield Hall, the bride and groom travelled to Niagara Falls. They now live at 74 Lewis St., Belleville.

Ann Landers

She Wants Cosmetic Operation, Parents Violently Opposed

Dear Ann Landers: I have a very personal problem — at least it's one I've never seen in your column.

I am trying to make a very serious decision, one which my parents oppose. My fiance agrees with me and my minister says I should decide only after serious prayer.

I am a young girl, considered quite attractive, happy and healthy, but I am crippled. I have worn a large built-up shoe on my left foot since I was three years old. My leg is healthy in every respect, and actually it's just as strong as the other one, but it is five inches too short.

On my 18th birthday I informed my parents that when I became 21 I was going to have my lower leg amputated so I could be fitted with an artificial limb the same length as the other.

They were violently opposed, saying such things as, "You have no right. God created you this way for a reason." Every time I mentioned it they tried to shame me out of it.

Ann, it's my leg and my life and I can't see why it would be wrong to rid myself of this ugly shoe. My fiance has told me repeatedly that it make no difference to him if I have one leg or two. Please let me have what you think.—Is A Quandary

Dear Q: I took your letter to Dr. Henry Beltz, head of the Rehabilitation Institute in Chicago on whose board I serve. Dr. Beltz referred me to one of the country's foremost authorities on amputees, Dr. Robert G. Thompson, an orthopedic specialist.

Dr. Thompson said, "It is now standard practice in patients who have a short extremity (with that much discrepancy) to suggest a below-knee amputation. This is now being suggested for the very young so they will not grow up with a psychological handicap. If the young woman came to me I would recommend that the operation be performed."

And now about your parents' attitude. In my opinion they are being unfair when they attempt to make you feel guilty because you want to have this surgery.

If you are certain your fiance will not develop any hang-ups about the crutch, go ahead and have the operation. Please let me know when you walk down the aisle, looking the way you've always wanted to. And good luck, dear.

Successful Living

Mother Invited To Move In!

By DORIS CLAIRE

Dear Doris: In the ever a circumstance in which two generations can live successfully in one house, each having their own quarters? My daughter and son-in-law are wanting me to move to this new farm. They can't see why it wouldn't work out agreeably for all concerned.

Just the thought of having a garden to work in makes me want to start packing. Then, too, I'd have a reason to cook again for I love to cook but do very little in that line for myself.

But the family ties are strong and I want to keep them that way!

Not In Haste.

Dear Not: The catch about two women living in the same house is when both of them want to be boss. But when there are close bonds of love, two mature women can have a whale of a time.

Just be sure that there are some pretty definite lines drawn between your responsibilities and your daughter's. Be sure that you don't unwittingly come between your daughter and the man she married. Don't give him any cause for feeling that he and his wife as anything but the major unit in that household. And don't always be where they are.

Could you add a rider to your agreement? Have it understood that you will move in on a trial basis and nobody's feeling will be hurt if all three of you decide, six months from now, that it isn't working?

Dear Doris: I have been writing poems and prose for years, and have even published two books.

Could you direct me to where I could sell some of these? Printers do not make less than 250 in one lot, so I have some left to sell. I have tried in stores all over and the books just sit there until there comes a time when I am obliged to take them back.

Poems and Prose.

Dear P. and P.: That's the trouble with publishing things with your own money. You take all the chances. If a publisher does not think enough of your work to publish it on his own, you won't get behind and push the sales.

I am sending you my leaflet about writing, supplying book publishers and other markets.

Women

Outnumber Men

TORONTO (CP) — Good news for men: A recent study of populations in Canada and the United States estimated that there are six million more women than men in North America.

In United States

Divorced Women: Beaten, Jailed, Harassed

NEW YORK (Reuter) — Women said they were beaten, jailed, committed to mental institutions, harassed by police and virtually forced into prostitution by their husbands who divorced them and abandoned them and their children to starve.

The women spoke during Divorcees Anonymous, the New York state conference of the National Organization of Women (N.O.W.) on marriage and divorce. They also told of lawyers and psychiatrists who demanded fees in advance or abandoned their cases in midstream.

The audience of about 300 women and a few men occasionally wiped away tears as they listened to what a panel of legislators, judges, psychiatrists and lawyers termed "horror stories" similar to ones they deal with every day.

One of the women, whose husband had her committed to a state mental hospital for allegedly burning down their house and then had her jailed when she tried to see their children, shrugged into the arms of supportive women after her testimony. The harassment continues although the psychiatrists have judged her fit, she said.

Two women told of being held for many hours in detention cells after becoming overwrought in family court, without being told of any charges against them and without being allowed to consult a lawyer.

Up to 150 women stood to acknowledge similar experiences in silence and child custody proceedings.

The panel of experts had few suggestions for people in such cases.

Judge Nannette Dembitz of the New York State bench court noted that the court has what is termed a "conciliation" service for psychiatric and legal assistance to avoid such detention.

Lawyer Mathilda Cuneo said anyone who feels her lawyer has acted irresponsibly or unethically should write a well-documented letter of complaint to the American Academy of Matrimonial Lawyers which would "ultimately investigate" the accusation and possibly get the lawyer suspended or disbarred.

However, one woman suggested taking the law into her own hands as she did when she picketed in front of the Wall Street law office of her divorced husband, who had petitioned to annul their alimony. He himself is a member of the Academy of Matrimonial Lawyers, she said.

One woman said her husband locked her out of their luxury apartment, beat her, withdrew all money from their joint bank accounts and disobeyed the court order. He was an officer in and had helped him build, she said. Police refused to intervene, telling her they did not interfere in family matters.

After this continued for six months, a state Supreme Court judge asked them to seek a reconciliation.

"As a result of a N.O.W. demonstration, the judge disqualified himself and I got a truly humane woman judge who settled the matter in five minutes," she said. Nonetheless, her estranged husband had not paid any alimony or child support since he locked her out a year ago.

Representative Bella Abzug (Dem. N.Y.), one of the keynote speakers, announced she had introduced a bill which would extend social security to divorced women—to which they now are entitled only if married for 20 years before their divorce.

"One of the most pathetic sights in our culture is the older woman who has spent a lifetime caring for husband and children, submerging her own needs and talents, only to be cast aside for a younger and less work-worn woman," she said.

"The law sees her only as an appendage of her husband. Too often she is denied her marital and constitutional rights."

Mrs. Abzug said she regards alimony as a severance pay to which women and men have a right."

Another woman said she had had to take up prostitution when she could not find part-time jobs to support her two ailing children while their father, who had run off to California, was earning $30,000 as a professor.

Most of the experts stressed the need for women to be economically independent whether or not they choose to marry. Only then can a woman be "inertly independent and externally independent," author Morya Maines said.

Some of the lawyers and legislators at the conference called for various types of insurance, including one which would provide temporary funds for rehabilitation to help women learn skills, pay lawyers' retainer fees or get psychiatric help.

'Slogan Degrading' to Stewardesses

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Some Continental Airlines stewardesses say the firm's new advertising slogan, "We really move our tails for you," is degrading to them.

"When I first heard the slogan, I was just mortified," Claudia Lampe, a representative of the 17,000-member Air Line Pilots Association to which the stewardesses belong, said Friday. "It's degrading to us."

She said married stewardesses have gotten complaints from their husbands, and "we even have a few fathers who are unhappy about this."

Polly Mosier, a married 10-year veteran of Continental, said: "I think it represents a lack of respect for hostesses. We have always projected pride, a class kind of image, and this slogan is barroom talk."

But Continental executives insist the slogan refers only to the tail of the plane, not to part of a stewardess's anatomy.

But some stewardesses don't object.

"Most of the girls I'm flying with like the ad," said Joanne Pond, 26, of Oklahoma City. "Some critics can't handle the remarks . . . they should get out and let the rest of us do the job."

Ministers Oppose Pipe Route

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — Two senior cabinet ministers in the Ontario government spoke out against the proposed Sarnia to Montreal oil pipeline route at a conference here Saturday.

But Premier William Davis, who attended the one-day session sponsored by the Progressive Conservative party, declined comment when asked about the position.

And he also refused to speculate about whether he would recall the legislature if the contract dispute between teachers and trustees in three jurisdictions is not settled shortly.

At the conference, attended by the premier and five cabinet ministers, Agriculture Minister William Stewart spoke against the route proposed by the federal government, estimating Ontario would lose 10,000 acres of prime farmland.

"The best agricultural soil is along the waterfront and this pipeline will go right through that land," he said. "If it were built to the North it could go mostly through Crown land."

Treasurer John White also said the route, which will supply western oil to the eastern provinces, should go through the North.

"I think the chance of us bringing this line out of agricultural land across southern Ontario and into the North will be better accomplished if the federation of agriculture and individual citizens make representations to their federal members," Mr. White said.

He said having a pipeline through the North would "assure continuity of supply at reasonable prices and would make that location much more attractive to industries."

Later during the conference, Premier Davis told about 200 persons in attendance of his government's intention to push ahead this spring with legislation that would ban teachers' strikes.

North Plundered Says Lewis

KIRKLAND LAKE, Ont. (CP) — Stephen Lewis, Ontario New Democratic Party leader, said Saturday mining companies are plundering the North of resources and getting away with a minimum of taxes in a scheme that amounts to "a public scandal."

Speaking at a constituency association dinner, Mr. Lewis said that in 1970-71—the last year for which figures are available—the Ontario mining industry made net profits of $24 million and only paid provincial taxes of $22.3 million.

"That represents an effective tax rate of 2.3 per cent. . . . What other sector of the economy gets away with that kind of privileged treatment?"

Brezhnev Visits

GANDER, Nfld. (CP) — Soviet leader Leonid Brezhnev flew home Sunday after an hour-long visit here during which he discussed fishery policy with a federal cabinet minister and Soviet Jews' desire to emigrate with a delegation of Newfoundland Jewish residents.

Mr. Brezhnev's jet had landed here for refuelling.

He was greeted by regional Economic Expansion Minister Don Jamieson, Newfoundland's representative in the federal cabinet, and while strolling towards the VIP lounge spotted a delegation of 10 Jews chanting slogans and waving placards.

Mr. Brezhnev walked to where the delegation stood behind a chain-link fence and talked with them through an interpreter for about five minutes before going to the VIP area.

Rally to Flag

LONDON (Reuter) — Britons are rallying loyally to the Union Jack, bringing a boom to at least one industry during the country's current economic crisis.

Flag-makers report that business has doubled in the last few weeks, with Union Jacks being run up on car aerials and flag poles throughout the country.

Embargo Ends

SAINT JOHN, N.B. (CP) — Arthur L. Irving, president of Irving Oil Ltd., says Saudi Arabia has removed its "embargo" on oil to Canada.

In a statement issued Sunday night in which he explained the reason for a January increase to consumers in the price of bunker C oil—since rolled back—he mentioned that "Saudi Arabia has now removed its embargo on shipments of crude oil to Canada."

Nixon to Handpick Fund-raising Body

TORONTO (CP) — Robert Nixon, provincial Liberal party leader, says he will set aside the democratic process to handpick members for his proposed campaign fund-raising committee.

"I don't want to appear autocratic but there are only 18 months to go," he said in a news conference Saturday after the first meeting of the Ontario Liberal Council. He was referring to the 1975 provincial election.

He said he would choose the committee members on ability "and no other way," and he added he does not want competition and campaigning for the position.

He said he has not decided who or how many will make up the committee.

Mr. Nixon also said he wants to eliminate "parachuting candidates" from the party—people brought into a riding from outside to run as the Liberal candidate.

He said the council will set up a candidate selection committee, and "I want all nominations to be approved by this committee."

He said he formed the Ontario Liberal Council as a vehicle to lead to closer-knit communications and policies among the party members.

Must Act On Problems —Trudeau

SALZBURG, Austria (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau says government leaders must begin acting to alleviate some of the problems caused by rapid growth and development in the world or face a grim situation within 20 years.

For that reason, he said, a two-day meeting opening here today will be of extreme importance because it focuses on the dangers of over-population, the depletion of resources, food and energy shortages, pollution and other related matters.

The discussions, sponsored by a group known as the Club of Rome, have brought together six heads of government along with a number of leading scientists, economists and intellectuals.

Trudeau arrived Sunday night after a skiing holiday in Switzerland and said in a brief interview one of his main concerns at the meeting will be the problem of food shortages in most parts of the world. He stressed, however that no concrete decisions will be made during the discussions.

Massacre Is Alleged

LA PAZ (CP) — A Roman Catholic-inspired commission accused Bolivia's armed forces Sunday of committing a "massacre" last week when they opened fire on peasants to clear roadblocks isolating Cochabamba, the second largest Bolivian city, from the rest of the country.

The Bolivian Justice and Peace Commission, in an open letter to President Hugo Banzer, said: "According to eyewitnesses present, the number of peasants killed in the Cochabamba valley reached almost 100."

Telephone Rate Hearings to Start

OTTAWA (CP) — Transport commission hearings on Bell Canada's proposed rate increases begin today with an unprecedented number of formal opponents lined up against the telephone company.

A commission spokesman said 112 interventions have been filed against Bell's application which would increase the average monthly home telephone bill by 10 cents.

The 112 interventions include arguments by the Ontario, Quebec and Newfoundland governments.

The increases would affect about 4.3 million customers in Quebec, Ontario, parts of Newfoundland and the Northwest Territories. Under the proposed new rate structure, the cost of local coin box calls would increase to 20 cents from 10 cents.

A new 25-cent charge would be made for operator assistance on numbers listed in the directory except when the calls were made by handicapped persons or from coin boxes.

Among groups opposing the Bell application is the Consumers' Association of Canada (CAC), which has formed an interdisciplinary team to examine the company's proposals.

Marvon Brechin, association president, says the CAC intends "to offer alternative solutions to a further round of rate increases which can only add to an already vicious inflationary spiral."

Hearings on the application will be held in Ottawa, Montreal and Toronto and are expected to last at least six weeks.

Ontario CONSUMER Buy-Line

Where to go for Consumer Information

Buying a retirement haven in another country? Trying to obtain a mortgage on your home? Worrying about the safety of the boiler in your apartment building?

Believe it or not, all these things have something in common. They are part of the wide-ranging responsibilities of the Ontario Ministry of Consumer and Commercial Relations.

The Ministry, which was established in 1966, functions to protect you, the consumer, by regulating and supervising many business transactions in the province.

Public Contact

This Ministry probably has more direct contact with the Consumer than any other. This contact is achieved in a number of ways:

- The Registrar-General deals directly with you when you want a copy of your birth certificate.
- The Consumer Protection Bureau will listen to you if you have a complaint or question about a particular business or door-to-door salesman.
- The Technical Standards Division sees to your safety by regulating and inspecting elevators, commercial boilers and gas distribution systems in both apartments and businesses.
- Certain sections such as the Ontario Securities Commission and the Companies Branch, help you by administering Acts that promote an honest and open financial environment for both business and consumers.

Consumer Protection Bureau

Some of the ways the Consumer Protection Bureau protects you are:

- Insisting on the registration of door-to-door sellers selling anything from baby pictures to asphalt driveways.
- Insisting on the full disclosure of all credit costs.
- Outlawing referral selling, where the salesman tells you he will give you a discount on goods if you get others to buy.

Buying or Selling Real Estate?

The purchase of a home and property is likely the largest expenditure you will ever make. For your protection, real estate and business brokers and salesmen must be registered before doing business, pass examinations and be bonded.

As for your retirement haven, the Ministry also regulates the promotion and sale of foreign property to Ontario residents, making sure an accurate description of the property and terms of sale is provided to the buyer.

Insurance

The Office of the Superintendent of Insurance and Registrar of Loan and Trust Companies is responsible for the general supervision of all insurance, loan and trust agents, brokers and adjusters operating in Ontario. The branch protects you by determining the financial stability of these companies through auditing inspectors.

Cats Settle for Tie

Belleville Bobcats "ran out of gas in the third period," said coach Moe Hunter, but managed a 6-6 tie with Brampton Blues last night in Metro Junior B action.

"We're just not getting enough ice time for practices," said Hunter, "every other team in the league is practising almost every night, but we only get one night a week."

Dean Hartwell scored for the Blues.

Belleville held their two goal margin throughout the second as Dave Taylor tallied for the Cats and Mike Forbes got one for Brampton to make the score 4-2.

Brampton took advantage of their power play situations in the third period scoring two of four goals while Belleville was short handed.

Forbes, Hartwell, Bill Blenus and Doug Crawford gave the Blues their tie in third, while John Beauregard and Brian Cousins each got one for the Bobcats.

Belleville will get an opportunity to do better than a tie this Friday at 9 p.m., when Bramalea comes to the Memorial Arena.

Centennial Captures Hockey Tourney Crown

Centennial Secondary School Chargers yesterday captured the 1974 Bay of Quinte High School Hockey Championship, defeating the Bayside Secondary School Red Devils 8-5 in the exciting final at the Dick Ellis Rink.

The Championship was held in conjunction with the Belleville Winter Carnival, which also wrapped up yesterday.

The game was a fast skating, hard hitting, wide open match with 12 penalties being called by referees Bob Bugle and Don Ashley, seven to the winning Chargers.

Centennial jumped into an early 1-0 lead on a goal by Robbie DaJong, the first of his two in the game. Bayside came back, to tie the game at one goal each on a score by Dean Rice, about four minutes later.

Bob Thompson and Paul Bedard went on to score other first period goals for the Chargers, while Rich Matheson added one for Bayside to put the first period score board at 3-2 in favor of Centennial.

The second period scoring was all done in the last half of the period, with Stan Meyers scoring for Centennial and Tim Neror for the Red Devils.

Third period action centered around Bayside playing catch-up hockey, being down 4-3 coming into the period.

They did load the score at four goals each, with Joe Vajda scoring the first of his pair in the period, but it wasn't enough, as Robbie DaJong put the Chargers back into the lead with his second marker of the game, assisted by Kevin Solmes.

Solmes then scored the eventual winning goal of the game on a fine individual effort, beating two Bayside defensemen, as well as goaltender Tim Mader. Solmes merely had to fire the puck into the open net past the sprawled Mader.

But two empty net goals, one each by Solmes and Thompson, wrapped up the victory for the Chargers.

Both teams played well, providing a sound, exciting game for the some 450 fans in attendance at the final.

The two teams made their way to the final through wins Saturday in the semi-final round. The champion Chargers whitewashed Nicholson 8-0, while Bayside took a top-sided 16-7 win from Moira.

Richard Matenson led the Red Devils in their trouncing of the Moira Trojans, firing three goals and adding the same number of assists. Curt McLean, Al MacGinnis, Rick Sopaz, and Ward Churchill each scored twice, while Mich Auger, Chuck Daub, and Dean Rice added one each.

John Ross scored five times in defeat for the Trojans, while Mark McKay and Dave Stott added singles. Ross McLeod and Rick Barbeau each had two assists.

A total of 17 penalties were assessed in the game, nine to the losers.

Lacrosse-Hockey Style

The chase is on by Mark Frenette of Donald's Dancing Devils in Saturday night's exhibition lacrosse match at the Memorial Arena. Being chased is Chris Rutledge of Finnegan's Fancy Flyers, who does have the ball in his possession. Rutledge counted four goals in the Flyers' win in the game on ice, held in conjunction with th Belleville Winter Carnival.

Where's the Ball?

Sylvana Scuccato didn't really forget where the ball was, nor did she lose control of it. It just happened that Sylvana got fouled from behind on this particular drive to the basket and the ball was knocked out of her hands. Pouting her was about the only way the opposition could stop Sylvana as she led the Loyalist College Women's Basketball's scoring attack.

Lions Two Down After Overtime Loss

The Belleville Lions Midget Majors fell two games behind in their best of five playoff series with Peterborough Sunday, taking a 6-4 overtime loss at the Memorial Arena. They had lost the first game of the series, despite a good effort Friday night, 5-2 in Peterborough.

Paul Johnston was the hero in Sunday's game for the Lifflock City, scoring twice in the 10 minute overtime period.

Trap and Gun

Bill MacDonald had a 20 to round out the field.

Larry Howard took home a turkey for capturing the special event.

Gord Male had two goals and two assists in defeat for the Lions', with Ed Grills and Paul Murray adding singles.

Friday night, playing with only 13 men, with two of them being ejected in the first period, the Lions came up with one of their best efforts of the season, despite losing the game.

Henderson Heads Club

Paul Henderson an English teacher at Moira Secondary School, was named president of the Bay of Quinte Country Club this week. Henderson, a pointed directors of the club made the selection.

Vice-president and chairman of publicity and entertainment is Doug Bannon. Peter Jones is director of juniors while Ross Bailey is membership chairman and liaison to the building committee.

Lancers Shade Bulls 4-3

Four different players shared in the scoring Saturday night as the Loyalist Lancers hockey team defeated the Brockville Bulls 4 - 3, in Brockville.

Ken Jessup, Reid Malory, Wally Brown, and Gord Johnston each scored one goal in the game, with Johnston's the winner at 17:10 of the third period.

The Lancers came up with the good effort, despite being short the services of several star players, Floyd Crawford, Barry Roantree, and John Fenwick. The Lancers host the Burkitt, Wally Brown, Dave Ferguson and John Follet took up the slack.

Loyalist is in third place in the Eastern division, just one point behind second place Cornwall, with a record of 20 wins, six losses, and two ties. Three games are on the schedule, with Lancers next contest in Kingston a week from Friday night against St. Lawrence College.

Yankees and Rebels Post League Wins

Both the Rebels and Yonkees came up with wins in the Northern Electric Hockey League Sunday, with the Rebels taking a 7-3 decision from the Falcons, and Yankees winning over the Bearcats, 7-5.

Dwight Rathwell fired the hat trick and added one assist in the Rebles' win, while Bob Brownell added a pair. Phil Haywood and Brian Howard potted the singles for the winners.

Loyalist Gets a Lesson

The Loyalist College Women's Basketball team took to the home court against Algonquin, from Ottawa, and St. Lawerence, from Kingston, on Saturday, but came up emply handed in the win column.

Loyalist pitted their skills against St. Lawrence in the first game and went down to defeat, 28-15.

"We didn't play well at all," said Loyalist coach, Sherry Cornell, "we threw the ball away on bad passes, had too many turnovers and didn't shoot enough. On top of that, when we did shoot all the way throught the first half, the ball just wouldn't drop for us."

In the first half of the game, Loyalist was outscored 18-4. The second half was better as the locals outscored St. Lawrence, 11-10.

Foul shots could have made a big difference had the locals been accurate. St. Lawerence took 23 fouls, giving Loyalist 21 free throws, but the Lancers only came through on five.

Each of the three teams involved played each other once in the round robin competition.

The girls played well enough in the first half," said Cornell, "but when you play Algonquin, you have to shoot a higher percentage you get and we didn't shoot enough."

Barb Forster scored eight for Ottawa, while Anne Schumer had 13 for Kingston and Maureen Cooke got 12.

Records Fall At Track Meet

Trenton's Nick Alexander set a meet record in the senior boys' 40 yard dash in 4.6.

Host Northumberland Secondary School's Peter Yemen and Murgyarad Mutswairo of Adult College also set meet records.

Yemen came up with a mark of 45' 9" in the senior shot put to erase the previous record while Mutswairo attracted a crowd of onlookers while he set a record of 5' 10" in the junior high jump.

Muswaire took third place in junior boys' 80 Yard with 8.5, with a Toronto Central Tech. win of 8.4.

Senior boys' hurdles, John Wynne and Steven Gummo of THS pulled second and third place, one-tenth of a second behind the MacDonald win of 6.6.

Juvenile Playoff Set Goes to Sixth Game

The Western Tire Juveniles kept their playoff-hopes alive with a 2-1 victory over Peterborough yesterday to even up the five game series at two wins and one tie for both teams.

The series which was supposed to have been the best of five, will go to a sixth game at the Memorial Arena at 7 p.m. Saturday night.

Yesterday's game appeared to be as evenly matched as the previous four. After two periods the score was tied at 3 - 3.

Pete Crawford proved to be the winning margin for Belleville, tallying twice in the final period with Steve Kirby adding the third.

Paul Tilley scored for Peterborough.

Lacrosse Game on Ice Produces 42 Goals

The exhibition game of lacrosse on ice, one of the features of the Winter Carnival, produced 42 goals in the hour long contest, with Finnegan's Fancy Flyers doubling the score on Donald's Dancing Devils 21-11. The game was played Saturday.

Wally Inwood was the high scorer in the game, leading the Flyers to their win with six goals and five assists. Other Flyer markers went to Chris Rutledge and Alan Hackett, with four each, Peter Barrett, with three, Rob Prever and Jeff Donald, with two each, and singles by Jim Sturch, Bill Guthrie, and goaltender Duncan Boyce.

Brent Walmsley fired seven goals for the Dancing Devils, with Jeff Runciman and Kevin Gow scoring five each. Singles went to Mike Thompson and Jerry Healey.

The goaltenders of both teams, Duncan Boyce of the winning Flyers and Joe Bourcette of the losing Devils, played well in a game where there is little chance of making the saves in the larger hockey type net. Both put up a good effort in displaying some excellent saves.

Minor Hockey Roundup

In Peewee Major action, the Rollins Construction team took three of a possible four points from Trenton, winning 6-1 Saturday, and playing to a 1-1 tie Sunday. Clarence Brocklehurst scored twice in Saturday's win, with Mark Crawford, Brad Miller, Bruce McHoul, and Greg Sprout adding one each. Paul Dicrescenzo was the only Trenton marksman.

The McInroy-Maines Minor Bantams took a pair of losses on the weekend, including a 9-3 defeat to Kingston Sunday in the first game of their playoff series. The other was a 7-4 loss at the hands of Stirling, Saturday night.

Danny Duffy had a pair of goals in Sunday's game, while Gary Frederick had the other marker. Mike Bryant had two goals in Saturday's exhibition contest, while Jeff Runciman and Danny Green each had one.

Belleville Towers Food City major atoms broke even in weekend action. They played to a 2-2 tie with Wellington. They lost to Kingston Township 8-2, Saturday, and scored a 3-1 win over Trenton, Sunday.

In the Sunday win, it was Paul Hounslow, Ken Donaldson and Scott Taylor connecting for Towers. Steve Weston replied for Trenton.

It's Feast or Famine For First Place Flyers

By GLENN COLE
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Philadelphia Flyers had a rather strange weekend as they went about their business adding to their point total atop the National Hockey League's West Division.

Saturday, the Flyers got three-goal efforts from Bobby Clarke and Rosa Lonsberry, and they had 35 shots at the Detroit goal as they trounced the Red Wings 12-2.

But Sunday night, the Flyers had to battle from behind to tie Atlanta Flames 2-2 in one of seven games.

In other action, Montreal Canadiens clipped Detroit Red Wings 4-1, Boston Bruins edged Pittsburgh Penguins 5-4, Buffalo Sabres and Toronto Maple Leafs tied 3-3, Minnesota North Stars and New York Rangers battled to a 5-5 draw, Chicago Black Hawks blanked St. Louis Blues 3-0 and California Golden Seals snapped a 13-game losing streak with a 4-2 victory over New York Islanders.

Saturday, Toronto bounced Boston 6-2, the Islanders and Vancouver Canucks tied 3-3, the Black Hawks clipped the Penguins 3-1, the Flyers bombed Detroit 12-2, the Kings tripped the Seals 3-1, handing California its 28th loss in 29 road games, the Rangers defeated Minnesota 3-1 and St. Louis bombed Buffalo 6-1.

Flames 2 Flyers 2

Gary Dornhoefer's seventh goal of the year at 9:17 of the third period gave the Flyers their draw with the Flames.

Rick MacLeish got the other Philadelphia goal, Larry Kwong and rookie Tom Lysiak scored for Atlanta.

The Flyers now have a seven-points lead over second-place Chicago Black Hawks and the Flames have a three-point edge over Los Angeles in the battle for the fourth and final playoff spot in the West.

Canadiens 4 Red Wings 1

Bruins 6 Penguins 5

Ken Hodge scored three goals to bring his season total to 38 as the Bruins defeated the Penguins for the fourth time in as many meetings this season.

Greg Sheppard and Don Marcotte got the other goals for the Bruins, who now hold an eight-point lead over second-place Montreal in the battle for top spot in the NHL's East.

Maple Leafs 3 Sabres 3

An assassin's dart by Rick Kehoe at 8:24 of the third period pulled the Leafs into a tie with the Sabres and enabled them to maintain a eight-point bulge over Buffalo in the battle for fourth place in the East.

Kehoe fired a 15-footer into an empty net after Buffalo goalie Dave Dryden came out of his net to block a shot on the right side.

Rookie Centre Clicks for Hawks

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Jim Vanni made an impressive debut with St. Catharines Black Hawks Sunday, scoring the winning goal early in the third period in a 4-1 victory over Sudbury Wolves in Ontario Hockey Association Major Junior A action.

Vanni was called up from Buffalo Sabres of the Southern Ontario Junior Hockey League to fill in as centre in place of ailing Greg Craig and Bill Hamilton.

The Hagersville, Ont., centre's goal helped keep the Black Hawks in a second place tie with Kitchener Rangers, four points back of Peterborough Petes.

Captain Mike Marson gave Sudbury the lead in the first period, but Hawks captain Rick Hampton tied the score in the second period.

The Hawks outshot the Wolves 41-21.

In other games Sunday, Oshawa Generals downed Ottawa 67s 5-1, Kitchener Rangers defeated Peterborough Petes 10-2, Toronto Marlboros beat London Knights 6-2 and Kingston Canadians defeated Sault Ste. Marie Greyhounds 3-1.

Generals 5 67s 1

Peter Lee scored for Ottawa.

Rangers 10 Petes 2

Paul Evans scored five goals for Kitchener in a game that featured a third-period brawl between Kitchener fans, players and Peterborough players.

Following a prolonged brawl on the ice involved in three-fight, fighting majors for each team and two coaches, Peterborough players and Kitchener fans began fighting in the back of the stands.

Marlboros 6 Knights 2

Aidan Flatley, John Hughes and John Smrke scored the other Toronto goals.

Toronto outshot London 36-31 and now share fifth place in the league with Sudbury and Oshawa.

Canadians 3 Greyhounds 1

Larry Murphy scored the other Kingston goal in the first period. Jack Lynch replied for the only Sault goal, his 50th of the season and tops in the league.

Petes 11 Red Wings 0

Ed Smith added two goals for the Petes, and Bill Ivo, Bob Wasson and Jim Turkiewicz rounded out the Peterborough scoring.

Peterborough shot 34-5 after the first period and 6-0 after the second.

Peterborough outshot the visitors 61-20 and took 17 more minor penalties.

In league action Tuesday, Hamilton takes on the Kinghts in London, Ottawa plays the Canadians at Kingston, and St. Catharines plays at home against the Marlboros.

Miller Equals SOJHL Record

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Scott Miller scored his 64th and 65th goals of the season Sunday to tie a Southern Ontario Junior Hockey League record and to lead Windsor Spitfires to a 6-4 win over Buffalo Tondas.

Miller, 18, of Essex, Ont., tied the league scoring record set by Reese Dobrick of the Detroit Junior Red Wings in the 1971-72 season.

Miller has scored six goals in his last three games and has nine league goals still to play. He is in his second season with the Spitfires and has a year of eligibility left in Junior A ranks.

In other league games Sunday, Guelph Biltmores beat Welland Sabres 7-2 and Chatham Maroons and Niagara Falls Flyers played to a 3-3 tie.

A scheduled league game between Detroit Junior Red Wings and Michigan Americans at Utica, Mich., was postponed with eight minutes gone in the first period because of poor ice conditions.

Saturday, Detroit downed Guelph 7-4.

Sorel Bounces Back

Montreal Juniors thought they had Sorel Black Hawks on the ropes Saturday night after they rammed home four goals in the first period but the Hawks had the last laugh.

Sorel came back to score six times in the middle session and went on to defeat Montreal 12-5 in one of five Quebec Major Junior A Hockey League games Sunday night.

In other action, Laval Nationals downed Chicoutimi Sagueneen 5-1, Quebec Remparts nipped Sherbrooke Beavers 6-5, Cornwall Royals outlasted Shawinigan Dynamos 8-5 and Hull Festivals were handed an 8-5 setback by Trois-Rivieres Reinforcers.

Michel Deziel scored three of his four goals in the middle period to spark Sorel's rally. Jean Laraucbe scored three times for the Black Hawks with Serge Gamelin adding two.

Firmin Royer, Carlo Torresan and Pierre Mondou one each.

Marc Brazeau and Gary MacGregor had two goals apiece to lead Cornwall past Shawinigan. Kevin Treacy, Dan Lupenette, Doug Chase and John Nasar were the other Cornwall scorers with Jean Latendresse, Jean Thibodeau, Richard Polsson, Onil Leclerc and Yvan Hamelin replying for the Dynamos.

Tonight's game has Drummondville at Laval.

Toros Get Message From Unhappy Goalie

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Whatever Toronto Toro goalie Gilles Gratton told his teammates after the first period, it worked.

Upset by the loose play of his defence that allowed three goals by Minnesota Fighting Saints in the first period of a World Hockey Association game Saturday night, Gratton ripped into the Toros in the dressing room. They came back to allow only one more goal and Toronto rallied for a 5-4 home victory.

Gratton said he told his mates he felt "like running out to my car with my pads on and driving to Buffalo."

The Toronto goalie was referring to recent rumors about him playing next season with Buffalo Sabres who own his National Hockey League rights.

In other Sunday games, Edmonton Oilers outdought Los Angeles Sharks 5-4, Quebec Nordiques rallied for a 5-3 home win over New Jersey Knights, Winnipeg Jets downed visiting Chicago Cougars 4-3 and Cincinnati Crusaders defeated New England Whalers 3-1.

Saturday, New England upset Houston 5-2 and Minnesota declared Cleveland 4-2.

Terns 5 Fighting Saints 4

Two goals by Steve Carbneil and one by Murray Heatley in the opening frame angered Gratton. Toronto defenceman Brian Gibbons and right winger Guy Trottier scored in the third period for the Toronto victory.

Minnesota coach Harry Neale thought his team had tied the game with five seconds left to play when puck rebound the net and the goal light flashed on. But referee Alan Glastel ruled an offside on the play and the goal was disallowed despite vehement protests by Minnesota.

Oilers 5 Sharks 2

Ron Climie collected two goals to lead the home-beat Oilers in a game marred by 74 minutes in penalties, most in the final period.

Edmonton centre Jim Harrison, playing with a visor to protect a broken nose, had one goal and three assists although he said the mask prevents him from seeing the puck at his feet. Edmonton goalie Jack Norris continued his outstanding play of late, blocking 39 shots and getting his second assist in as many games' and third of the season.

Nordiques 5 Knights 3

Veteran winger Alain Caron, riding the bench in recent games, scored three goals for Quebec, including the winner four minutes into the third period.

The Nordiques trailed 3-2 entering the final period, but tied the score on Michel Parizeau's goal with seconds to go.

The victory left Quebec third in the East, five points behind first-place New England and one behind the Terns.

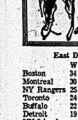
Winnipeg winger Ron Snell, who scored one goal for the Jets, took a stiff check from Cougar Reg Fleming and could be out of the lineup for a week with a severe charley horse.

The Jets gained ground on the idle first-place Aeros in the West, moving to within four points of the leaders. The Jets stayed two points up on third-place Houston.



Crusaders 2 Whalers 1

Sandra Palmer Wins Playoff

MIAMI (AP) — Sandra Palmer sank a two-foot birdie putt on the 18th hole of a sudden-death playoff with Kathy Whitworth on Sunday to capture the Burdine's invitational golf tournament.

The two women had tied at 215, four over par at the Keendale Lakes Country Club, after 54 holes of regulation play. Miss Palmer had a three-over-par 76 to enable Miss Whitworth, with a 70, to gain the playoff.

The tournament, first of the year for the Ladies Professional Golf Association, was worth $14,000 to Miss Palmer and $3,720 to Miss Whitworth.

Canadians Gloria Post and Jocelyn Bourassa tied with American Karolyn Kertzman for 10th place with 222 and earned $639 each in prize money.

Miss Post of Oakville, Ont., had a final round 76 Sunday while Miss Bourassa of Shawinigan, Que., posted a 75.

Leaders Prove Hard to Catch

By THE CANADIAN PRESS
No matter how hard they try, the teams in second and third positions in each division of the American Hockey League can't seem to overtake the group leaders.

Providence Reds scored twice in each period Sunday night to defeat Rochester Americans 6-4. The victory moved them into second place in the North, but they still trail leading New Haven Nighthawks by three points.

The Nighthawks kept pace by defeating Virginia Red Wings 3-1. In other games, Cincinnati Swords tied Nova Scotia Voyageurs 2-2, while Jacksonville Barons and Baltimore Clippers settled for the same score.

In Saturday's action, Baltimore defeated Providence 5-3, Cincinnati beat Boston Braves 4-3, Jacksonville topped Hershey Bears 4-3 and Virginia tied Springfield Kings 3-3.

Despite Herther's loss, they remained six points ahead of Jacksonville in the South.

The Reds' triumph Sunday snapped Americans' unbeaten streak on home ice at 11 games. John Bednarski, Al Blanchard, Larry Sacharuk, Doug Horbul, Bert Wilson and Norm Dennis scored for the Reds. Sacharuk's goal was his 19th in 23 games for Providence. Rod Graham, Larry McKillop, Gary Bredin and Murray Kuntz, with his 35th goal of the season, were marksmen for Rochester.

Rebuilding Job For Men's Team

CHRISTCHURCH, N.Z. (CP) — Canada's rebuilding job for the 1976 Olympics in Montreal apparently will have to start with the men's track and field team, which showed up in Vantage one bronze medal at the Commonwealth Games.

The 10th Games ended Saturday with a record Canadian total of 25 gold medals, but women swimmers and track and field competitors accounted for 19 gold.

The women made Canada's fourth-place showing in track and field possible with four gold and 11 of the 12 Canadian medals. Bronze medalist Claude Ferragne of Montreal in the high jump was the lone male track athlete.

For Lynn Davies, technical director of the Canadian Track and Field Association, the scoring lack of depth of the men's team means a major rebuilding program has ahead.

Lydiard, who coaches Dick Taylor, the New Zealander who won the 1500 metres, built his reputation years ago when he coached such stars as Peter Snell and Murray Halberg, Olympic gold medalists for New Zealand.

Kenya was the top track power with six gold medals. Except for Jamaican Don Quarrie's second straight, double in the sprint, Kenyans won every race under 10,000 metres, plus the 110-metre hurdles, the steeplechase and the 1,600-metre relay.

Glenda Reiser's victory in the women's 1,500 metres was a personal best for the 19-year-old Ottawa girl. But her 4:07.8, even though it was a Games record, would have left her out of the first six at Munich.

Miss Reiser, Jane Haist of Thornhill, Ont., in the discus and shot put, and Yvonne Saunders of Guelph, Ont., in the 400 metres, were the women winners.

Aussie swimmers and divers won 14 gold to 11 for Canada. In total medals at the pool it was Australia 37-33. But Canadian girls had a big edge over the Aussies, 9-4 in gold.

The Canadian team won 62 medals, four under its 1970 count, but far exceeded the 18 gold won at Edinburgh.

Wendy Cook and Leslie Cliff of Vancouver each won two swimming gold, and Wendy took a third as a member of the winning 400-metre medley relay team. In that race, she set a world record on the 100-metre backstroke leg.

The team set 17 Canadian and nine Games records in the pool.

In the relay races, Canada won four of five, and was third in the other. Bruce Robertson of Vancouver was the swimmer with the most medals — one relay gold and two silver and two bronze in individual races.

Cindy Shatto of Toronto and Bev Boys of Pickering, Ont., led the women with two diving gold. Bev had a silver when she lost to Shatto in the springboard and then won the tower competition.

It was in the lesser-known sports that Canada really excelled, picking up five gold in wrestling in dislodge India as the Commonwealth power, and in shooting where Canada won four of the six championships.

Weightlifters rounding the victory podium were: light flyweight Mikhail Kawaski of Hamilton; featherweight Egon Beiler of Kitchener, Ont.; light middleweight Terry Paice of Thunder Bay; heavyweight Claude Pilon of Ottawa and super heavyweight Bill Benko of Calgary.

On the shooting ranges, Rev. Bill Hare, a United Church minister from Renfrew, Ont., Dr. Jules Sobrian of Omemee, Ont., Harry Willsie of Montreal and John Primrose of Edmonton won gold medals. Dr. Sobrian also had a silver.

In badminton, Jamie Paulson of Toronto, an odds-on favorite to retain his men's singles title, was stunned by Punch Gunalan of Malaysia in the final and won a silver.

Boxing turned out to be a disappointment. Coach Jerry Shears of Montreal had predicted at least two gold medals, one from Carroll Morgan of Antigonish, N.S., and Tim Taylor of Sarnia, Ont. They both lost their first bouts.

Dale Andersen of Rocky Mountain House, Alta., won the only Canadian medal, a bronze as a losing semi-finalist in the featherweight division.

Cycling also turned out to be a disappointment as the Canadian team was blanked.

In lawn bowling, the pairs and fours were 14th and 13th, and Neil Salkeld of Caledonia, Ont., was 12th in the singles.

Weightlifter Russ Prior of Hamilton successfully defended his heavyweight title by lifting more than the super heavyweight winner, Graeme May of New Zealand.

Fourth Title for Cranston

Cranston received seven first-place rulings from the seven-judge panel. Four judges gave him perfect 6.00 marks for his artistic impression portion of the five-minute free skate.

Ron Shaver of Cambridge, Ont., finished second to Cranston and Robert Rubens of Toronto was third.

In other events Saturday, Kevin Hicks of Windsor, Ont., won the novice men's title and Heather Anderson of Vancouver took the novice women's championship.

Kris Alleston of Ottawa won the junior women's title Friday.

Cranston, Shaver, Miss Nightingale, the Bezics, the Sopers, and Rubens all will represent Canada in the world championships in Munich, West Germany, March 5-10.

Barbara Berezowski of Toronto and David Porter of Port Perry, Ont., who were second in the senior dance competition, Barbara Turgeonine of North Vancouver, B.C., second to Miss Nightingale, and the Vancouver team of Marian Murray and Glenn Moore also will go to Munich. The Murray-Moore combination finished second behind the Bezics in the senior pairs.

Hollingworth Dies

BOSTON (AP) — Gordon (Bucky) Hollingworth, 45, a former National Hockey League player with Chicago Black Hawks and Detroit Red Wings, died in hospital Saturday after a long illness. A native of Montbreal, Hollingworth lived in Hampton, N.H., with his wife and four children.

Serrat New World Champ

ST. MORITZ, Switzerland (CP) — Toronto's Judy Crawford battled a badly chopped course Sunday and placed ninth in the women's giant slalom at the World skiing championships.

The new world champion is Fabienne Serrat, 17, of France, ending the four-year reign of Canada's Betsy Clifford whose title was won on the slopes at Val Gardena, Italy, four years ago.

Miss Clifford, 21, tied for 19th place with Norway's Toril Forland, each with a time of one minute 42.18 seconds. The Ottawa girl returned to competitive racing this season after more than a year in retirement.

Miss Crawford's time of 1:44.77 was 1.65 seconds behind Fabienne who burst into tears as she accepted the gold medal.

First Place To Nicklaus

HONOLULU (AP) — Jack Nicklaus made a sudden decision to play in the $220,000 Hawaiian open golf tournament and, to the surprise of practically no one, won the $44,000 first prize Sunday.

He had a four-under-par 70 in the final round on the 7,154-yard Waialae Country Club course and won by three strokes at 271, 17 under par.

Rookie Eddie Pearce, 21, the youngest man on the pro tour, had a 68 and was second with a 274 total.

J. C. Snead was even with 68—275, while Irwin and Dwight Nevil tied at 276. Irwin had a final round 66. Nevil had a 68.

Nicklaus matched the course record he set in 1968 by Rawlins. Ted Makalena, who won this event in 1966 and died two years later in a surfing accident.

gave everything I had," the French teen-ager, said after learning of her win, easily the major achievement by the French team, understandably in the year by a purge of top-ranked stars.

But many felt that Miss Crawford's performance was exceptional in that she charged through 42 gates on the 4,121-foot course with a vertical drop of 1,228 feet from 17th spot. The layout was well changed by the time the 22-year-old Canadian team veteran made her bid.

West Germany's Traudl Treichl won the silver medal in 1:43.72, and Jacqueline Rouvier of France took the bronze in 1:43.81.

It was her second giant slalom victory this season for Miss Serrat. She won the first World Cup victory of her career at Badgastein, Austria, last week, which also was France's first victory this season.

The race opened the week-long 1974 title competition instead of the men's downhill, which had been the first race on the original program.

The change was dictated by the three-week-long downhill training virtually impossible. The men's giant slalom will be held today, while no decision has yet been made as to when the two downhill races would be held.

IN MEMORIAM

SAVERSON — In loving memory of our dear husband, father, Bruce, who passed away Feb. 4, 1965.
Though you're gone from sight and memory lingers still Though our hearts are broken
And tears flow at will
Still we have so many memories
Of the one we loved so much
Her memory is our treasure
With which we'll never part.
Sadly missed by Mother,
We have her in our prayers
—Always lovingly remembered by
His family and grandchildren.

SWEET — In loving memory of my dear husband, Bruce Sweet, who passed away Feb. 4, 1965.
Sweet you're gone from sight and memory lingers still
Our hearts are broken
And tears flow at will
Sad memories keep him near,
Sadly missed by wife, sister Margaret and grandchildren.

Algeria Well on Way To Become Arab Power

ALGIERS (CP) — Although Algeria has only been an independent state since 1962, this second largest African nation and one of the most densely populated is enjoying a spurt of economic activity.

Its industries, agriculture, exploitation of mineral resources—mainly oil—and education are all progressing at such a rate that a visitor here will readily admit that the country of 15 million is on the path to becoming a power in the Arab world.

The modernization of a people who survived 132 years of colonialism and the serious attitude of its leaders, coupled with its strategic geographic position in North Africa, all mean that by the end of the decade Algeria will be in a position to dispense with bilateral aid and trade with the industrialized nations on an equal footing.

The principal objectives to attain between now and then, as set by the government, are:

—An eight-per-cent economic growth over the next seven years.

—An increase in the gross national product from $11 billion to $8 billion;

—The development, and modernization of its economic and social infrastructure;

—The creation of 250,000 jobs in the non agricultural sector to absorb the unemployment, especially in the cities, and also to absorb the current 3.5-per-cent annual population growth rate, one of the highest in the world;

—A per-capita income increase to $200 from $140 annually;

—Complete the agrarian reform begun in 1970.

Algeria's principal trading partners, France, West Germany, the Soviet Union, the United States and Italy, in that order, feel these objectives will be attained by 1980.

Consequently, over the last several years they have increased their economic aid and development programs considerably, knowing that what they give today in Algeria is an investment which will bear fruit in the coming years. Few nations of the so-called Third World offer such opportunities for the future.

Conscious of her attraction for capitalist countries, Algeria has sought to establish political, cultural and economic relations with these countries in recent years.

Until 1965, France, a former colonial power, was practically Algeria's sole partner in exchange programs. This situation was natural since Algerian authorities, placed the country's economy in a "state of strict dependence with regard to the French market."

Differences of opinion over

Political relations between Algeria and France have improved thanks to a visit by the Algerian foreign affairs minister, Abdelaziz Bouteflika, and it is certain France and Algeria have much to gain from this improvement.

France sees Algeria as a bridge to the Third World nations in Africa, while Algeria is strongly conscious that France is her principal customer and supplier—more than 50 per cent in both cases.

France also allows thousands of Algerian workers into the country each year and finds them useful in her industrial expansion programs.

Algeria is seeking to develop new relations with members of the European Economic Community and France can help her in this. An agreement with the Common Market would greatly solidify Algeria's European orientation.

Algerian relations with the Arab world are closer than ever these days, however, and the country is playing an increasingly important role among the Third World nations.

She does not waste a single opportunity to champion their fight against capitalism and imperialism which she feels contributes to keeping those countries in their present state.

Relations between Algeria and the Communist world, particularly the Soviet Union, are close because of the socialist policies of the Algerian government.

Visits and meetings on the Algerian-Soviet ministerial level are frequent and the Soviet Union is contributing to the programs of Algeria, mainly in metallurgy and fishing.

For relations with China, they are also excellent and a source of aid, loans and grants.

Pipeline Study

Dr. Khalid Aziz (top) and Dr. Garry Gregory, professors of chemical engineering at the University of Calgary, are conducting research aimed at solving the technical problems of multiphase pipeline construction. (CP Photo)

Multi-use Pipeline Principles Studied

CALGARY (CP) — For the last four years, the department of chemical engineering at University of Calgary has been conducting research aimed at solving the technical problems of multi-phase pipeline construction.

The oil industry is vitally interested in the research, because the current state of transportation of crude oil and natural gas by pipeline is a contributing factor to the energy crisis in Canada. The industry has long maintained that there is no physical shortage of energy in this country.

For years, the industry has been designing and building pipelines capable of handling single-phase flow of either oil or gas. However, when both of these fluids flow in a pipeline as a two-phase mixture the design methods which work for either of them separately are inapplicable.

The two companies most involved in the research are Dr. Khalid Aziz, a native of Iran from Karachi, Pakistan, and Dr. Garry Gregory, 33, a native of New Liskeard, Ont. Both are professors of chemical engineering.

"It has been estimated that savings in pipe cost up to 40 per cent can be realized by using a two-phase mixture as opposed to a separate pipe for each phase," said Dr. Gregory, a graduate of the University of Waterloo.

"Furthermore, in many oil and gas gathering and transmission systems, two-phase flow is unavoidable, so that detailed knowledge of two-phase pipelines will aid in designing such systems."

There can be further savings using a multi-phase pipeline, said Dr. Aziz, who attended the universities of Karachi, Michigan and Alberta and Rice University in Houston, Texas. Using this system, oil and gas can be processed centrally, instead of processing them separately for the market.

Another active partner in the research is Dr. George Govier, chairman of the Alberta energy resources conservation board and part-time professor at the university.

Dr. Gregory calls this project "mission-oriented research" as opposed to purely academic research. Because of this, financial support has been received from the federal and provincial governments and a number of oil companies.

Laboratory equipment includes five 100-foot pipelines, measuring in diameter from half an inch to three inches. Certain fluids are also supplied by the industry, and Dr. Aziz said the university is grateful for the co-operation it has received.

The laboratory pipelines, made of transparent plastics, can be adjusted to simulate different terrain conditions — as in application pipelines have to suit the geography.

University of Calgary is a leader in such research and a recently-published book, The Flow of Complex Mixtures in Pipes, with co-authors Dr. Govier and Dr. Aziz, has been accepted internationally as a fundamental reference for multi-phase pipelines, said Dr. Gregory.

The research also is a popular field of post-graduate study at the university. To date, five students have completed the requirements for master of science degrees with thesis projects based on two-phase flow experimentation. One of them now is working toward a PhD in the same specialization.

The Flow of Complex Mixtures in Pipes sums up research in the multi-phase pipelines up to 1972. The team has been presenting later finds in a number of scientific papers, and Dr. Gregory said some of the knowledge from the research has already been put into practice by the industry.

Some of the problems of multi-phase pipelines, according to Dr. Aziz, are the size of the pipeline, pumping pressure, flow formation and safety factor—all for the purpose of building pipelines capable of doing the required job at the minimum cost.

Many of the uncertainties associated with design methods for two-phase flow have been identified but a number of problems still have to be solved, said Dr. Gregory.

Canadians in UN Force Told Don't Voice Views

TEL AVIV (CP) — In a country like Israel, where 21 parties contested the last election and politics is a national obsession, Canadian troops serving with the United Nations are being told to keep their political views to themselves.

"We've found that among the Israelis, Canadians are a No. 2 on the hit parade, after the Americans," says Capt. Buck Giffin of Halifax, a veteran logistics officer in charge of the 13 Canadian supply and communications troops based in Tel Aviv.

"Our men have been very warmly received, both in their duty contacts with Israeli officials and in contacts with people on the street.

"But they have been asked not to voice opinions. Their job is to be neutral and their opinions could be misconstrued."

Even among the various nationalities serving with the UN Emergency Force in the Middle East, the Canadians have a unique credibility. Their missions often carry them across the Arab-Israeli ceasefire line, while other nationalities are generally restricted to one side of the other.

The Canadians can thus make comparisons between Arab and Israeli living conditions and, as professional soldiers, can make knowledgeable observations about military developments. Any slip of the tongue could be embarrassing, Giffin said.

"As I get people from Cairo to work here, I brief them on what it means to wear that Canadian patch on the arm and the United Nations badge."

So far, he added, there have been no incidents.

Many of the 1,100 Canadian troops in the Middle East were briefed before they left home about the need for neutrality in dealings with Arabs or Jews. The contingent also includes a substantial number who served in previous UN peacekeeping operations and learned about neutrality first hand.

He is likely to feel far more at ease among Israelis—with their Western-style manners and appearance—than on a frequent knowledge of a Canadian's language and country— than among the more exotic Arabs.

Cpl. Robert Barnes, 30, of Montreal was passing through Kilometer 101 on the road from Cairo to the Suez canal—where Israeli and Egyptian military negotiators met to arrange ceasefire terms—when an Israeli officer came over to the Canadian convoy.

"It turned out that he had gone to Montreal High, the same school I went to," Barnes said. "He had been in Israel for five years and was visiting Montreal when the war broke out, so he hurried back."

And 22-year-old Pte. Mike Rains of Calgary was concerned by an Israeli soccer team during a Christmas visit to Bethlehem.

"He kept asking me what I thought of Israel and I didn't want to get into that," Rains recalled. "He also wanted to know what I thought of being in Bethlehem for midnight mass and I didn't want to. I was really moved by it — and I was."

Their superior, WO, Rusty Toole of Calgary, interjected: "The guys have been told that they have to condition themselves—who they should talk to, what they should say. It's a question of stressing our neutrality."

Some of their officers will confide that most of the Canadians with UNEF feel a natural sympathy for the Israelis and a correspondingly coolness or even aversion for the habits and attitudes of the Arabs they encounter.

But the same officers usually add that any bias doesn't affect the way the Canadians do their job. And they point out that if they are ever spotted, they will deny saying anything about the world. Canada's neutrality as a highly sensitive UN fundamental.

The Canadians' leanings would probably surprise few Arabs, who are inclined to lump Canada with the United States and Israel as the foes of the U.S. as the arch-supporter of Israel.

Arab leaders were unenthusiastic about Canadian participation in the ceasefire force to begin with, consenting only after considerable pressure—and after insisting that Poland contribute a matching contingent.

Whether they bargained for it or not, when they got the Canadian force they invitably got some Jewish-Canadians on the Egyptian side of the ceasefire line.

Defence headquarters in Ottawa says its records don't indicate such information, but members of the force say they know of at least two Jews based on the main Canadian camp near Cairo.

One young soldier, who asked not to be identified, said his mother was worried — but he was brought up an Anglican. He was emphatic that his religious views would make any difference to him in the job—and he couldn't see affecting others with Jewish background, either.

Land Seized by Israel Triple Original State

Today Gilgal is a tiny frontier post in occupied Arab land, guarded by Israeli troops who grow vegetables between military alerts.

The biblical settlement, deserted for 20 centuries, is now a symbol of Israeli policy for the Geneva peace talks on the Middle East war.

The Arabs insist that Israel must surrender all 26,476 square miles of Arab territory it captured in 1967, plus about 1,200 more square miles added in the Yom Kippur war.

Jordan insists that some portions of the land—including strategic enemy positions like Gilgal—must be kept for security.

Last October, Premier Golda Meir told parliament: "Israel's borders will be placed only by secure, recognized and agreed boundaries, enumerated in a peace treaty." Israel had never made clear how much of the occupied land it intends to keep.

What and where are the occupied territories?

Here is the real estate overrun by the Israelis in October—900-square-mile sovereignty of Egypt on the west side of the Suez Canal and 300 square miles of the Golan Heights inside Syria.

Israel has indicated it might hand back the Egyptian zone and all but strategic Mount Hermon in Syria.

Far more important are the 26,476 square miles seized from Egypt, Jordan and Syria in 1967. Most of it is desert, and rock, part fertile farmland—is more than three times the size of Israel itself.

The zones are:

The Sinai Peninsula: A vast triangle of sand, rock, mountains and minerals, forming a land bridge between Asia and Africa, hinged to Egypt and the Suez Canal. Its 23,600 square miles are inhabited by 50 Bedouin tribesmen with only a few thousand townspeople.

Sinai contains the Abu Rhodis oilfields now used by Israel, and among its dunes run the main Israeli defence lines east of the Suez Canal. Large units of the Egyptian 3rd Army are trapped there as a result of the October war.

Egypt demands a complete withdrawal from Sinai. Israel insists on keeping at least Sharm El Sheikh on the southern tip and a corridor to Sharm which would link the virtually blockaded Straits of Tiran and the gulf that leads to its key Red Sea port of Eilat.

To underline the claim, Israel is building an air base at Sharm el Sheikh, with factories, apartments, a big airport and skindiving resorts.

The Gaza Strip: Nothing into Israel. Gaza—140 square miles of sand and orange groves. 385,000 Palestinians.

Israeli security forces took more than four years to suppress raids by guerrillas operating from the overcrowded refugee camps. Israel has given Gaza 50 thousands of Gaza workers, increased agricultural and citrus crops three times over, and rebuilding the refugees.

The Egyptian army, Israel says, must never return to Gaza—the strip begins only 49 miles from Tel Aviv and is within gun range of Israeli coastal towns.

The Golan Heights: A bleak volcanic plateau rising above the Sea of Galilee and the northern farmlands of Israel. Syrian shells have turned the sparsely populated heights into a fortress. Israel's claim for artillery commanding the Jewish settlements below. Israel captured 444 square miles of the Golan in 1967.

Population of the occupation zone is 8,000 Druzes, a minority Moslem sect, many of whom oppose Syrian rule.

Israel maintains the zone has thrived under its occupation. Last year, with higher farm yields, bigger incomes, better living standards and more tourists, Israeli press demonstrations disclosed per-seated investments to Jewish control of the 640,000 Arabs.

Many of the 40,000 west bank Palestinians who commuted to Israeli jobs each day stayed at home since the October war. Israel began building the bridges across the Jordan River. Traffic and trade continue with Hussein's kingdom.

Jordan's desert legion captured the west bank in the 1948 Mideast war and Hussein says Jordan has no legal right to it. But Mrs. Meir's government has made clear that much of the territory would be returned. Israel insists, provided it was demilitarized and Israel kept a string of strategic settlements on the frontier. Gilgal is one such settlement.

The government would demand many adjustments. Parts of the west bank thrust so deeply into Israel that the Jordan army was almost only eight miles from Tel Aviv and a few feet from Jewish Jerusalem before the 1967 war. But under Israel's racial plain was only 116 miles wide.

Jerusalem: The Holy City is the only piece of property which Israel says is not open to negotiation. East Jerusalem was, like Jordan in 1967, has been formally annexed and virtually everyone in Israel vows that the city will never again be divided.

Israel has repeatedly rejected demands—from the United Nations, the Pope, and other authorities—to internationalize Jerusalem but guarantees free access to the holy sites.

The occupied territories give Israel a sense of security. They keep Egyptian troops more than 120 miles away, the Syrians beyond gun range and the Jordanians 24 miles from Jerusalem instead of next door.

To defend, develop and integrate the Arab areas, Israel set up 41 Jewish settlements on occupied land before the October war, another 10 by the 130 Israeli civilians and 1,000 soldier-farmers.

Most Israelis seem convinced that giving back the territories would lead to a bigger demand—a return to the United Nations partition map of 1947.

The UN plan assigned to the Jews four tiny chopped-up areas, sliced and isolated from each other by Arab corridors. Israelis say they were impossible to defend against modern attack.

The Jews accepted the plan but the Arabs rejected it and went to war. They lost 2,300 square miles of land in the process and Israel gained a whole state.

Tunisia's moderate President Habib Bourguiba has repeatedly proclaimed that the 1947 map is the only solution acceptable to the Arabs.

Marmora

Four members offered to attend a public relations seminar in Peterborough on Friday, February 8.

A donation was received from the W. Leonard family.

President Edith Wiatt and six names on the Marmora Branch, Faye Lavender, Eleanor Bicknell, Bernice Smith, Jean Hadley, Elmore Barton and Beverly Maloney, attended the Emergency Measures Organization exercise in Marmora.

The first Robbie Burns Night took place at Canadian Legion Hall, Stirling, January 26 and was sponsored by Marmora District Lions Club.

Indian Dance

Shuswap Indian Ernie Philip of Haney, B.C., is joined by schoolchildren in an Indian dance during a visit to a school. He has visited more than 1,000 British Columbia schools since 1970 to dance and lecture on the history of North American Indians. (CP Photo)

Jet Set Keeps Flying

PARIS (AP) — Fuel shortages and faltering economies have failed to ground the European jet set.

In Rome, the rich circumvent the Sunday driving ban by buying a taxi of their own to tool around town or by flying off to Paris. Taxis are not affected by the driving ban in Italy.

In London, some of the social set worry enough about the fuel shortage to keep their Rolls-Royce in the garage. But there is the little Fiat to get them to their country homes for the weekend without too much gasoline consumption.

In Paris, little touched by fuel shortage, the energy crisis means running out of steam after dancing all night at Regine's Discotheque.

"Parties like people away from all the problems of everyday life," said Baroness Guy de Rothschild. "You can't sit around and mope all the time."

"Oh, everyone complains about the rising prices and all the world crises, but somehow people manage to keep right on living as they always have," said Princess Elisabeth of Yugoslavia, who is Mrs. Neil Balfour in London.

The Italian social set says it has been a little inconvenienced by the economic problems.

With nightclubs closing before midnight and taxis disappearing soon after, hostesses have to start seated dinner parties at unheard of hours for those accustomed to dancing till dawn.

"I think it's a disaster and such a bore as well," said Princess Irene Galitzine, Roman couturiere and international hostess. "I work until seven on my collection and barely have time for an eight o'clock dinner. Then everyone sits around watching the clock like school children so they'll be home by midnight."

With no cars allowed on the roads on Sunday some Italians have happily extended their weekends through Monday. Others, like Countess Sophia Loren's movie magnate husband, have paid as much as $20,000 for a private taxi.

Since television stations go those Londoners who are so "in" they never go out have rediscovered the nightclubs.

"I never used to go out if there was something good on television," said one London socialite. "But now without the Sunday night movie, we all have late night dinners and then go dancing at Annabelle's."

"It's almost as if people are giving a 10¢ more parties just to brighten up things," said Georgiana Russell, a London girl-about-town and former girlfriend of Prince Charles.

All over Europe, the rich and beautiful pursue their customary way of living. Maybe they talk about the Arab oil restriction over cocktails, but by the time the pate de foie gras arrives there's greater concern about whether or not St. Moritz is on this year.

The international set has been jazzed up with the addition of rock stars like Mick Jagger and his wife Bianca, new stars like Lisa Minnelli and designers like Yves St. Laurent.

Even some American businessmen are desirable additions.

"Humanity no longer begins with the baron," said one observer of the Paris scene.

The Playboy image has become almost as passe as the Pucci dress. Today's rich young man insists on at least the semblance of work.

"There aren't too many of those glamour boys left," said Countess Consuelo Crespi in Rome. "Ten years ago you could have fun doing nothing, but now all the intelligent, attractive men are working."

Socialites are working too. Gone are the likes of one Italian princess who years ago said she was so bored that one day she tweezed all the hairs off her legs.

But every job seems to be casual enough to permit last-minute jaunts to Acapulco, Senegal or Gstaad.

Paris, with its bright lights, taxis after midnight and formal parties remains the hub of the party scene.

Miss Onassis arrived just in time for a party given by Mr. and Mrs. Bernard Lanvin at Regine's. Baron Guy de Rothschild sported a fake moustache made from his own hair. Princess Caroline of Monaco, only 16 but already a sought-after beauty, came, draped in a gold boa. She 's the daughter of Prince Rainier and Princess Grace, the former movie star Grace Kelly.

But the big, frivolous balls are infrequent nowadays. "I think everyone is becoming a little more conservative," says Baron de Redé. "It's in bad taste to have some pointless costume ball."

Whether it's a big party or intimate dinner for 30, everyone complain about the lack of suitable escorts.

"We all know there are a lot of men around, but everytime I try to name them, I can't think of any," said Florence Grinda.

The eternal question is where shall we go, what shall we do now? Deauville or St. Moritz, or London?

If you know where to go, the inner circle admits it's not so hard to get into the social swim.

"You have to be terribly amusing, make everybody giggle and laugh," said Louloude Faisalw, Paris bachelor girl. "It helps to have looks, money and a title but, failing that, I suppose it's good to be bright. The easiest way, though, is probably to take a lover who's already in the scene."

Eleventh Century Castle Has Become Pleasant Hotel

MERANO, Italy (CP) — When you take a room at ancient Castello Labers you have a guarantee of more than food, lodging and a splendid view of a sun-soaked northern Italy valley.

Included is an incredible journey into part of Europe's exciting history—back through two world wars, the magnificent living of the late 1800s and even farther back to the days of warring dukes who built mountain-top castles to oversee their lush valley domains.

The journey begins with the first footsteps down the medieval main hallway of Labers, a castle that can be traced to 1077 and that now is a pleasant hotel. Battle axes, helmets worn by a duke's foot soldiers and hard-carved furniture are part of a decor.

Well concealed behind these reminders of ages past are most of the conveniences found in North American hotels. There's electricity, running water, a modern bar and a swimming pool.

Castello Labers, a four-storey stone and stucco relic, sits amidst 30 acres of vineyards and light forest one-half mile above this quiet south Tyrollan town about 125 miles northeast of Milan. Once the home of noblemen, and at one time even bought for a king, it now is a holiday spot.

It is one of several castles salvaged from the past in South Tyrol, a region which once was the southern section of the Austrian empire.

"Converting them to hotels is the best way of keeping old castles," says Labers owner George Stapf-Neubert, a 35-year-old career hotelman who first dreamed of operating Labers when he was 15.

"The maintenance costs are just too high for individuals to keep up these castles themselves."

The site originally was owned by Ulrich Von Lamprecht, a nobleman who built the first castle about 900 years ago. Just how much of the first building remains is not known.

In 1990, it was sold to a family of grape farmers who struggled with the vineyards which today still produce a tart red wine. In 1845 an architect named Von Klenze bought it and tried to transform it for Ludwig I of Bavaria. However, the king changed his mind and the architect sold it to another grape farmer.

Stapf-Neubert says that until the First World War, Labers was an exclusive resort for rich people from northern Europe.

The war resulted in South Tyrol becoming part of Italy, rather than Austria.

By the Second World War, Stapf-Neubert's grandparents were operating the hotel-castle and were driven away by the Germans secret service. It became the headquarters of a clandestine group which printed counterfeit British pound notes used to buy up gold.

When the castle reopened to guests in 1954 it was rented to a group which managed it for the family.

It was about that time that Stapf-Neubert decided he wanted to become a hotelman some day and operate Labers.

He took hotel management training and later worked in hotels throughout Italy and in London, Paris and Copenhagen. In 1964, he returned to Merano and took over the ancient castle-hotel.

The castle now sleeps 85 persons, has a bath in each of the huge rooms and has central heating.

Stapf-Neubert says the age of the castle makes it quiet and unique, but difficult to operate and maintain.

"It is definitely more difficult. It needs more staff than a new place because of its size and the layout.

"For instance, the kitchen is located far from the restaurant. And there are such large rooms to look after."

Maintenance and renovations can be a nightmare, he says. When electrical or plumbing updating is done, workmen are hampered by the thick stone and concrete walls.

The single rate for a room at Labers is about $16 Canadian a day. This includes all meals and services.

"We (he and his wife) are absolutely involved," said Stapf-Neubert. "We get to know every guest, even if they are newcomers."

Apparently this type of atmosphere pays off. He estimates that 80 per cent of Labers guests are people returning for a second or third stay.

Your Horoscope

By BERNICE BEDE OSOL
Tuesday, Feb. 5

Aries (March 21-April 19) You're very sensitive today regarding how you interpret others' remarks. A chance comment will cause you to over-react.

Taurus (April 20-May 20) In order to avoid work you should do you'll try some sort of ingenious shortcut; it will complicate the problem.

Gemini (May 21-June 20) This is not your day to take risks where money is concerned, nor would it be wise to impulsively speculate or gamble.

Cancer (June 21-July 22) Be sure to meet certain commitments you made to your mate and family regarding things you promised to do today.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22) You're the type of person who usually keeps things right out front for all to see. Don't resort to methods other than those today.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sep. 22) You could easily be talked into something financially unwise by a friend or close associate. Before you write any cheques—think.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Unorthodox measures will scare off your supporters today. Stick with traditional concepts they know and understand.

Scorpio (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) It's not the time to make any sudden changes in your plans. Act only on what you've carefully thought through, not on impulse.

Sagittarius (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) You will not come out as well as you should on business dealings today if you don't take the time to really investigate.

Capricorn (Dec. 23-Jan. 19) Under the influence of another you might aim for an unbelievable goal today. You might use methods that are not flattering to your image.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Face yourself very carefully while working. Don't try to do too much too quickly—the failure you get, the less effective you perform.

Pisces (Feb. 20-March 20) Be prepared for some minor disappointment with a close friend. Don't make too much of it. The slight wound will heal itself quickly.

You, South, hold:
♠ A K 7 6 ♥ A K 7 6 ♦ 2 6 ♣ K 10 4

What do you do now?

A — Bid three spades. There is some slight chance that there may be a slam.

TODAY'S QUESTION
You do bid three spades and your partner bids four clubs. What do you do now?

ANSWER TOMORROW

By Oswald and James Jacoby

Oswald: "One of the modern developments is the use of artificial forcing one-club bid. We have Neapolitan, Roman, Precision, Orange, Blue-Team and what-have-you clubs galore."

Jim: "It may well be that a forcing-club convention gives an expert with a developed partnership an advantage. The people who try to sell their club systems to the public claim that it is simpler than standard American. Nothing could be farther from the truth."

Oswald: "Today's hand illustrates one weakness of forcing-club systems. The bidding in the best is standard American."

Jim: "The bidding in any normal-club systems would start with the same one spade opening and would end right there."

Oswald: "The 4-2 spade break does not keep South from making four hearts with an overtrick. It holds the one spade declarers to three."

Jim: "It is quite likely that some standard-American bidders would miss the heart game, but at least they would all get into the heart contract while club bidders would be left in spades. Of course, we can show hands where club bidders reach good games that standard bidders miss. No bidding system is perfect."

Truckers' Strike Effects Spread

WASHINGTON (AP) — The independent truckers' shutdown spread to more than three-fourths of the United States today, prompting more layoffs and bringing new reports of violence.

An independent driver manning a blockade near Wilmington, N.C., was shot in the stomach and seriously wounded early today, police said. It was one of the few reports of injury resulting from the violence that has marked the protest, now in its sixth day.

Federal and state officials and truckers' representatives tried without success to reach a compromise to end the independent drivers' protest over fuel prices and freight rates.

The shutdown or its effects reached at least 39 states, Washington and Canada, where slowings were reported late Monday night or early today in Maine, Rhode Island, Indiana, Maryland, Delaware, Pennsylvania and North Carolin.

The number of layoffs reported in industries unable to get supplies or ship finished products also suspended 75,000. There were warnings that food shortages will start showing up at the retail level shortly.

Holly Farms Industries Inc., one of the largest poultry processors in the U.S., announced the indefinite closing of three plants in North Carolina and two in Virginia and the layoff of 6,000 persons due to the truckers' shutdown. "Since we can't ship, we can't process," a spokesman said. "It's a heck of a mess."

Truckers blocking fuel deliveries caused problems for schools in some areas where buses couldn't get gas. Classes in Garrett County, Md., were cancelled for the second day and the Allegheny County, Md., officials curtailed school bus service.

Sources close to the negotiations in Washington had indicated Monday night that agreement on a compromise plan was near, but the session broke up early today without a decision. Talks were scheduled to resume later in the day.

The compromise plan is reported to involve 11 points which the truckers consider "minimum acceptable demands."

In general, the demands involve the supply and price of truck fuel, freight rates, driver safety standards and federal and state regulations under which truckers operate.

The truckers' key point is a demand that they be permitted to pass increased fuel costs through to shippers plus an additional surcharge on existing freight rates.

The National Guard was on duty in Michigan, Ohio and Pennsylvania to keep order and prevent the shootings, rock throwing and tire slashings that have marked the widespread tie-up, which began last Thursday. One trucker was killed.

Troops were on standby alert in Connecticut, Kentucky and New Hampshire.

In Maryland, police reported three separate incidents in which trucks were fired Monday, but there were no injuries. One driver received eye injuries when a rock was thrown through the windshield of his truck as he crossed a bridge in Baltimore, police said.

Schools in Maryland's Garrett County were closed because officials said there was no diesel gasoline to run the school buses. The truck shutdown was blamed.

Pennsylvania Gov. Milton Shapp authorized the use of $1 million in state funds to deal with the strike after issuing a Proclamation of Extreme Emergency. Shapp said 30,000 workers in the state have been laid off by the shutdown and predicted the total will hit 250,000 by the end of the week if the protests continue.

More than 17,000 auto workers were laid off in nine plants in Wisconsin, Indiana, Illinois, Missouri and Ohio as parts deliveries dwindled because of the shutdown. The layoffs were projected to last from one day to a week.

In West Virginia, at least 3,500 persons were out of work in glass and electrical plants because of supply shortages.

The National Association of Food Chains said in Washington most food stores have enough meat and produce to meet normal consumer demand.

Canada Has $8 Target For Oil

By The Canadian Press

Energy Minister Donald Macdonald said Monday the federal government has proposed a pattern of gradual price increases that will raise the price of Canadian crude oil to $8 a barrel by 1976.

However, it would be "some years," Mr. Macdonald said, before Toronto-area oil will be allowed to reach international levels and a report of about $10.50 barrel.

The minister predicted some home heating oil shortages might hit Canadians this spring if severe cold weather follows oil refinery switchovers to gasoline production.

Meanwhile, a senior vice-president of Imperial Oil of Canada said it may become almost certain there will be no shortages of oil supplies this winter in Canada.

J. G. Livingstone told the Canadian Petroleum Association annual meeting that, barring further reductions in availability Arab oil, or major refinery breakdowns, "we appear likely to have adequate supplies throughout 1974."

Mr. Livingstone said the movement of Western Canadian oil to the east by tanker through the Great Lakes and the Panama canal, higher-than-expected operating efficiency at existing refineries and mild weather had contributed to lessening the expected shortages.

He added that shortages of some specialized products may still occur, but "these are related to limited general availability of specialized raw materials rather than to any overall shortage of petroleum in the country."

"On pricing, he said prices in Eastern Canada "should generally remain at the present level" while they would rise in Ontario and the west if the energy policy set forth at the federal-provincial energy conference last month is introduced.

Mr. Macdonald, speaking to a joint luncheon of the Canadian and Empire clubs of Toronto, said a $1 rise to about $8 a barrel for Canadian crude is likely in April when the price freeze is lifted, and this will result in a seven-cents-a-gallon increase in gasoline in Ontario.

The April 1 end-of-agreement, Nova Scotia Premier Gerald Regan said, also might mark collision course with the federal government.

If new agreement is not reached by that date, the two oil-producing provinces will be free to implement marketing plans which attempt to avoid federal jurisdiction over provincial prices by charging all sales within each province, he said.

"If they go ahead with these plans, the effect could be to nullify any federal attempt to tax exports to the United States or to control exports at a level lower than the so-called world price."

Ken Higham, 19, a second-year arts student at the University of Winnipeg claimed a world record for the most cigars one person has smoked simultaneously. Higham jammed 28 cigars into his mouth during a cigar-smoking contest at the university, stuggled to get them all lit and then successfully puffed for at least 30 seconds. The Guiness Book of World Records listed the previous mark as 14 cigars. (CP Photo)

Want Strike Vote

MONTREAL (CP) — About 200 garment workers occupied their union offices Monday to protest a decision by union leaders to defer a strike vote. A spokesman for the occupants said the workers were some of the 1,500 persons who staged walkouts in seven Montreal factories Monday.

Mindszenty Removed

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Pope Paul removed Josef Cardinal Mindszenty as primate of Hungary and archbishop of Esztergom today. The pontiff is reported to have acted in spite of opposition from the 81-year-old prelate, who spent 30 years in Nazi and Communist jails and became a symbol of Hungarian resistance to tyranny.

Nixon Gets Subpoena

The subpoena, requested by former presidential aide John Ehrlichman last Tuesday, ordered the president to appear in a courtroom here Feb. 25 and again April 15.

Judge Gordon Ringer of California Superior Court, who ruled that the president is a material witness in the trial of Ehrlichman and two other former White House aides, signed the subpoena.

The White House has said the president will resist the subpoena on constitutional grounds.

Ringer said he will be available to hear arguments in Los Angeles if the president chooses to challenge his order.

Prepare for Summit

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Nixon has increased the pace of preparations for an early summer Kremlin summit, ranging over plans for a return to Moscow and key international issues in talks with Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko.

May Get Materials

WASHINGTON (AP) — The White House is considering a request from the Watergate prosecutor for materials despite last week's statement by President Nixon that he has given prosecutors all the material they need. "This matter will be discussed in . . . confidential conversations and communications" between White House counsel and prosecutor Leon Jaworski, deputy press secretary Gerald Warren said Monday.

Strike by Coal Miners Set to Begin Sunday

LONDON (AP) — The executive of the coal miners' union today ordered a national strike to begin next Sunday.

The strike decision threatened to deal a crippling blow to the British economy.

The decision was taken by the executive of the National Union of Mineworkers, representing 289,000 men, and was submitted to the press by union president Joe Gormley.

The decision may halt British industry by spring. Coal supplies 70 per cent of the country's electricity. Coal stocks are already down two-third because of an overtime ban the miners have conducted since November. The ban has led to coal being higher pay.

The Conservative government of Prime Minister Edward Heath put Britain on a three-day work week from Jan. 1 to save fuel. It has warned that an all-out miners' strike may lead to a two-day work week and other emergency measures to save energy supplies because power stations have only enough reserves to last until the end of March.

Employment Secretary William Whitelaw will begin a meeting with Gormley today in press the government case. But Gormley said he could see no point to any more discussions and that the miners' leadership group went ahead with the strike decision.

Earlier, Gormley said a strike was not inevitable, and that a decent offer from the government might keep the miners on the job.

A strike vote last Thursday and Friday ran 81 per cent in favor of a walkout, the largest margin ever recorded by the miners' union. Leaders said the miners' executive group would agree to more talks only if the government increases its wage offer, which the government says already is as high as possible under its seven-per-cent anti-inflation ceiling.

"If the government doesn't take the result of the ballot seriously, then all I can say is that the government itself cannot be taken seriously," said Gormley.

Oil Price Rollback Becomes U.S. Issue

WASHINGTON (AP) — The price-rollback issue developing into the newest controversy as the United States Congress tries to agree on energy legislation.

While a Senate-House of Representatives conference on the energy crisis began work Monday deciding in favor of rolling back the price of some domestic crude oil, Treasury Secretary George Shultz was telling the Senate Finance Committee Monday that he is against a rollback.

During the ways and means committee's hearing on oil tax reform proposals, however, federal energy chief William Simon appeared to show at least some flexibility on rollback points. But talking later to reporters, Simon insisted he is not; clashing with Shultz.

Shultz and Simon, the Nixon administration's chief tax and energy officials, spent most of Monday explaining the details of the new proposals to the tax-writing House committee.

Meanwhile, the Senate-House conference task force on emergency energy legislation approved a proposal to roll back the price of some domestic crude oil, price-related oil it would apply to roughly 29 per cent of oil produced in the United States.

Senator Henry Jackson (Dem. Wash.), author of the provision, said administration officials estimate the rollback would lower the price of gasoline at the pump by 5½ cents. After the rollback to $5.25 a barrel, prices would increase only at a result of higher costs and would not exceed $7.08 a barrel.

The White House would have 30 days in which to ask Congress to exempt certain categories of oil from the rollback and price-ceiling provisions, if it found that the lowered price would reduce supply. The emergency bill also would give the president power to order gasoline rationing and other energy conservation measures.

Bulgarians Assessed $125,000 for Fishing

NEW YORK (AP) — A Bulgarian fishing boat was seized Monday night after its skipper was fined $20,000 and its owner paid the United States government $105,000 in an out-of-court civil settlement.

The trawler Limosa was intercepted Jan. 26 by the United States Coast Guard, which claimed the boat was fishing almost two miles inside the 12-mile limit off the New Jersey coast.

The vessel, its 79-member crew and a catch of 182 pounds of mackerel have been held at coast guard headquarters here.

The Bulgarian captain, Peter Todorov Donchev, appeared before District Court Judge Morris Lasker, who fined him $20,000 and said he believed the man's story that the Limosa had entered U.S. territorial waters accidentally.

Donchev was charged with unlawfully fishing within the fisheries zone contiguous to the territorial waters of the U.S. The maximum penalty is a fine of $100,000 and a year in prison.

The vessel's owner was described as a fishing cooperative that is "an entity of the Bulgarian government."

In another courtroom, District Court Judge Constance Motley approved the $105,000 out-of-court settlement.

The civil action originally sought condemnation of the $1.2 million trawler, a floating factory equipped to process and freeze fish.

York County Dispute Only One Unsettled

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Negotiations are to continue between the York County high school teachers and the board of education after a 7½-hour bargaining session was adjourned early today.

Details of the talks were not disclosed and no date was set for resumption.

The Huron-Perth separate school board ratified an agreement with its 159 teachers late Monday, leaving only York County without a contract settlement.

The agreement is the second reached in the three school districts which were still in dispute Friday. The 351 teachers in Essex County who resigned en masse Friday reached an agreement with their board Sunday.

Secondary schools in York County did not close after 607 of the 823 resigned Friday, but operated with reduced staffs. Only 38 per cent of the county's 14,100 secondary school students attended classes Monday.

Education Minister Thomas Wells sent telegrams to the Huron-Perth representatives of the board and teachers, commending them for their "responsible attitude and . . . common concern for the welfare of the pupils."

Chilly Dip for St. Kitts Students

Seven students from Denrils Morris Hospital in St. Catharines, Ont., went for a swim in Lake Ontario. Their aim was to raise money for "Birth Right-Against Abortion." Dan Mahoney, at right, stayed in 4½ minutes and Jim Richardson, extreme right, managed 6 minutes. It was snowing at the time and the water temperature was 35 degrees.

Sweet Snacks Dental Villains

One of the aims of Dental Health Week is to persuade the public to kick their sweet snack habit.

Few people realize how frequent their intake of sugar is, and the role it plays in causing cavities.

Plaque, an invisible film of tissue cells and mucous forms over the teeth and provides an ideal growing medium for bacteria. The acids produced by bacteria eat the enamel of the teeth, causing cavities. The sugar is the substance the bacteria feed upon. If their food supply is cut off, the bacteria cease multiplying and the danger of tooth decay is lessened.

Dr. M. Trunvert of the University of Toronto says snacking is permitted in families whose members exhibit well-preserved teeth. But the natural or day-time snacks are different. She suggests substituting a bag of chips for a chocolate bar. Other acceptable snacks are fruits, raw vegetables, boiled eggs, nuts, cheese, crackers and toast and sugar-free soft drinks.

"Most caries cavities are caused by sweetened foods and drinks that are taken between meals as snacks, the sticker ones being the worst," says Dr. Trunvert.

Couple Will Share Ministry

MELROSE—Quinte pastoral charges of Melrose and Deseronto will have a husband and wife ministerial team this coming summer with Sunday services shared alternately by the couple.

Student Minister Bob Thompson will occupy both pulpits until May when his wife will take afternoon.

Mr. Thompson presided over the annual meeting of the official board of the Quinte Pastoral charge held at the Melrose Church.

Officers for 1974 are: minister, Mr. and Mrs. Bob Thompson, treasurer — Gerald Lott; missionary and service — Mrs. Percy Piercy, recording secretary, Mrs. Grant McLaren and manse committee — Evelyn Hawley, Mrs. Ivan Bryan, Henrietta Cole, Ken and Lois McMechan and Vincent Pascoe.

Farmers Concerned With Plan

PICTON—Prince Edward County milk producers should be concerned about the county's proposed official plan say their spokesmen.

The Prince Edward County Milk Committee says "considerable pressure" is being created for "unorganized and indiscriminate urban sprawl" of residences across the county.

The number of farms has declined by 25 per cent, while the size of the individual farm increased by 24 per cent, says a committee report. The dollar value of farm products in the county has soared 153 per cent in the past 10 years, the most significant increase being in field crops, livestock, dairy, fruit and vegetable products. There has been a shift from diversified to specialized farming.

The committee's Ken Wright says he questions some of the changes, and that some areas are unsuitable for the farm purposes for which they are being worked.

Some of the best farmland in the county is in areas near potential development, he says. If farmers were an "intensive specialized dairy industry" they would make certain that zoning bylaws do not restrict development of large livestock complexes or present ones. The best corn and alfalfa land must not be eaten up by "industrial development," he adds.

Gasoline Prices Vary At Quinte-area Outlets

By PETER GOODSPEED
Staff Reporter

Not all gasoline wars are the same. The price on the pump face makes a difference.

A survey of 37 gas outlets in the Belleville area this week indicated price differences of 6.1 cents a gallon on regular gas and seven cents a gallon on premium gasolines.

The "pump price" of gasoline was checked, by telephone, at three major companies outlets and at two discount gas bars. The company breakdown was: Shell, 10; Texaco, nine; Esso, nine; Gulf, four; Sunoco, three; Spur, two; BP, ONE; Fina, one; and Imperial, one.

Discount and self-serve gas bars generally offered the best deal with the lowest price for regular gas being 53.9 cents a gallon at three of the stations surveyed. These were: Gas Bar, 488 Dundas Street West, Pioneer Gas Bar, 43 the corner of Coleman and West Moira and the Gulf Self Serve, 345 Dundas North Front Street.

The highest price for regular gasoline was 60 cents a gallon at Durnford Esso, on Highway 37 in Carrytville. Three gas stations in Belleville said their regular gasoline for 59.9 cents a gallon, while most of the other stations told their regular gasoline for either 57.9 or 58.9 cents a gallon.

When comparing prices for high grade or premium gasolines, again the discount gas bars and the self service stations were generally cheaper.

The lowest high grade gasoline pump price was 58.9 cents a gallon at the Gulf self-service station on North Front Street and at the DS Gas Bar on Dundas Street West.

The Pioneer Gas Bar, however, which had one of the lowest prices for premium gasoline, was selling its premium gas for 59.9 cents a gallon, a price that was comparable to the amount being charged by the other major stations.

The highest premium gasoline price—was found at the Gulf station at Western Tire and Auto Supply in the Belleville Plaza where premium gas sold for 67.9 cents a gallon. The price range for premium gasoline at other service stations was between 62.9 and 64.9 cents a gallon.

All prices listed were taken directly from the pump for the lowest and the highest price available. Prices may not be directly comparable between different companies because quality may vary somewhat from station to station.

One service station manager noted that octane ratings may change somewhat anywhere from 12 to 14 times a year to meet different was their conditions. This is strictly in gasoline quality could account for some very slight price differences, he said.

Some companies offer the motorist more than two types of gasoline. A third, low-lead count gas bars. The company breakdown was: Shell, 10; Texaco, nine; Esso, nine; Gulf, four; Sunoco. three; Spur, two; BP, ONE; Fina, one; and Imperial, one.

Perhaps the largest price difference was found between the price of premium gasolines at Lou's Gulf Service Centre, 144 Dundas Street East, where premium was selling for 53.9 cents a gallon and premium gas was prices at 62.9 cents. The high price station was Lynn's Shell Service, in Rossmore, where regular gas was going for 59.9 cents and premium cost 64.9 cents.

Trudeau Motors also has a three cents a gallon discount for motorists whose cars carry a Trudeau Motors card.

In the Trenton area most service stations surveyed had a steady price of 59.9 cents a gallon for regular gas and 64.9 cents a gallon for premium gas.

Hamilton's Texaco, 165 Dundas Street East sold regular gas for 59.9 cents a gallon and premium gas for 64.9 cents. Answorth's Texaco, 336Dundas Front St., sells its regular gas at 57.9 cents a gallon while the premium gasoline sells for 66.9 cents.

Among the Esso stations surveyed, Durdord Esso in Corbyville had the highest prices — 60 cents a gallon for regular and 64 cents a gallon for premium. Art's Esso, 196 North Front St., and Ed's Esso, 353 Station St., had the lowest prices — 57.1 cents a gallon for regular and 63.1 cents a gallon for premium.

Cook's Fina, 26 North Front St., sold regular gas for 58.9 cents and premium gas for 64.9 cents.

Bonnar's BP, 60 Dundas St. East, sold regular gas at 57.9 cents a gallon and premium gas at 63.9 cents a gallon.

Two of Belleville's Spur Station — 337 North Front Street and 221 Canniffon Road — sold their regular gas for 57.9 cents a gallon for regular and 62.9 cents a gallon for premium.

The Superstest Station, Roger's Service Station, 31 Canniffon Rd. was selling regular gas for 58.9 cents a gallon and premium for 64.9 cents a gallon.

One last interesting note on the range of gasoline prices in the Belleville area is that the discount gas bars buy their gasoline from the major oil companies, and from lower quality European suppliers.

The manager at DX Gas Bar said that his company purchased its gasline from the BP Oil Co. There was a four cent a gallon difference between the pump price of regular gasoline at the cit@ BP station and the DX station. The DX premium gas was three cents a gallon cheaper than the BP premium gas.

Pioneer Gas Bar buys its gasoline from Gulf Oil and its pump prices were four to five cents a gallon cheaper for regular and premium gasoline price, however, was similar to that of other Gulf station.

'Bad Apple' Blamed For Strike Vandalism

TRENTON — Friday night vandalism at the strike-bound Fahrion Manufacturing plant were dismissed today by company president Jack Allmendinger, as the work of "one bad apple."

Through the joint cooperation of the company and the striking Union of Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers of America, information has been forwarded to Trenton police to aid tracking down suspects.

The police have no comment.

Late Friday it was reported the plant's truck compound had been smashed in and brake lines cut and tires slashed.

Pickets gave the license plate number of a vehicle in the area at the time.

Mr. Allmendenger says the pickets are "decent, steady employees who conducted themselves as gentlemen during the dispute.

"This damage is the work of one bad apple," he said.

Doug Tyner, union national representative, said the union is dismayed at the incident.

Struck Plant Makes Shipment

TRENTON — Using rental-agency trucks, Fahrion Manufacturing here has made its first shipment of wire products today, without incident.

This is the first shipment to enter or leave the plant since the strike of 115 workers began last Sunday.

James Allmendinger, company president, says, he "doesn't want to lose customers — I have to stay in business."

Douglas Tyner, national representative for the striking Union of Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers, said it is unfortunate they allow company trucks to cross picket lines. They can't get organized unless they cross the lines."

Mr. Tyner said a "company foreman drove a rental company truck to Highway 401 where it was loaded up and driven by a rental company driver."

Mr. Tyner said he had no comment on any future union steps in the event of any future shipments.

Dogs at Large Cost $26 Each

TRENTON—In round figures it cost Trenton taxpayers $26 each year with two animal control services last year, estimates a report being considered Monday night.

Some 107 dogs were caught and impounded in the city during the year along with 17 cats, at a cost to the town of about $2,600.

Capital Works Budget Pushing Up Town Taxes

By COLIN BRUCE
Staff Reporter

TRENTON — There is no question that a capital budgets of last year and this year will mean a mill-and-a-half hike. The question following last night's council meeting is how much?

Town council began budget discussions this year earlier than in the past as it bid to cut down rising financing costs incurred during lengthy delays awaiting Ontario Municipal Board approval.

To wipe out over-spending in last year's capital works, a 1.3 mill rate advance will be needed followed by a 1.5 mill hike the following year.

On the low end of the scale, if the town were to decline any capital projects this year, a financial forecast submitted by town treasurer Brian Fagan points to mill rate decreases in years following.

Contrary to this, if council is to agree to all submitted capital works requested by town bodies, the mill rate would soar 11 mills to cover the 1974 capital budget bill.

Facing council now are the questions of compromise to fall somewhere between decreasing mill rates and the 11-mill increase.

After reading through the proposed capital budget, councillor John Grant said, "when do we start slashing."

A move for assistance to slashing was offered by town clerk O. W. Larry who said, "we should spend to the maximum in capital projects today is the most costly thing."

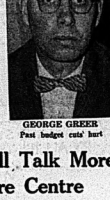
Topping the list of projects in the capital budget is roadwork and related jobs totalling $519,000. Next comes the industrial commission submission for $225,000 for servicing of 45 acres of land slated for industrial park development.

Recreation and Parks have sought $176,000 in capital funds followed by the Conservation Authority requesting $47,000.

Because councillors have had only the weekend to study budget presentations, Mayor Bob Patrick encouraged council to take the material home with them to study it further with more discussion pinpointed for them next Monday.

A clear picture of how the taxpayer's dollar will be affected will not be available until the municipal auditor's current budget is finished. There is some question as to whether funds might be used to offset some of the capital costs.

With early discussion of the capital budget council is getting a head start to the OMB, hoping for earlier approval that will cut interim finance costs.



There was differing opinion in council how much spending the capital budget could withstand.

Senior councillor George Greer commented if the capital budget hadn't been cut so badly in previous years, council wouldn't have to put double for projects that could have been completed less expensively in years past.

Other councillors along with Councillor Bonn, indicated they are sharpening scissors in readiness for the upcoming debates in compromise.

Tweed-area Fire Burns Barn of Former Warden

TWEED—Fire near here Monday afternoon destroyed a barn owned by a well-known Hastings County rural native, once prominent in its local government.

Scene of the blaze was the farm of Harold Varty, three miles east of here on Hungerford township's 11th concession. Mr. Varty, with a long record of service in local government, was reeve of his township for several years and county warden in 1962. In recent years he has been active in Tweed-area senior citizens' programs.

The blaze broke out in below-zero temperatures shortly before 5 p.m. The blaze, a 74-square-foot wood structure, contained some quantities of grain and hay at the time. Mr. Varty also had used it for storage of antique farm equipment.

Tweed volunteer firefighters said there was no wind at the time of the outbreak and this probably kept the fire from spreading to the nearby Varty home.

Cause of the blaze was not immediately known and there was no official report of loss, although an unofficial estimate placed it around $40,000.

Trenton Will Decide Next Week on Fares

TRENTON—You'll be paying 25 per cent more for taxi rides soon if council formally approves fare hikes next Monday.

At present, fares are scheduled 50 cents for the first quarter-mile and 10 cents for each quarter-mile thereafter.

The proposal, which received mild approval at Monday night's committee-of-the-whole session, would include 60 cents for the first 0.6 of a mile and 10 cents following.

Escalating costs of operation, particularly gas, was cited as the reason for the rate raise, the first in slightly less than two years.

It is expected formal approval will be given the by-law at council next Monday.

Township Wage Hikes

MARMORA — An increase of 82 cents to $3.90 per hour has been given to hourly-rated employees, and an increase of 50 cents to $3.75 to the road superintendent by Marmora-Lake township council.

All raises are retro-active to Jan. 1. General workers will receive $2.50 per hour.

The roads committee will meet with Tom Murphy, engineer, Ministry of Transportation and Communications in Kingston, to review the township's road maintenance equipment and discuss construction and maintenance requirements for 1974.

Mr. Murphy has advised Council to submit a capital construction application for road subsidy as soon as possible.

An application on the Township's behalf for a subsidy allocation to cover cost of maintaining six miles in the Shannon area of Lake Township, has already been filed, Mr. Murphy told the meeting of Reeve Graham Bell.

Flags, Photo From MP

MARMORA (Special) — A large, color photograph of Marmora village was presented to Reeve Jack Reynolds Monday night by Hastings MP Eric Ellis.

Mr. Ellis took the shot while flying over the village in a private plane he was piloting.

It is an eastward view of the municipality with the Legion Park in the foreground. According to a council spokesman the picture will be framed and hung in council chambers.

Mr. Ellis also presented two Canadian flags to council Monday night — one for use by the village and the second for the clerk-treasurer's desk.

In return, Councillor Bill McKenzie presented Mr. Ellis with a Lions Club calendar.

While thanking Mr. Ellis, Reeve Reynolds assured the MP a warm reception whenever he had the time to visit the village in his new mobile office.

Students Score with Recycling Project

MARMORA (Special) — The weekend Tri-Town paper drive, sponsored by grade nine forestry classes at Centre Hastings Secondary School in Marmora, pays teacher Carl A. Winterburn.

Idea of the collection originated with Mr. Winterburn, eager to provide some practical lessons in conservation.

An estimated five tons of paper was collected during the drive and will be delivered to a recycling mill in Strathcona.

Due to the enthusiasm of the students and response from area citizens, Mr. Winterburn says it is almost certain another drive will be held.

Fire Wardens

MARMORA — Marmora Lake township council added one more duty to that of Road superintendent Gordon Lee, when it appointing him chief fire warden for 1974.

Other wardens will be Clayton Tompkins, John Wilkes, Gordon Jones, Cecil Neal, Jim Thompson and Clerk Madsell Gawley who replaces her father, Tom Bateman.

Burning Rectal Itch Relieved In Minutes

One of the most common afflictions is a condition known as "Itching Piles." It is most embarrassing for the sufferer if he or she delays any seeking relief—here's good news. A Drugless research laboratory has found a unique healing substance with the ability to promptly relieve the burning itch and pain, it actually shrinks hemorrhoids. This substance has been shown to produce a most effective rate of healing. In pure-drug preparation also help prevent infection.

In one hemorrhoid case after another, "very striking improvement" was reported. This improvement was maintained in cases where clinical observations were continued over a period of many months. Furthermore, these tests showed "no toxicity." It is most embarrassing for the sufferer if he or she delays any seeking relief—here's good news. Council Will Talk More On Day-care Centre

TRENTON—Council last night was asked by a letter relieving Hastings County from any financial responsibility in the proposed day care centre requested for Trenton.

A special committee of Hastings County Council has discussed the day-care centre proposal. According to welfare administrator Reginald Tucker, the committee will recommend council's approval. This approval should be ready next month.

Councillors were confused to what extent the town would be responsible for costs, not being clear on the amount of financial support from the province.

Already the welfare department is meeting with day-care centre officials here determining costs and further information that will spell the extent of provincial co-operation.

New Arena Would Cost $140,000

MARMORA — An estimate of $140,000 to build a new arena has been given by Greer, consulting engineer of Galloway & Associates Ltd., to the Marmora Rink Committee.

This would provide a new cover on the present site, leaving the present dressing rooms intact, Councillor James (Scotty) Bell has reported to Marmora Lake township council. The amount of money estimated would cover cost of footings, cement block walls, steel trusses and a new roof.

The rink committee has asked the consulting firm to provide them with estimates of adding a header to the structure to house two curling rinks in addition to specifications for a contractor to build with, plus a representative from the township, to oversee the construction. A report on how much estimated is expected within a week.

The consultants are from Galloway and Associates which has offices in Belleville.

Donation

MARMORA — A $25 donation was made by Marmora and Lake township council to the St. John's Ambulance Society at the February meeting of council.

Northumberland Woos, Task Force Proposes East, West? Trenton-QPB to Talk

TRENTON — Town council will meet with representatives of the Quinte Planning Board Feb. 19 to discuss its desire to bet for Trenton, east or west.

In recent months municipalities in Northumberland have been courting Trenton to make some commitment to link them in region to the west of Hastings county boundary.

Last week a technical-task force studying the Northumberland area advised Trenton be included in the study.

Late in the 1960's town council met with western municipalities to discuss how Trenton would fit into their scheme but gave no commitment or indication of sentiment during the lengthy session.

Now, town council Monday night will go to a meeting with Belleville, Sidney and Thurlow in Belleville as a first Frankford to discuss "what they have to offer."

"We want to retain our identity and get the best deal for town," said Mayor Bob Patrick following last night's committee of the whole session.

"We're keeping an open mind," said the mayor, refusing to give his personal preference.

"We'll be discussing the desirability of Trenton staying in the area with Belleville and the township," he said.

Trenton has an ideal harbour gaining situation, located between two areas that are headed a sound population base that would support a re-

Regional systems have reached Northumberland area causing them to be the first concerned in the municipal thinking westward.

Mayor Patrick said he didn't know what a westward decision would do to Trenton's participation in the Quinte Planning Area.

"It's tough to answer," he said.

In the event Trenton decided to move to a westward region the Quinte Planning Board has the option picking out of the lease agreement with the town for office space.

Recommendations and objectives of the task group studying Trenton and Northumberland should be available in the next few weeks.

Land in Lieu of Taxes Lands in Dilemma

TRENTON — An elderly, unnamed lady says she will drop all claim to some Ramsay Street property for $500.

Town council took possession of the property in lieu of taxes and encountered no difficulty registering it.

During a sale agreement council was informed a clear title could not be awarded the land and the sale bogged down with council returning the prospective buyer's money.

The option that faces council is pay the $500 to the woman, who claims she has the mortgage, or fight it in court.

"With our record at litigation, we might as well pay for it," said Councillor George Greer, (Council has yet to win a litigation of this sort). "It would be nice if we could win one though."

Council has left the matter idle for the time being, but will approach the earlier buyer with the opportunity to pay the woman and expedite the sale.

If that buyer is not willing to pay the $500 the purchaser has the option of waiting for the case to appear in court, which could mean a year's delay if council pursued the issue.

Failing this, council will offer any buyer the opportunity to come up with the fee.

Refuse Firm Water Dump

TRENTON — Town council Monday night gave a verbal use permission to Moore Business Forms to dump storm water into the sanitary sewer system.

The request came as a surprise following the announcements of major capital project spending to eradicate this practice across the town.

The town's administrative board suggested council refuse the request and a formal decision is expected Monday.

Due to elevations, the company is forced to install a pumping system that will force the water into the storm system.

Employees' Parking Is Problem

TRENTON — Trenton's parking authority will be asked to make a definite decision on free parking for municipal office staff.

In an administrative board report last night to council, free parking was requested, though town clerk O. W. Larry said, "the roof will probably fall in if we get it."

"The public will say we're milking the municipality if we get the parking privileges," he added.

Several councillors rejected the free parking idea, recalling early discussions prior to town office construction. At that time it was felt staff could use parking in the area of the Legion.

Rather than making any decision, council will leave the question in the hands of the authority, responsible for the parking garage.

Moonlighting Bylaw Is Strengthened

TRENTON — Council opted last night for stronger wording in its moonlighting bylaw moonlighting by town hall staff.

Mentioned specifically were draftsmen who were drawing plans for developers in the town.

The bylaw states no town employees may engage in any work on their own time which is in future years in conflict to the town in the maintenance of such areas.

The last section of the bylaw will be deleted putting the bylaw drawing completely out of bounds. Designers may still do work for other municipalities or developers outside of Trenton.

AIRPORT INQUIRY COMMISSION
COMMISSION D'ENQUÊTE SUR L'AÉROPORT

Notice of Hearings

THE AIRPORT INQUIRY COMMISSION will hold Organizational Hearings on:
Wednesday, 20th February, 1974
Thursday, 21st February, 1974
Friday, 22nd February, 1974

for the purpose of organizing Public Hearings to receive evidence in respect to the matters set out in Order in Council, P.C. 1973-3026 dated 5th October, 1973.

Hearings at Malton

On Wednesday, 20th February, 1974 the first Organizational Hearing of the Commission will be held at:
Howard Johnson Motor Lodge, Dixon Road and 27 Highway, 8:30 p.m.

The purpose of the Hearing on this date is to determine the procedure that will be followed at the Public Hearing and the role of any Counsel at such Hearing in respect to the following matters:

The Government of Canada has made forecasts as to the volume of passenger, air-cargo, and aircraft movements in the central Ontario market to the year 2000.
On the basis of these forecasts, without receiving any new evidence at this time as to the validity of these forecasts as such evidence will be received at subsequent hearings), in relation to the following questions of fact, is there any new evidence that Toronto International Airport, Malton, can be expanded or reconfigured within present boundaries to meet all reasonable needs to the year 1980, to the year 1990, and to the year 2000, that is to say:

1. Can the forecast growth of air traffic be met without increasing the number of people affected by noise disturbance from aircraft?
2. Can the runway capacity be extended to meet the forecast growth of air traffic?
3. Can the terminal capacity be increased to meet the forecast growth of air traffic?
4. Can ground access be provided to meet the forecast growth of air traffic?

Monday, 18th March, 1974, Howard Johnson Hotel, Dixon Road & Highway 27, 6:00 p.m.

Evidence statements in respect to the above questions should be filed on or before 4th March, 1974, in accordance with the Commission's Practice and Procedure.

Hearings at Pickering

On Thursday, 21st February, 1974, the second Organizational Hearing of the Commission will be held at:
Pickering High School, Church St. North, Town of Pickering, L1V 2P7

In respect to the following questions:
In relation to the following three questions of fact, is there any new evidence to prove that the site near Pickering, Ontario, is not suitable for the new International Airport for the central Ontario market, that is to say:
(1) Is this site not suitable because of the number of people that will be affected by noise disturbance from aircraft?
(2) Is this site not suitable because of regional economic effects?
(3) Is this site not suitable because of total environmental effects?

Monday, 1st April, 1974, Pickering High School, Pickering, Church St. North, 6:00 p.m.

Evidence statements in respect to the above questions should be filed on or before 25th March, 1974, in accordance with the Commission's Practice and Procedure.

Hearings at Toronto

B In relation to the following questions, is there any new evidence to prove that the site near Pickering, Ontario, is not suitable for the new International Airport for the central Ontario market, that is to say:
(1) Is this site not suitable because of passenger inconvenience?
(2) Is this site not suitable because of the on-site and off-site facilities that will be required to be built, such as roads, railways, guideways, helicopter facilities, etc.?

Monday, 22nd April, 1974, Council Chamber, Toronto, Old City Hall, Court Room 42, 6:00 p.m.

Evidence statements in respect to the above questions should be filed on or before 8th April, 1974, in accordance with the Commission's Practice and Procedure.

On Friday, 22nd February, 1974, the third Organizational Hearing of the Commission will be held at:
Council Chamber, Old City Hall, Queen Street West, Toronto, 2:30 p.m.

In respect to the following matters:
The Government of Canada has made forecasts as to the traffic volume of passenger, air-cargo and aircraft movements to the year 2000.
The questions for consideration are:
A (1) Is there any new evidence as to what is the expected peak maximum hourly volume in the domestic, trans-border and international air traffic movements for the year 1980?
(2) For the year 1990?
(3) For the year 2000?

No evidence will be adduced or admitted at any Organizational Hearings, but the conduct and procedure for each Public Hearing will be established.
The Public may file, in writing, suggestions for any additional topic or questions within the terms of reference prescribed in Order in Council, P.C. 1973-3026.
Representation by counsel and all other information in connection with the Hearings is contained in the Commission's Practice and Procedure, copies of which may be obtained, free of charge, at the Commission's offices as noted below.

Missing Link

The "Future Shock" world which author Alvin Toffler outlines in his crystal ball look into the future is already with us in the growing pressures of everyday life, in the growing demands, and in its soulless disregard for the inner spiritual man.

We are deeply rooted in a materialist, synthetic way of life in which things spiritual have little opportunity to flourish, in which human contacts are at best ephemeral and superficial; at worst, harsh or devoid of any spark of feeling.

Hetty Shapiro of The Montreal Gazette took a look at this spirit of altruism (or lack of it) recently as she told of passing up several opportunities for helping her fellow man: like ignoring a shivering young hitchhiker, driving on after seeing a white-faced woman lying on the sidewalk and deciding not to visit a friend in hospital that day. It would have been inconvenient, of course, to stop, and help doubtless would have been closer at hand than any passing motorist. Nevertheless writer Shapiro left none of her readers in any doubt of what she meant: that the majority of us would find some good excuse for not becoming involved.

This is a look-after-yourself society. Oh sure there are the social agencies, but what about the day-to-day human contacts which could be so much more rewarding for a friendly smile, or some kindly interest. That these are qualities of human kind and may be more lacking than ever is suggested by Dr. J. D. Wallace of the Canadian Medical Association when he warns of the high incidence of suicide among young people.

Describing it as alarming, Dr. Wallace says 20 years ago few young people took their own lives, but in the 15 to 30 age group today suicide has become the No. 2 killer after traffic fatalities. He believes it indicates "our modern world with its problems may be too much for the young person to face alone."

Dr. Wallace suggests doctors should be more alert to suicidal tendencies in young patients. What he calls production-line medicine practised by many physicians does not spot the danger signals.

In China they have their "barefoot doctors," a considerable number of young people trained to carry out basic medical care throughout that vast land. Perhaps there is a need here for something of the kind, whether trained in medicine or in psychiatry, who could assist our doctors — most of whom are overworked as it is — as counsellors. Someone to lend a sympathetic ear at least.

But we can all help, by reaching out a little more and showing genuine interest in the needs of others. Failure in this task could mean a further descent into the faceless world created by "progress" and ultimately the dread concepts of the society of 1984 as envisaged by George Orwell.

Detroit Mayor's Warning

Mayor Coleman Young who with a couple of members of his police force in Detroit had an identification problem with the Earl of Snowdon when he came to town with his camera last week, is now cracking down on the same police force where treatment of blacks is concerned.

There is no doubt that his warning, following on the one he served recently on the city's criminal elements to "hit the road," will be noted in other U.S. cities where police attitudes and methods leave something to be desired.

Young, who is Detroit's first black mayor, took action when a 19-year-old former gang member wanted for jumping bail told him the police had threatened to kill him if they caught him alone.

Saying police harassment of blacks had been going on "all my life," Young warned a police inspector in the case that he would be held personally responsible for the safety of the youth while awaiting sentencing.

The attitude of the police of course stems in part at least from the lawlessness of the blacks themselves. Continued polarization however can lead only to further reasonboling, a situation that has made Detroit the most bedevilled of communities in a nation where urban violence is commonplace.

If Mayor Young can make his influence felt in this situation, it may effect the kind of change for the better in police and citizen relations that is needed in Detroit.

Canada More Fortunate Than Some

Oil Crisis' Threat to Economic and Fiscal Structure

By VINCENT EGAN
Business and Consumer Affairs Analyst
Thomson News Service

John Turner has just completed two years as Canada's finance minister. Not even he could have dreamed, when he took the portfolio Jan. 30, 1972, that the near-term future held such horrendous financial problems in store.

He put it this way the other day:

"The sudden eruption of a massive international oil crisis late last year, which endangered eastern Canadian petroleum supplies and touched sharp upward pressure on prices, has threatened to distort Canada's whole economic and fiscal structure."

At that, Canada has been luckier than other industrialized countries. All because of the Arab oil embargo, Japan's recently booming economy has gone into a sudden tailspin; the U.K. "Engineers" had to go on a six-week economic moves across the board, and in the United States, the treasury secretary has to cope with oil price increases as "simply unconscionable."

The if Canada's situation is better, the difference is only relative. In the centre of Canada's economic cowering, not the sudden arrival of oil supply problems and sky-rocketing prices presented a challenge that we were not ready to handle.

So far, governments' efforts have consisted chiefly of a scramble to "buy time" through price ceilings and export taxes. Consumers have had to put up with substantial increases in the price of gasoline, heating fuel and other petroleum products, in the knowledge that more and bigger price increases are just ahead.

Finance Minister Turner noted that Canadians would face increased costs, approaching $3-billion a year, if the domestic price of oil—of which we use two million barrels a day—were to rise to the prevailing world level of about $10.50 a barrel.

Along with such a price increase would go similar increases in revenues to governments or oil companies, or both, he told the Canadian Club of Toronto.

Turner speculated on the consequences of Alberta's receiving all of the additional revenues, should Canadian oil prices rise to world levels. The federal government would have to put up more than $3-billion a year in annual equalization payments to the provinces. Ontario and perhaps British Columbia would become eligible for such payments as "have-not" provinces, and your personal income tax could rise by 22 per cent.

As Mr. Turner said, "clearly such an outcome would not be manageable economically or politically."

"In the end, there will no doubt be a typically Canadian compromise on domestic oil price increases. But that won't mean the end of our problems."

Eastern Canada's oil supplies remain uncertain until imports from Arab countries resume or a pipeline extension is completed to the Western Canadian crude oil.

Our economy will suffer from slowdown in other countries.

Inflation will be even worse than it was before the Arabs' cartel put the squeeze on oil prices.

The world economy has been brought to a major turning point. It will take hard work and unprecedented co-operation to restore the growth trends that we used to be able to take for granted.

Jobs Remain Scarce for Young People Today

By DON O'BEARN
Queen's Park Bureau
Thomson News Service

TORONTO — Minister Without Portfolio Margaret Birch made a speech the other day about the problems of the young in finding work.

It was a good speech, though not a particularly optimistic one in that the minister in charge of the youth secretariat was not seeing any realistic, bright and quick solutions.

The gist of it was that there are more than 4,000 jobs available in Ontario, but that most of them were in menial capacities which were below our educated kids.

The problem of youth and jobs is obviously one that is going to be with us for quite a while, if not forever.

Particularly, the Alger days are gone. You don't start at the bottom and work to the top any more. Our boys and girls today expect to start at the top.

Mrs. Birch properly noted that this was a snobbery that had to be knocked out of them. And in connection with this she made one observation that was very interesting. This was that the government was working to improve the kinds of vocational guidance information available to youngsters.

Some years ago I was in a restaurant (one night) and struck up a conversation with a couple of young men.

Very shortly it became evident that they were highly, they were effeminate, they were lovers!

After a while I asked what they did.

Well you've guessed by now. They were guidance counsellors in two of the largest secondary schools in the Metro Toronto system.

This not only confirmed but put an explanation mark on what was an "ick" fact in education business.

This was that vocational guidance was probably the weakest part of the whole system.

While there were a few good people in the job, as there always are, for the most part the guidance people in the schools were misfits, the poorest teachers, temperamental square pegs, or my two effeminates.

It was recognized that this should be one of the most important parts of the system: particularly as we had just started on the streaming approach whereby kids in Grade nine were steered into different directions and some terrible boobs were being uncovered.

But there was no evident improvement.

If this is finally being given some recognition, let us only say "Thank God."

Mr. Trudeau's Tenure of Office Soon Will Eclipse Diefenbaker's

By JIM POLING

OTTAWA (CP) — Feb. 28 normally isn't date to remember.

But this year, Wednesday, Feb. 20, holds some small significance for Pierre Trudeau and John Diefenbaker in particular. On that date, Mr. Trudeau will have been prime minister 2,133 days, one more than Mr. Diefenbaker.

Mr. Diefenbaker, 78, prime minister from June 21, 1957, to April 22, 1963, now has 2,132 in terms of time in that office only Mackenzie King, Sir John A. Macdonald, Sir Wilfrid Laurier, Sir Robert Borden and Louis St. Laurent served longer.

However, Mr. Diefenbaker drops to seventh Feb. 20.

Mr. King, in three separate stints in office between 1921 and Louis St. Laurent served longer. than any of the other 14 prime ministers.

For the record, the shortest term was Sir Charles Tupper's — 69 days from May 1, 1896, to July 8.

Sir John spent 6,937 days in office between 1867 and 1891. Sir Wilfrid 5,565 from 1896 to 1911, Sir Robert 3,197 from 1911 to 1920 and Mr. St. Laurent 3,141 days from 1948 to 1957.

It is conceivable that Mr. Trudeau, who took office April 20, 1968, will achieve the fourth longest time in office before he is finished. Another three years or so and he will surpass the stays of both Mr. St. Laurent and Sir Robert.

An election this year and a Liberal majority victory almost would guarantee the Mr. Trudeau counting other factors such as illness.

To be exact, he would have to serve continuously until Nov. 25, 1976, to achieve one day than Mr St. Laurent, and to Jan. 20, 1977, to last longer in office than Sir Robert.

By then, Mr. Trudeau would be 57, presumably with plenty of years left to devote to the office if he, and the electorate, wanted.

He does not have time to surpass Sir John's stay before the average working man's retirement age of 65. He would have to serve until roughly 1987 to do that and would be 67 then.

Most prime ministers have been more than 65 when they left office. If Mr. Trudeau decided on that mode, and providing all the other factors were right, it would be a reasonably simple feat to shoot for Mr. King's record.

Mr. Trudeau could set a record of 7,830 days Sept 27, 1989.

Gen. Grivas' Death Leaves Makarios the Undisputed Leader of Greek Cypriots

Editor,
By KEVIN DOYLE

LONDON (CP) — The cry of "enosis" which echoed through a Cyprus cemetery during the burial of terrorist leader George Grivas seemed to have a hollow ring among his senior followers and within the island's established government.

Gen. Grivas, 75 when he died, scored spectacular successes in leading the underground struggle against British rule which culminated with independence in 1960. It made the little general a genuine hero in the Greek-Cypriot community.

When he was exiled to Greece shortly afterwards as part of the independence settlement, Grivas took up the cause of promoting enosis—union between that country and Cyprus—returning to the island in 1964 to a saint's welcome.

In 1966 he was again exiled, accused of attempting a coup against President Makarios, but by 1971 he had returned secretly to Cyprus. He regrouped his followers and initiated a campaign of violence which continued until he died.

Many experts now believe that his death leaves Makarios free to do what he promised a year ago: crush the guerrilla movement in Cyprus forever.

Even those Greek Cypriots, probably a majority, who favor a rapprochement with the Turkish community and control of independence from Greece retained the idea Grivas was entitled to respect for his past achievements, if not for his latest campaign.

Grivas, granted a state funeral by the government, made any kind of compromise with Makarios impossible by his unrelenting conviction that all Greeks in Cyprus would rally to his support if the president was toppled.

But his guerrilla movement now is without his kind of personal, inspired leadership. The government has already captured many of the leading activists and rank-and-file supporters following recent bomb attacks on police stations and the kidnapping of the justice minister.

Observers believe Makarios will soon move to cut down the remainder of the guerrilla force after waiting to see how many give up the government's offer of amnesty.

The remaining hardliners, in return, are expected to mount a few spectacular explosions in the coming weeks or days to demonstrate that they can still be effective.

Nevertheless, Grivas's death from a heart attack leaves Makarios the undisputed leader of the Greek-Cypriot community. When the guerrilla threat has been eliminated, most observers believe, he will move quickly toward a peace settlement with the Turks.

The days when enosis was the main stumbling block to such a development seem to be passing.

Administration of UCS

The Intelligencer.

A recent letter in this column concerning United Community Services of Belleville and District published under the hand of "Observer" implied quite strongly that UCS is an organization which is top-heavy with administrative costs and is in effect "ripping-off" those community spirited people who are thinking that their donations are providing a real service to the needy of the community.

The report also suggests procedures for the Council of UCS to insure proper use of the Council grant. It is unfortunate that has the opportunity to exercise its investigative powers in assessing the service to the community purchased by its grant, because I am sure the Council of UCS if they act together to benefit the needy of the community, have God save the community if the "rip-off" artists get the upper-hand.

Is Highways Department Responsible?

Supreme Court to Rule On Icy Road Accidents

OTTAWA (CP) — Are provincial highway departments responsible for damages as the result of accidents occurring on icy or snow-packed roads?

That's a question the Supreme Court of Canada was asked Monday as it began hearing an appeal by the Ontario highway department.

Lower courts ordered the department to pay more than $15,000 in grounds it was negligent in allowing a large patch of ice to form on a portion of the Ottawa-Hawkesbury highway and thus contributed to a March, 1966 car crash that caused two deaths.

The department, represented by Toronto lawyers Gibson Gray and Duncan Finlayson, contends that lower courts erred in finding "that the presence of ice or snow on the highway creates a duty in law on the department . . . leading to liability for non-repair."

The Ontario Public Transportation and Highway Improvement Act says "The King's highway shall be maintained and kept in repair by the department."

The department, quoting past legal decisions, said the courts have supported the general proposition that there is no duty on the department to sand or salt highways or take other actions with regard to general conditions of ice and snow."

Hearing of the appeal by the full nine-man court is expected to end today. The decision, when handed down, is expected to spell out the responsibilities of highway departments in clearing roads during winter.

The appeal involves an accident on Highway 17.

Gabriel Cote of Montreal, cutting in to his own side of the road after passing three other vehicles, testified at trial that he could not reduce his speed fast enough to avoid striking a car ahead of him driven by Angelo Karakekas of Ottawa.

The impact caused the Karakekas car to go out of control. It crossed the highway and struck a car, killing one of its passengers. Mr. Karakekas also died in the accident.

A trial judge found Mr. Cote was 25 per cent responsible for the accident, but he also held that the highway department, in not properly maintaining the road, was liable for 75 per cent of the $100,000 damages he awarded.

The Ontario Court of Appeal upheld the award.

Commuter Train Irks Barrie Mayor

TORONTO (CP) — The decision Monday by the Canadian transport commission ordering Canadian National Railways to run a weekday commuter service between Toronto and Barrie brought both delight and disappointment.

"I'm just delighted," said Toronto lawyer John Medcof, chairman of the Railway Boosters.

Mr. Medcof had rented his own train in 1967 for a day to demonstrate the service was feasible, and he showed a $300 profit. He also was instrumental in initiating a three-day public hearing held in Barrie last year by the commission.

But the order was a "disappointment" for Barrie Mayor Dorian Parker who told the hearing last year she had grave doubts about the service because, she said, it may make Barrie a bedroom community for Toronto.

In its decision Monday, the commission said it did not think one train every day would much cut off such development.

However, Mrs. Parker said in a telephone interview Monday that it was "sad, a disappointment."

"This is just going to flood our housing market with more Toronto people, and the people who live here in Barrie and their lives are going to get stuck paying the debt for new schools, sewers, hydro, roads, sidewalks and other hard services," she said.

Evidence at the hearing from the Barrie and District Real Estate Board indicated that 1,700 people a day commute from Barrie to Toronto and that 75 to 90 per cent of the clients of Barrie real estate brokers work in Toronto.

Donald Deacon, Liberal member of the legislature for the Toronto riding of Yorkview, termed the ruling an important breakthrough for his constituents.

A CN Rail spokesman said the exact schedule hasn't been set but trains will run 11 times and fares have not been determined.

Seek Bombers

LONDON (AP) — Police questioned sympathizers of the Irish Republican Army in Manchester today in a search for terrorists who bombed a military bus and killed 11 persons.

It was the worst terrorist bombing in Britain in this century.

Fear Inquest May Run Until Middle of July

SUDBURY, Ont. (CP) — With participants showing concern over its massive proportions, an inquest into 25 hospital deaths today lumbered into its 17th day amid indications that the pace might be stepped up.

Already the longest in Ontario's history, the inquiry into last year's deaths at Sudbury General Hospital might run on for months, one lawyer warned the hearing Monday in a plea for the holding of night sittings to cut down its length.

"I can see this going to about the middle of July, without being facetious or exaggerating," said Robert F. Armstrong of Toronto, one of about a dozen lawyers examining witnesses under 1972 provincial legislation that opens up inquests to direct participation by them.

Deputy Chief Coroner Ross Bennett, presiding at the inquiry that opened Jan. 14, promised to consider stretching the daily sittings, but also advised lawyers representing private interests to be more concise.

To date, only 38 of 160 prospective witnesses have been called by Sudbury Crown Attorney and John Takach, who is directing the evidence.

Mr. Takach said Monday he is not as pessimistic as Mr. Armstrong over the length of the inquest and added that he wants to be "exceedingly careful that, by the time that we reach the end of it, we haven't missed anything."

Train Robber Biggs Eludes Scotland Yard

RIO DE JANEIRO (CP) — Great Train Robber Ronald Biggs, who evaded police for eight years after a prison break, still is eluding Scotland Yard.

Biggs, 44, was on his way today to a federal prison in Brasilia after the Brazilian government signed a decree sentencing him to three months' preventive detention.

Supt. Jack Slipper and Sgt. Peter Jones, two Scotland Yard detectives who arrested Biggs at his hotel here Friday, left for London empty-handed.

The Brazilian government announced the preventive arrest of the train robber "for extradition purposes." Britain has 60 days to lodge a formal request for his extradition.

Nixon Thanks Sinclair

TORONTO (CP) — President Richard Nixon has sent a letter to news commentator Gordon Sinclair thanking him for a copy of his editorial "Americans" and adding that "we hope America will always be worthy of your praise."

In his letter to Mr. Sinclair, Mr. Nixon said:

"With insight and eloquence you have captured the spirit which helped to build America . . . Biggs escaped from London's Wandsworth jail in 1965 after serving a few months for his part in the 1963 £2.5 million ($6.5 million) mail train robbery.

Sources said the Brazilian government is planning to use Biggs as a leverage to obtain an extradition treaty with Britain.

Brazil wants such a treaty "since there are plenty of fugitives living in Great Britain who are wanted by the Brazilian law," one source said.

British Consul Henry Neil said earlier that Biggs was willing to return to Britain to serve the rest of his sentence. But Biggs told Focal newspaper he did not want to leave Rio and a young woman he said was pregnant by him.

. . . I am sure that countless Americans across the land join me in saying thank you for your friendship and your splendid tribute to our nation."

The editorial praising the United States for its contribution to world development was first broadcast over a Toronto radio station last year.

It was picked up by several U.S. radio stations and three versions of it subsequently were recorded—one by Mr. Sinclair.

Do You Want to Eat Well? Then Put Up with Smell

TORONTO (CP) — Meat packers were told Monday by Ontario Agriculture Minister William Stewart a beef producer himself, that they must get out more and meet and explain to the public that current meat prices are justified.

Speaking to an annual meeting of the Meat Packers Council of Canada, he said:

"At the risk of being submerged in a gaggle of special interests striving to be heard, we must all endeavor to clearly put in perspective not only the . . . function of our particular segment of the industry but also its contribution to the province's riches."

He said the public is more articulate and vociferous than ever before and industry must be prepared to listen and respond to demands from the public.

"But we must not be stampeded into taking foolish reactive action in response to the well orchestrated demands of professional protest groups."

He told about 200 delegates that Canadians will have to put up with physical discomforts if the meat supply is to keep up with demand.

"They may have to accept some odors that go along with animal and poultry production if they are to be well fed," he said.

"They may have to accept the return of coal as fuel . . . even though there may be some undesirable emissions of soot or smoke."

He said that unless there is a dramatic change in priorities, by 1990 supplies will decline. Predators such as wolves and dogs, he said, have decimated the industry in recent years but "when vigorous measures of predator control are discussed we hear loud cries from naturalists, animal lovers and conservationists who have refined the art of influencing public opinion to a science."

Mr. Stewart said it was time that unused land owned by farmers was put into agricultural production.

Mr. Stewart warned industry representatives to approach exports with caution.

"The sudden realization of the Arab countries that their huge supplies have new bargaining potential has also made shock waves through the trading patterns of the whole world.

"It could well happen again in other areas and I hope we do not find ourselves gearing up production for export markets that could disappear," he said.

Productive Ma Bell Needs $300 Billion

OTTAWA (CP) — "The rosy picture of a burgeoning economy and a bustling Bell Canada operation" was painted Monday by the Canadian Transport Commission (CTC) began hearings on the company's bid for increased rates.

In one report, Toronto economist W. Allan Beckett predicts demand for gross new capital expenditure during the next eight years "will reach the staggering sum of $300 billion."

Robert Olley, a University of Saskatchewan economist, told the hearing Bell's productivity gains during the past two years has about double those of the economy as a whole.

Both men were answering questions stemming from reports they prepared for Bell, backing its fifth rate increase since 1969.

Leading the questioning were lawyers Dan Bortnick and Ross Goodwin, representing the Ontario and Quebec governments respectively.

Doubling Product Will Bring Perils

SALZBURG, Austria (CP) — A two-day meeting of six governments and industry, including Prime Minister Trudeau and a number of experts appears to be running into several snags.

The discussions are being sponsored by the Club of Rome, a loose affiliation of about 90 economists, scientists, intellectuals and businessmen who have set themselves the task of trying to project growth trends during the next century and forecast their outcome.

The meeting includes six heads of government and representatives of four other countries and about a dozen members of the club.

But sources close to the confidential discussions said the government heads were not given the position papers to be discussed until Sunday night, leaving them with about 10 hours to digest about 150 pages of complex material before the meeting started Monday.

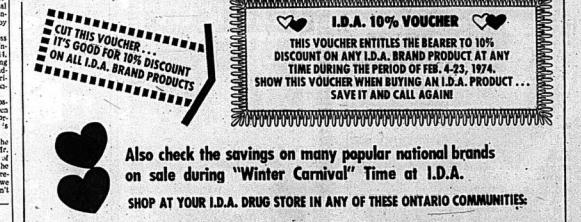
In an interview with The Canadian Press, however, Trudeau said he is still relatively pleased with the progress being made.

In his opening statement, Trudeau said that in the 15 years between 1971 and 1981 Canada's gross national product would double, a process that took 300 years previously, and leaders of the country will face tremendous difficulties in educating public opinion to the dangers which may result from this if proper planning is not carried out and limits enforced.

New-home Warranties Proposed by Basford

HALIFAX (CP) — A national, new-home warranty and insurance scheme proposed Monday by Urban Affairs Minister Ron Basford was greeted by silence at the annual meeting of the Housing and Urban Development Association of Canada (HUDAC).

Despite a private meeting between the minister and HUDAC executive officers, the industry were unwilling to comment on the proposed consumer safeguards.



A HUDAC spokesman said the matter would be referred to a special directors' meeting Wednesday when a decision was expected to be made.

Mr. Basford proposed formation of a consumer council representing governments, industry and consumers to set up and administer a universal system of housing standards.

The scheme calls for the registration of builders to ensure their compliance with on-the-job inspections and warranties which would determine builder liability for defects.

The minister also proposed the setting up of an arbitration system to rule on "non-performance" by builders and an insurance scheme to protect consumers from major defects in construction and unsatisfactory work.

Penny Gordon, Cab Driver

Office work was too enclosing and she wasn't getting anywhere at the gas station where she pumped gas and changed oil, so Penny Gordon took up driving professionally.

Starting out delivering truck parts, she switched to driving cab when she found delivery work "all hustle".

"I was driving 2,000 miles a week," she is also a driving instructor.

Averaging about 11 hours of work a day, she finds women customers more likely to question a "woman cab driver" than men.

"They don't know how to take me," she says. "Occasionally they ask if there weren't enough men applying for the job."

She replies "there were plenty of men. I'm a qualified driver, too. And I'm not a second class citizen, Are you?"

For the most part, though, Penny Gordon gets along well with customers and other drivers alike.

I don't want to be favoured. I'm capable of doing the job. All you have to do is achieve.

"It's nice to be able to do something you enjoy," she adds.

One of her favorite assignments for Central, for whom she works, has been to chauffeur people around Belleville for a sightseeing jaunt.

As for women working in traditionally "men's" fields, Penny Gordon is glad things are changing.

New Feminist Magazine Now Printed in Toronto

TORONTO (CP) — The feminist grapevine is being organized and printed as the Status of Women News.

The paper is a mix of upcoming events, results of past events, articles on the history of women in Canada, on current concerns such as the case in which the Supreme Court of Canada ruled that Alberta farm wife had no claim on her husband's ranch after many years of marriage.

The paper is being published by the volunteer National Action Committee on the Status of Women (NAC). The committee represents 50 organizations and issue-oriented groups interested in seeing the recommendations of the royal commission on the status of women implemented.

Moira Armour, who edits the paper, says they have a $15,000 Privy Council grant to put out two issues this year. They have already published two, and hope, in time, to make the paper self-supporting.

Miss Armour says the funds are used to pay expenses and to pay some fees to contributors.

So far they have been sending copies to status councils for distribution through member organizations, and most of their material has come from the councils.

Try Hippoburgers

DURHAM, England (CP) — Hippopotamus steaks or roast giraffe may be the answer to the world's growing meat shortage, food technologist Dr. Magnus Pyke told a university symposium. Pyke said such meat is plentiful and can be combined with synthetic meat fibres spun from soya beans.

Royal Housewife

LONDON (CP) — Buckingham Palace is reported to be inundated with calls from would-be wives wanting to know what Princess Anne needs as wedding presents. A palace official was quoted as saying: "In fact she needs just about everything. She had hardly a thing to start with and is building up from scratch."

But the 5-foot-4 seafarer says Carl, a Finn, has plenty of "sisu," and that means busy days on board. She works the rear deck, tending the nails, and bailing and cleaning traps.

"We don't sit down all day . . . but time goes by fast because we are so busy all the time," she said.

The traps are set two on a line. Carl picks up the buoy and runs the line through the hauling gear, then brings the mail-trap down a washboard to Elsie.

They measure their own catch, bait up, clean the gear and plug the powerful "crusher" claw on the lobsters.

Elsie said she started stalking the tasty crustacean about nine years ago in a 16-foot outboard boat. One of her daughters uses the same boat now when she goes lobstering after school and during summers.

The fisherwoman said she finds it hard to talk about the Sunday afternoon, attended by more than 200 friends, relatives and dignitaries.

Floral tributes, good wishes, telegrams and gifts were presented to the couple. They received messages from former Governor-General Roland Michener, Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau, Robert Stanfield, Jack Ellis M.P., Clarke Rollins M.P.P., Mayor Robin Jeffrey and other municipal officials.

An Apostolic Blessing was received from Pope Paul VI.

Members of the staff at Trudeau Motors Limited presented the couple with an oil painting by C. R. Bone.

Currently, Mr. and Mrs. Trudeau are in their Florida home where they will spend the winter.

Mr. and Mrs. J.J. Trudeau Golden Wedding

Mr. and Mrs. John Joseph Trudeau celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary with a family dinner party at the Four Seasons Hotel on January 5.

Mr. and Mrs. Trudeau were married January 8, 1924 in St. Cecilia's Church, Toronto. Mrs. Trudeau is the former Mary Veronica McGoldrick of Sheenboro, Quebec; Mr. Trudeau was born in Tweed.

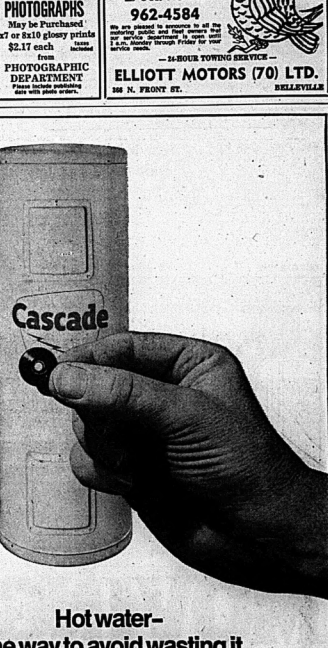
They have seven children, two sons and five daughters.

Sons John and James both reside in Belleville. Their daughters are Mrs. Albert (Doris) Bunton, Belleville; Mrs. Yvon (Cecilia) Loubert, Ottawa; Mrs. M'Phael (Jeanne) O'Connor, Bencosfield, Quebec; Mrs. David (Mary) Dinan, Oshawa; and Mrs. Edward (Celsus) Plata, deceased.

There are 14 grandchildren.

With the exception of a short time spent in Pittsburgh, Pa., Keene, Ont., and six years in Tweed, Mr. and Mrs. Trudeau have lived in Belleville for the past 42 years at their residence at 140 George Street.

As well as celebrating their 50th anniversary, Mr. Trudeau this year is celebrating his 50th year in the automobile business.



Mr. and Mrs. Trudeau, with all members of their family, attended a special Mass requested for them at St. Michael's Church on January 6. An At Home was held later

Hot water—
one way to avoid wasting it

Many Ontario families enjoy the dependable service provided by the Cascade electric water heater.

But like all water heaters, it uses energy. So it makes good sense not to waste it.

For example, at one drop per second, a dripping hot water tap can waste approximately 175 gallons of hot water a month... waste that a new washer in the faucet will easily stop.

Winnipeg Debate Rages Over Open Classrooms

WINNIPEG (CP) — The debate continues over the success of the open classroom concept in elementary schools.

A number of Manitoba school principals expressed their views in recent interviews, with those in favor outnumbering the dissenters.

Harry Robertson, principal of Shaughnessy Park School and an educationist for 30 years, has adopted parts of the concept but he retains a trepidation for all-out freedom.

"Up to the age of 12 or 13 children need guidance," he said.

"They are not ready to decide what programs they are going to take or whether they are going to give up a language or social studies and so on.

"I think we're still living in a highly structured society. You have to be at work at a certain time, you have to obey rules when you work and here you go giving children, a great deal more freedom and then they go out into a structured society."

More and more elementary schools in Winnipeg now are entering the open classroom era: allowing students to spread out on the floor in study groups or in individual study, but supervised over-all by a teacher or teachers.

Evelyn Cox, principal of Lord Roberts School, likes the increased freedom given the children. She said it instils independence in the children to think for themselves and make their own decisions.

Miss Cox said the open areas have allowed classes to be divided according to the levels of the children.

The Grade 5 you might have children reading at Grade 3 or 4 levels and others reading at 7, 8 or 9 levels.

"You can't take them all together. This way, the ones at the top are being stretched and the people who need help and skills are getting it."

Ivan Bilslow, principal of King Edward School, said philosophies and attitudes have changed dramatically in recent years.

"At King Edward most of the classroom doors are open. You'll find children in the hallways and on the floor in various nooks and crannies.

"This is the kind of thing that leads to openness in education. We are trying to break down some of the structures and some of the inhibitions.

Mr. Bilslow said if the children are given the opportunity, they can assume a fair amount of independence and responsibility and so can the teachers.

"The teacher has changed from being the source of all learning to the facilitator of all learning."

Ernestine Penny, principal of Carpathia School, began teaching 30 years ago and she says the major difference in elementary teaching now is flexibility.

"If you go back to the days when I started teaching, the measure of a good teacher was how quiet the class was. Now, I would say the measure of a good teacher is how much satisfaction the children get in their tasks."

Families Need TV Rules

LOS ANGELES (AP) — If you have rules for your children's television viewing you have company among the people who make the shows.

Carol Burnett has strict bedtime hours for her three daughters and doesn't let them watch anything scary. James McEachin, the star of Tenafly, doesn't like his children to see shows with sex or violence.

The rules, or lack of them, among the performers, writers, directors and producers probably vary as much as they do with the public.

John Rich, producer and director of All in the Family, has no rules yet for his children, aged 6 and 4. "They've found their level in watching Sesame Street," he said.

"The only rule I impose is that if they find something they particularly like I make it a point to watch it with them, so I can be there to discuss it with them."

Mike Connors of Mannix, who has two teen-agers, said: "I had rules when they were younger. But not now. TV is fairly well censored. I think they're getting to an age when they can fairly well watch what they want."

Miss Burnett said her young children like The Partridge Family and The Brady Bunch.

"I must say they're unusually have a good moral. They might want to admit to be too fat, but to a child they're very good."

McEachin said: "I prefer that they watch shows with no violence. I was in a show where I was supposed to die and it had a bad effect on my children. They couldn't fathom that it was a character on the screen and you're sitting there in the living room.

"I don't let them sit up late and I don't think they should watch shows heavy with sex and violence."

Connors said: "I don't feel there's too much violence on television. I think a show like Bonanza, for example, is comedy and fluff, is as bad as showing too much violence."

The writer team Michael Lewis and his wife, writer Rita LaLiza, said they have no rules for their four children, the youngest of whom is 13. Lewis said: "I think children are emotionally predisposed to behave as they do because of the environment in the home, not because of what they see on TV. If TV can be accused of anything, it's making death too pretty. It never shows the aftermath of violence."

Try Home Cures with Care

The growing interest in medicinal herbs and "home cures" — as a result of high drug costs and the back-to-nature culture — is a trend that, carries with it the need for caution.

Too much of a good thing, or just a little of the wrong root of leaf, could be enough to land you or your family in the hospital, worse off than when you started the cure.

If you're intend to administer your own remedies to yourself and others, you're under the same obligation that gathereers of old simultaneously are, to study and analyze each plant carefully. You can't afford one mistake.

Parsley, for example, is an ancient remedy for constipation. But only garden parsley must be used, for the wild varieties can be deadly poisonous.

The young shoots of burdock cooked like asparagus, are also gently laxative in nature, but a more tasty cure is eating five raw prunes every morning, that have been soaked in the water as well.

Constipation is one of the common ailments for which there are probably hundreds of home cures. Rather than spending money on commercial laxatives, you can do just as well by adding bulk to your diet with foods such in cold water overnight. Drink as raw vegetables and bran.

Another ill that besets modern man (and woman) is that edgy feeling known as "nerves". Headaches, sleeplessness and general anxiety may be dispelled by various herb teas. Several you can buy at health food stores, such as catnip, basil, and daisy teas.

The decoction of anise seeds added to hot milk has a soothing quality helpful to insomniacs, but plain hot milk, with honey as sweetener, is said to be just as effective.

If you're kept awake by indigestion there are a variety of cures you can prepare yourself:

Dill seeds, bruised and crushed and steeped in hot water, help to rid your system of flatulence (gas) as do infusions made with fennel seeds or peppermint leaves.

Among other remedies for indigestion are teas made of thyme, English lavender, and wild ginger root. An "old wives' cure" is a slice of burned toast in scalded milk. Pretty tasteless, but it won't do you any harm.

Successful Living

A Wedding Ring Means . .

What Does the wedding ring mean?

In the dim and distant past there wasn't such a thing as a marriage license, and no such a certificate. If a woman wanted to show herself married, what she had was a ring.

Often a wedding ring was not a gold band, but that bore her husband's initials.

This meant that when he went off to war or on a business mission she could use the initials with his for a seal on legal business documents, acting for her absent "lord and master."

That was handy. I wonder how many charge accounts she was able to run up in those days?

Nowadays our plain wedding bands say to the world, we are supposed to, "I am married. I belong to someone. Hands off."

Today, of course, we have added another wrinkle - and one I like; the double ring ceremony. It gives the same privileges to the men - to proclaim that somebody care about them - for life.

Dear Doris: Would it work out for a woman 51 to marry a man 61? His wife, my best friend, died last year.

Wavering.

Dear Wavering: There are other things besides age that matter. If he has a good bill of health, and knows how to take care of himself, he probably has many years of active life ahead of him — and she is what would help you get along well together.

Then, of course, there's love, isn't there? Are you kindred spirits? Do you feel drawn to him in an ideal mate way?

A single woman who marries in her fifties needs to be adaptable, self-giving, and appreciative of company. Otherwise she will quickly be wanting her old freedom back. The age difference does not matter as much at your age as it would if you were in your teens or twenties.

Ask yourself this question: If, in the next 15 years, your intended mate did show material evidences of age, to the point where he could not possibly keep up with you, would you love him enough to devote yourself to caring for him and about him? These are decisions I cannot make for you.

Ann Landers

One More Testimony

Dear Ann Landers: Here's more testimony for one of your pet topics: "If you drink—don't drive." And I want to you to know my husband is no drunk. He actually enjoys coffee.

Carl was attending a wedding reception, I was unable to be there. He called me about 2:30 p.m. and said he'd be home later. "Later" was the next day.

I waited for him until 2:00 a.m.; 3: a.m., 4:00 a.m. I was going out of my mind when he called to say, "I'm in jail. I'm not drunk. Don't worry, Goodbye." Before he hung up I groaned him into getting someone on the line who could give me more information. Sure enough, he was in jail.

I went down and paid the $100 bond but was unable to bring Carl home until the next morning. They refused to release him until he was legally sober. It took six hours.

We were advised by our insurance company to get a lawyer. The lawyer is going to charge us only $500 because he has helped us with other matters. Most lawyers charge from $200 to $1,000. Carl will be lucky if he gets off with a $300 fine.

This state doesn't care whether you're a chronic drinker or not. If they catch you once they throw the book at you, even if it's your first offense. Brother, isn't it!—His Wife

Dear Wife: Sorry but I'm with the state that throws the book at you. If your husband had killed somebody it wouldn't matter much to that somebody's family whether Carl was a steady boozer or a guy who prefers coffee.

Any person who gets behind the wheel of a car while drunk should be treated as a criminal because he is, in every sense of the word, a potential killer.

Dear Ann Landers: I would like to say something to that man who had cards printed up with a long list of ailments He handed them to people who asked, "How are you?"

I wonder if that fellow also has cards for people whose summer greeting is, "Not enough for you?" Or in the winter, "Cold enough for you?" On rainy days, "It's nice weather for ducks, isn't it?"

Granted, those trite greetings are corny and unimaginative. So What? This is the way most ordinary people reach out to make others feel they are worth talking to.

When I say to a person, "How are you?" I really want to know he is. If he wants to bold me up for 10 minutes telling me about his gall bladder, I don't mind Apparently he needs to tell somebody. I hope that man who had those cards printed didn't go to the expense of a large order. With his sourball attitude, he won't have too many people speaking to him to ask how he is, or anything else—Indiana Reader

Dear Reader: You sound like a person who likes people, and I'll bet people like you. How sad for the sourballs who limit themselves in. They don't know what they're missing.

Confidential to Mother of 7½ Year-Old Rebel with a Mind of Her Own: The answer is simple. It's this: You decide what the decision is yours to make and not mine. You will reap the rewards or suffer from the consequences. Sleep with him if you want to, but not in this house."

Ottawa Is Ideal Place To Enjoy Winter Sport

OTTAWA (CP) — Winter vacationers who crave an opportunity to limber up in the icy, cold Canadian outdoors should consider a trek to Ottawa and its surrounding countryside.

The area usually lies under several inches of glistening white this time of year, ready to welcome sports enthusiasts.

Even within the city limits of the nation's capital, the range of available outdoor recreation is nearly limitless.

Topping the list of free attractions is the Rideau canal, the country's longest skating rink. Winding its five-mile length from the National Arts Centre right downtown to the locks at Carleton University in the south end, the ice surface is open day and night to smooth gliders and the wobbly-ankled alike.

A dozen works around the clock to keep the ice in top condition. Chalets provide warm refuges for skaters and refreshment stands dot the canal's banks.

On a fine weekend the canal is a maze of movement and color as whole families shake off their boots and don their skates. Response is so enthusiastic — as the 300 skaters hit the ice during a good weekend — that unlimited might think there's nothing else to do here.

But the opposite is true. There is more fresh-air fun at five toboggan slides in the Ottawa-Hull region. Most are lighted at night and some double as starting points for snowshoers and cross-country skiers who want to take advantage of in-city trails.

Some of these follow the miles of bicycle paths that wind through the city. Others are marked through wooded areas of the capital's surrounding countryside.

More adventurous crosscountry fans now pack a lunch and head across the Ottawa River to hilly Gatineau Park in Quebec province.

There 70 miles of trails through beautiful woodland wait for the prints of skis and snowshoes and hikers' boots.

Parking is available at historic Kingsmere, home of the late prime minister William Lyon Mackenzie King, and at other points.

Or, to find some of the best downhill skiing that Eastern Canada has to offer, take Quebec's Route 11 northwest from Ottawa through the rolling Gatineau Hills.

Skiers can find comfortable accommodation in any of the picturesque towns that flank the slopes. But most ski centres are an easy drive from Ottawa, for those who with 20 return at night.

Just 12 miles north of the city lies Camp Fortune, home of Canada's largest ski club. There 13 lifts, including double and triple chair lifts, will whisk you to the top of eight fine runs.

Six miles farther north, Edelweiss Valley's 15 slopes provide even more varied downhill thrills This centre's lifts are said to be able to carry up to 6,000 people an hour.

From Edelweiss it's just a short hop to Vorsage and if you want to trade a bit farther, about 60 miles from Ottawa, you can try the 900-foot long chairlift at Mont Ste. Marie, Que.

Gatineau skiing features well-run cafeteria facilities, lodges, ski instruction, and, at most centres, night skiing for those who still will not be ready to go after dark.

A week-long lift pass will run about $16 in most places.

And you can bet on that. A snow mill the end of March, at least The Gatineau receives an average yearly snowfall of 100 inches.

If Mother Nature should occasionally fall down on the job, snow-making machines at most centres fill the gaps.

Old British Music Hall Opened in Los Angeles

SANTA MONICA, Calif. (AP) — Mae West sweeps down the aisle in mink. Beatrice Kay, fresh out of retirement, sings. And a delegation of expatriate Britons cheers.

The merry scene is the Mayfair, the first authentic American re-creation of a 19th-century British music hall—complete with gold leaf on the ceiling and corn in the concession carts.

The unique theatre, 20 miles from Los Angeles' central business district on the Sunset Strip, has been turning away customers on weekends and packing the house even on week nights.

Since the Mayfair opened in October, movie stars such as Miss West have made the trip to this beach town to sample the unexpected English delicacies of Brighton-by-the Sea.

The 2½-hour production features British comedy routines, singers and specialty acts such as a man who makes up poems from ideas shouted by the audience. The show's finale is usually the appearance of Miss Kay, 70, an American re-creation of a 19th-century British music hall—complete with gold leaf on the ceiling and corn in the concession carts.

The show's finale is usually the appearance of Miss Kay, 70, an American re-creation of a 19th-century British music hall—complete with gold leaf on the ceiling and corn in the concession carts.

Mayfair's creator, Milt Larsen, sees the music hall as a promising new entertainment form for 1974. "I wouldn't call it nostalgia," he remembers a simpler era.

"I don't particularly believe in nostalgia," said Larsen. "But nostalgia is remembering things you once saw, perhaps in childhood. . . . We are trying to bring a period of theatre alive that Americans have never ever seen."

At first glance, audiences at the Mayfair may think they're seeing a vaudeville show. But most wind up saying "It's like vaudeville but it isn't."

Larsen explains that the British music hall was not a variety show. "They presented a more cohesive show, a true production." Thus, at the Mayfair the performers return throughout the show to interact with each other while the "chairman," in tuxedo and ruffled shirt, moderates and comments from a box seat above the stage.

"The music halls of England actually date back to 1825," said Larsen. "They were places where people could drink and smoke and have entertainment. It was originally for men only and was raucous and bawdy. In the later 19th century it became much more refined. . . . We're concentrating on the period when the music hall became more elegant."

Drinks are served during the show, and soon there will be a dining room in the balcony.

Larsen has recruited British talent for permanent spots. Bernard Fox, an actor whose ancestors starred in the original music halls, is the "chairman." And lately Larsen has been approached by veterans of the British stage offering to appear. Nick Lucas, who popularized the song "Tiptoe Through the Tulips in the 1920s, is on the bill for February.

Larsen and his brother Bill were raised as performers in their parents' traveling magic act. Larsen's First Family of Magicians. Bill now manages The Magic Castle, an elegant private club for magicians, while Milt, in addition to running the music hall, keeps the job he's had for 15 years as a gag writer for the TV show Truth or Consequences.

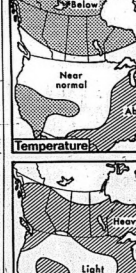
"I had no idea when we came here that Santa Monica is the centre of the British community in Southern California," said Larsen. There are several British restaurants nearby and when the fog rolls in from the ocean at night, "you'd almost think you're in Trafalgar Square."

Fair Is Big Business

PICTON — The Prince Edward County fair, sponsored in Picton by the county's agricultural society, contributes notably to the local economy, according to figures released at the annual meeting of the fair board.

With all entries, except horses and ponies, limited to the county, the major portion of the prize money received remains in Prince Edward.

This prize money in 1973 totalled $8,315.85, the two largest individual awards being $2,070 for horse classes and $2,170 for cattle competitions.



Other cash awards include $472.80 for poultry, $124 for grains and seeds, $320 for vegetables, $380 for flowers, $24.75 for eggs and honey, $61.25 for public school entries, $377.85 for home baking, $664.85 for clothing and other ladies' work, $236.50 for crafts and art, $215.75 for photography and oil paintings, $168.50 for canning, $40 for cheese, $182.50 for potatoes and $246.75 for fruit. The last four products are commercial features.

An extra $207 was paid for 4-H Clubs in addition to awards by other organizations.

Labor costs totalled $2,699 and salary $626. A total of $803 was paid for races and western games.

Improvements and repairs in grounds and buildings during 1973 cost the society $3,600.

Gate receipts this year totalled $2,214 and prize money paid totalled $9,215.85. A balance of $8,344 was projected with some government grants yet to be received.

Tweed

Tweed — Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Fox of Mountain Grove marked their 50th wedding anniversary quietly at their home on Monday, January 28th 1974.

They were married on January 28th, 1924, in Strabizona at the bridegroom's home by Reverend Hoare.

Mr. Fox's sisters, Mrs. Leah Chatterton of Punta Gorda, Florida and Nora Rose, of their home are their attendants.

Mrs. Merrill (Betty) Thompson, Mountain Grove; Reverend Hoare, of Perth; Mrs. Clifford (Phyllis) Cowdy of Mountain Grove and Mervier Fox of Perth, and Mrs. Howard (Peggy) Reed, of Perth are their five children.

The Fox's have 24 grandchildren and nine great-grandchildren.

Lutheran Church Women of Denbigh, held their January meeting at the home of Mrs. Kenneth Wilkes on Tuesday evening with a good attendance.

Mrs. William C. Hermer of Ardoch, is a patient in the Kingston General Hospital.

Sedore Schonauer of Ardoch, has returned home after being a patient in the Perth Hospital.

Wet and Cold

Below-normal and near-normal temperature readings are expected for most of the country during the first-half of February, according to the 30-day weather outlook of the United States Weather Bureau. Precipitation is expected to be heavy for most of the country. This is not a specific forecast and changes may occur. (CP Newsmap)

Palmistry: A Science?

By ALLEN SPRAGGETT

Ever notice how ideas that seem to have gone out the door blow a way of returning by the back door?

A case in point is what used to be called palmistry. It's back now as the new science of "dermatoglyphics" — the study of palm and finger markings (or even the ridges on the soles of the feet) which, experts claim, can reveal many physical and psychological conditions.

Mental illness, retardation, certain birth defects, even a tendency to criminal behavior — all these, and more, are said to show up in an individual's dermatoglyphics.

Studies by Dr. Carol Baker, chief psychologist at the Dr. Moloes, Iowa, Child Guidance Center, indicate that a child's fingerprints may reveal whether or not he'll turn out to be a criminal.

Although everyone has his or her unique fingerprints, they come basically in five patterns — plain arch, tented arch, radial loop, ulnar loop and whorl. The fingerprints of criminals tested so far — rapist, murder or manslaughter had a higher number of ulnar loops and a lower number of whorls than those of non criminals.

Curiously, criminals convicted of armed robbery showed distinctive differences of their own — more plain arches and fewer whorls.

A possible link between palm prints and schizophrenia, the serious mental illness popularly called split personality, was uncovered by research at Michigan's state hospital in Ypsilanti.

Dr. Theodore Raphael compared the hand prints of 100 male schizophrenics with those of 5,000 normal men and found distinctive "whorls and arches" not shared by the normals.

The American Medical Association officially lauded this research as "accenting the significance and role of dermatoglyphics for medicine as a clinical tool and genetic lead."

The term dermatoglyphics for palm and finger markings were coined in 1926 at Tulane University, New Orleans, by Dr. Harold Cummins. And it was at Tulane that doctors recently established a link between fingerprints and certain forms of congenital heart disease.

Drs. Alfred Hale, John Phillips, and George Burch compared the fingerprints of 137 patients suffering from congenital heart disease with those of a similar number of patients with heart disease that developed in later life. Certain peculiarities were noted in the first group not found in the second.

British psychiatrist Dr. L. R. Penrose, a pioneer in dermatoglyphics says a telltale mark of mongolism (a severe form of mental retardation, also called Down's syndrome) is the so - called "simian crease" — a groove running straight across the palm. This occurs rarely among normal people but is common among mongoloids.

(However, two men I know, both highly intelligent and not a millionaire, have such a simian crease!)

Dr. Fred Rosner, an epidemiologist in Washington, D. C. employed by the U.S. Public Health Service, is seeking links between dermatoglyphics and such neurological disorders as epilepsy and cerebral palsy. He said there may be two forms of cancer in a person's palm print, either because the disease or because the actual cause of the disease changes in the hand.

The leading scientific exponent of what's called "chiropsychology" — the psychology of the hand — is Charl Wike Wolff, an English clinical psychologist whose doctorate is from the University of London. She claims to be able to analyze an individual's character and personality from his palm print.

In one test Dr. Wolff described the temperaments, talents, and intelligence of a group of school children she had never seen solely on the basis of their palm prints in ink. Her comments were then compared for accuracy with assessments of the same children made by a psychiatrist after personal interviews and study of their records.

The results?

"The agreement is complete," said the psychiatrist in most cases, or, "these are two pictures in — the same child."

Fuzzy Wuzzy Goes In

Marian Casson, a Quinte artist, submits a piece entitled Fuzzy Wuzzy Wallhanging to organizers of the 7th annual Belleville Art Association juried show scheduled to open to the public Saturday, February 9 at the Corby Public Library main gallery. Edna Henderson (from left) and Evelyn Luttrell signed in artist's works Monday prior to adjudication expected to take place today and tomorrow. At most, 45 paintings will be hung at the library. Awards will go to the best in the following three categories — oil paintings, watercolors, and batiks and sculpture.

'Professional Bums'

City Funding Attacked

Voting of taxpayers' money to such local organizations as the YMCA, the Chamber of Commerce and the United Community Services came in for attack Monday at city council.

Clarence Young, Belleville's unofficial environmental watchdog, hurled his attention to what he termed "so-called social agencies" terming the Y and the Chamber of Commerce as commercial bums who each year seemed to have little difficulty in getting away with large sums of public money with no accountability to the taxpayers.

Now, he said, there was a newcomer (the United Community Services) that was rapidly demonstrating the traits of inefficiency, irresponsibility, irrelevance and an incredible ability to waste the taxpayers' money on unrewarded or irrelevant programs.

He said he was unable to name any community service that the UCS provided, that they had been asked to provide or that they are able to provide.

Mr. Young said the UCS with city money had hired a professional director who turned out to be "an expensive and unnecessary waste of taxpayers' money and caused much controversy and alienation in city" feelings."

This year, he said the UCS is right back in there with a plan to request council for another $12,000 grant to help pay the wage for another unwanted and unnecessary professional.

Alderman Stu Meeks agreed that the UCS had done a poor job but said its main failing had been in lack of good public relations.

He said there was no way that staff could be hired to do all the work of the volunteer organizations and said he took strong exception to the YMCA and the Chamber of Commerce being referred to as professional bums.

"I take exception and council should take exception," he said.

Mr. Young, however, did get some support from Alderman Arthur Keegan, who admitted that in the past he had felt Mr. Young had made some out of line statements.

Now, however, he had realized that many of Mr. Young's statements, while possibly not altogether true, were at least not being disputed.

Mayor Robin Jeffrey said she had no intention of getting into a discussion on Mr. Young's charges.

She said that a meeting of UCS directors was planned with council to discuss the future of that organization.

The meeting will be held before there was any decision about hiring a new director.

Selection Determines Who Shows

Approximately 45 Quinte artists submitted works to be juried for the 7th annual Belleville Art Association show Feb. 9-March 3.

The exhibition, the biggest the Quinte Arts Council will bring to the Corby Public Library main gallery this year, will be opened by Mayor Robin Jeffrey during its preview Friday, Feb. 8. Two other shows are scheduled for that weekend organized by the association executive each year, however open to the public.

"In this show there are said Stu Williamson, association member. She claimed it was a frightening experience to submit work.

"You just hope that one will be accepted," she said.

Walter Sawron will address guests on the preview night before whittling down the number to a maximum of 30 and 45 oil, watercolor, batik and sculpture pieces.

The show, which yearly meets with good response from the public, according to organizers, has experienced an increase in artists' submissions over the years.

Last year, 123 entries were received. This year, its expected the same number will be submitted.

Association president Barbara Whelan speculated that since the group began holding monthly meetings prior to the 1973 show, interest among artists has increased along with a corresponding increase in submission.

Official Plan in Final Stages

Tonight's meeting at Moira Secondary School marks the first in a series of four sessions at which the long-awaited Belleville draft official plan will be presented for public comment.

All necessary technical work has been completed or the lengthy document that outlines the basic framework and policies that will guide the city's future growth within the Bay of Quinte planning area.

"What we've got now is the result of a lot of work by their technical people," said Bert Kenny, Quinte Planning Board director. "It's a total, thoughtful presentation of the thinking of the professionals.

"What we're looking for now is a reaction to what is presented," he said Monday.

All meetings are scheduled at 7:30 p.m. in the following locations tonight — at Moira Secondary School, Wednesday, Feb. 6—Belleville Collegiate Institute, Tuesday, Feb. 12—Quinte Secondary School, Wednesday, Feb. 13—Ben Bleecker Auditorium.

Each is located in a planning district, as outlined by the draft plan, and closely corresponds to those areas that were covered by the task forces formed in 1973. In the initial stages of plan composition, the task forces were asked to provide comment based on a concept or "intuitive" plan of the city.

These task force reports were fed into the planning process which, two years later, has resulted in the third and final draft plan.

"I would expect that some people will be looking to see what was done with their recommendations from the task forces," said Mr. Kenny of the upcoming meetings.

A planning board member will act as chairman for each meeting. During the sessions, planning consultant Jean Wells Monteith will present a brief outline of the draft plan, with the aid of illustrations and a summary report published recently in The Intelligencer.

Mrs. Monteith and planning board professional staff have been in constant com-munication in the preparation of the plan.

After these public meetings and assuming there will be no further public reaction, said Mr. Kenny, the planning board staff and the consultant will review public feedback for possible incorporation into the official plan document.

After final revision, the official plan document will go before a full planning board meeting. It is expected the plan, either in its present form or with revision, will be accepted and then recommended to Belleville city council for adoption.

From council, the document will be submitted to the provincial ministry of housing for approval.

"And there, there are all sorts of things that can happen," said Mr. Kenny. It could either be delayed for an extended period or the minister could sign it almost immediately.

The director would not hazard a guess as to when the document would be finally approved by all parties.

Downtown Association Elects Lynch President

A recommendation to increase from five to six members the number sitting on the board of management for the Belleville Downtown Improvement Area was the compromise worked out last night at the first meeting of the Belleville Downtown Association.

A city council recommendation tabled earlier in the day asked that two additional members be appointed to sit on the present five-man board.

Of the five, three are merchants and two are business men. Disagreement arose as to what representation be-tween the groups should be in effect with adding other members.

It was decided at last night's meeting to have Bruce Lynch, the newly elected president of the downtown association, take the sixth spot.

The matter now goes to city council for ratification.

In other business last night at the meeting held at the Legion Hall, the new executive of the Downtown Association was chosen with Bruce Lynch elected president.

Vice-president is Doug Row, secretary is Ron Fox while treasurer is Evelyn Shulman.

Heading up the five-man board of management for the downtown improvement area is Alderman Roger Porter. Charlie Bristol, Bryson Leslie, Nate Hayes and Alderman Jack Ireland complete the board.

The board is appointed by city council, which provides them with a working budget of $25.000 raised by a special assessment on the business tax for the downtown area. That is the area bounded by the side of Pinnacle Street, the east side of Moira Street, the Upper Bridge and Dundas Street.

Of the total of $25,000 budgeted for improving the downtown area, about $6,000 is allocated to the Downtown Association.

Newly elected president Lynch outlined a four-point program of areas he said needed attention.

"The association should get a new look," he told the businessmen, merchants and guests at the association should have a professional look and advertising that goes out. This includes letterheads, mastheads billboards and the like.

Second, we should promote the downtown in every facet possible. This could include promoting retail stores, doctors, law sales and so on, on everything be it radio, newspapers, billboards," said Mr. Lynch.

Third, the Christmas lights should be looked into. They are getting in poor shape and need replacing.

"And, fourth, we should look into the proper handling of our day-to-day expenses," he said.

No Loot In Break-in

Belleville city police are today investigating a break-in at Morch Manufacturing Ltd., 11 Water St., after thieves entered the company offices through an upstairs window and attempted to force open a safe.

The safe was left intact and nothing else was stolen, police said.

Sketches Back At Museum

Sketches of 19th century Hastings county buildings by Doris Day and Jerry Stapley are again on display at Hastings County Museum.

The sketches were on exhibit last fall at the completion of the Opportunities for Youth project. After many requests, the drawings and histories are on view again, and reprinted copies and thirty notes are also available.

The entire display is available on loan as part of the exhibition circuit program of the museum. For bookings, contact Jack Frame, administrator of the museum's LIP project.

The latch exhibition will be on display in the breakfast room of the museum until Feb. 15.

Man Charged In Stabbing

A 42-year-old man, Edward Francis Smith, of no fixed address, was arrested and charged with assault with the intent to wound following an incident Monday involving the stabbing of an 81-year-old Victoria Ave. woman.

Belleville city police are detaining Smith.

A Belleville General Hospital spokesman said today the woman was treated for slash wounds to her left elbow and right wrist and released.

Another School To Close Doors

Declining enrolment has closed another small country school.

Hastings county board of education has announced the closing of Glen Miller Public School at the end of June.

Enrolment in the three-room school has declined over the last three years from 98 to 51.

Pupils will be bused to Batawa Public School, whose enrolment now stands at 176 pupils. Batawa has the capacity for 231 pupils, and next year, after the closure of Glen Miller, is expected to have 216 pupils.

Lack of Concern Over Inflation Concerns Hastings MP Ellis

Inflation: It is possibly the country's No. 1 economic problem and Hastings MP Jack Ellis, "concerned," as he put it, "by public lack of concern," told Belleville Rotarians Monday that as businessmen and councillors are one of the things they must do (when seeking grants, for instance) is "tighten up and see if we cannot cut down on some of the spending."

Acknowledging some questions on the subject posed by an Intelligencer editorial last week, Mr. Ellis said he had no answers, but he believed the fight against inflation "has to start in this room and maybe the behemoth that is the federal civil service will get the message."

City alderman Jack Ireland, thanking the speaker, said inflation is the most serious problem facing local government, and in a question-and-answer period following Mr. Ellis' address, a Rotarian, Ron Cass, asked if government spending, by whichever party in power, could not be limited constitutionally to a set amount. This way he felt priorities could be served. He warned that government might take more than people would put up with and everything would grind to a halt, bringing chaos.

Mr. Ellis said he was unsure how such a constitutional limit on spending might be accomplished but he was concerned nonetheless at the full range of government spending.

The Hastings MP said he had been accused in the past of representing the business community. He tried to represent all sections of the public, but he was concerned the unions were not taking a "hard shot at the UIC the way I have."

More than his largely business audience, union men said Mr. Ellis, were being ripped off ... the union payroll, he added, was where the greatest percentage of UIC funds came from. Manufacturers did not have to pay these rates, rather they tacked them on to their products.

"I find it difficult to believe that the party supposedly representing the unions will not allow legislation to tighten up that particular situation."

Mr. Ellis reiterated his charges of mismanagement and fiscal waste where the UIC is concerned and documented a series of five question releases sent to weekly newspapers by Supply Minister Goyer's department, dealing with a variety of discount supply items ranging from electronic monitoring equipment to shoe creams and eggs, and which cost the taxpayer money for mailing throughout Canada.

On the subject of artistic embellishments outside government buildings, or what some refer to as "junk art," MP Ellis said he was not critical of a small sculpture being spent on Canadian art to create an environment more representative of Canada. However he questioned how much material could be molded into a shape that then cost the taxpayer $25,000. He said this was one example of government spending he was very critical of.

To one questioner who suggested problems such as Mr. Ellis had cited had been present "for decades" years," the speaker replied that at least the Conservative government had been able to keep the inflation rate at two per cent "if you want to be optimistic about it."

Mr. Ellis, who said he has been speaking across the country and shortly will be in Newfoundland, said in finding that some of the older, more age voters, in the party caucus, were concerned about the need for steps to be taken to counter the inflationary trend.

As a further example of government spending, Mr. Ellis said he saw an item which said the Public Works Department was planning to spend $500 million annually on government buildings over the next few years. He did not know where the authority for that came.

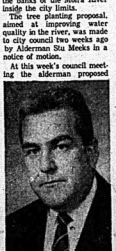
Answering a question as to whether, in obtaining documents concerning the operations of the UIC, there had been any breach of the Official Secrets Act, Mr. Ellis replied: "not a single document I have is confidential, nor is it marked confidential. There is nothing in it that is secret. The only secret was when these documents, having been published, and senior management, realizing what they were, the documents were locked up and put out of circulation immediately."

Tree Planting Plan Proposed

City council this year will give budget consideration to a tree planting program along the banks of the Moira River inside the city limits.

The tree planting proposal, aimed at improving water quality in the river, was made to city council two weeks ago by Alderman Stu Meeks in a notice of motion.

At this week's council meeting the alderman proposed planting of up to 1,000 trees at an over-all cost of approximately $15,000. The alderman suggested this cost might be lowered by utilization of high school labor for planting and obtaining trees from local sources.



The proposal is to plant trees from eight to 10 feet high and about one inch in diameter.

While generally in favor of the project, Alderman Ben Corke said there should be no firm amount placed in the budget until it was determined whether there was room for planting 1,000 trees along the river within the city limits.

The alderman said there would be a lot of things going on along the river and referred to the proposed new bridge over the Moira at the end of Pinnacle Street, and the two ice control dams planned for further upstream.

The same question was asked by Alderman John Stock who asked "where would you plant 1,000 trees?"

On recommendation of Alderman Jean Smith, the tree planting project was referred for consideration at budget discussions.

Potvin, Lysiak Are Living Up to Reputations as Best

MONTREAL (CP) — Before the National Hockey League's draft of amateurs held here last May, the experts touted Denis Potvin and Tom Lysiak as the best of a fine crop of junior talent available to the professional clubs.

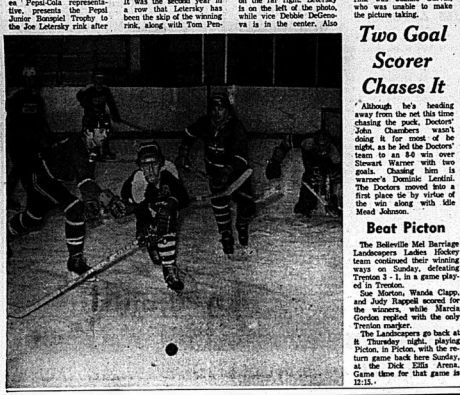
And today the talented pair continue to live up to their pre-draft reputations.

Potvin was the first choice in the 1973 draft, chosen by the lowly New York Islanders from Ottawa 67s of the Ontario Hockey Association's Major Junior A series. The puck-rushing defenceman had enjoyed a phenomenal 1972-73 season with 55 goals, 88 assists and 123 points.

This season, he is the Islanders' leading scorer and second highest in the league among rookies with 19 goals and 24 assists for 24 points.

Potvin's offensive performance, combined with his defensive skill, has earned him the New York club's improved showing this season. The Islanders now have 13 victories in 49 games, one more than they had in all of the previous 78-game schedule last season.

In addition, the Islanders've also allied 76 goals from their goals-against column to 157 from 227 and have vacated the East Division cellar, a position they held all last season. They will continue their effort to improve tonight when they entertain Minnesota North Stars, while Montreal Canadiens visit the Blues in St. Louis.



Atlanta Flames had scored nick in the standard set early they chose Lysiak from Medi-cine Hat Tigers of the Western Canada Major Junior A League.

Lysiak had led the Western league in scoring in both 1971-72 and 1972-73 with 46-97—143 and 52-96—164 records respectively. He currently is the NHL's leading rookie scorer with 13 goals and 27 assists for 40 points. It was the second year in a row that Letersky has been the skip of the winning rink, along with Tom Pender, also shown in the photo on the far right. Letersky is on the left of the photo, while vice Debbie DeGenova is in the center. Also a member of the winning rink was Joanne Garvin, who was unable to make the picture taking.

Two Goal Scorer Chases It

Although he's heading away from the net this time chasing the puck, Doctors' John Chambers wasn't doing it for most of he night, as he led the Doctors' team to an 8-6 win over Stewart Warner with two goals. Chasing him is warner's Dominic Lestini. The Doctors moved into a first place tie by virtue of the win along with Idle Mead Johnson.

Beat Picton

Sue Morton, Wanda Clapp, and Judy Rappell scored for the winners, while Marcia Gordon replied with the only Trenton marker.

The Landscapers go back at it Thursday night, playing Picton, in Picton, with the return game back here Sunday, at the Dick Ellis Arena. Game time for that game is 12:15.

Doctors Move Back Into First Place Tie with Mead Johnson

The Doctors moved into a first place tie with idle Mead Johnson for the lead in the Gas House Hockey League last night, each with 31 points, as they shot out Stewart Warner 8-6 in one of four games played in the league.

In the other contests, the Intelligencer tripled the score on Rollies' Lumber 6-2, Chuckwagon Fords came up with a 5-3 win over the Yardmen and Fraser and O'Neill Real Estate pounded Rosebush Fuels 7-2.

John Chambers led the Doctors' win with three goals and the same number of assists, while Pete Keogh, George Jacktin, Hyllie Bryant, and Ken Bertrand each scored once. Pete Delanty added a pair of assists, while Ron Green recorded the shutout in the Doctors' net.

Fred Stickle paced the Intelligencer to their win over Rollies', firing two goals. Other markers went to Chuck Powell, Bill Bennett, Dave Baragor, and Jed Melleide. Six different players received assists.

Don Bewsy and Scott McLaren came up with goals in a losing cause for the Lumbermen.

Warren Rushlow paced Chuckwagon's win over the Yardmen, picking up two goals and a pair of assists. Chester Thompson had two goals and one assist, with Bill Dunn adding the single marker. Bob Dafoe added three assists to the cause.

Doug Thompson and Herb Latchford scored for the Yardmen.

Wayne McGeachy, a forward, played goal for Fraser and O'Neill, allowing only two goals by Neil Gover as his squad downed the last place team, Rosebush Fuels.

He received two goal support by Larry Pascoe and Art Martin, with singles by Jim Parker, Wayne Harrison, and Randy Pascoe, with four assists going to Jim Crouchman, Wayne Anderson added two assists.

Nicholson Sweeps Two From Picton

Nicholson Catholic College swept all three games from Picton yesterday in Bay of Quinte High School Basketball action, winning the senior contest 48-45, the junior game 35-29, and the midget game 38-32.

Bruce Bibby led the senior Collegians with 16 points, while Mike Hollaire had 15. Chris Kaltay added 11, while Bill Wilkinson, Len Dafoe, and Joe Muldoon each had two.

Bob Hyatt hooped 20 points in defeat for Picton, with Charlie Lederman coming in with ten. Mark Vincent had nine. Willie Dennis Conley fired five.

Jeff Boyle paced the junior victory with 18 points, followed closely behind by Dale Wilson with 14. Bruce Collins had eight, while Danny Krasnowski had six.

Kent Quinn led the losers with 12 points, with Joe Grills adding ten. Bruce Rutter had six, while Eric Samuel and Peter MacDonald each had four.

Boyd Kalnay's ten points led the midget team in their win, with Steve Dolan adding eight and Paul McAlpine six.

Paul Minaker hooped 12 points for Picton in defeat, with Mark McAlpine in with six, as well as Joe Scott with the same total.

Signs 4 Year Deal

Jumping Continues to WFL, Gotta Goes to Birmingham

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (CP) — Jack Gotta, who led Ottawa Rough Riders to last year's Canadian Football League playoff title after his club lost its first four games, has joined Birmingham in the new World Football League.

Bill Putnam, chairman of the board for the Birmingham franchise, still without a name, said Monday Gotta has been named as coach and general manager.

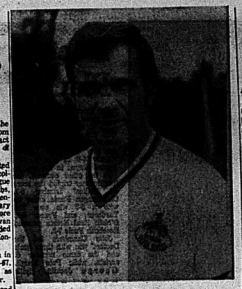
Gotta, a native of Saginaw, Mich., has twice been named coach of the year in the CFL, but announce terms of the agreement.

In 1973, his Rough Riders won the Grey Cup by defeating Edmonton Eskimos of the Western Football Conference.

He joined the Rough Riders in January, 1970, but the club finished last in the four-team Eastern Football Conference. The next season, however, his team finished third, then second and first last year with nine wins and five defeats.

It was believed Gotta signed a four-year, $250,000 contract, but the Birmingham club did not

Gotta said in an interview he expects little resistance from the Riders despite a contract calling for two more years of service with the CFL team.



Gotta, who said he rejected offers from United States colleges, National Football League teams and other WFL clubs, was an offensive and defensive halfback for Calgary Stampeders of the WFC before he was traded to Saskatchewan Roughriders in 1960. He ended his playing career with Montreal Alouettes in 1964.

He was an assistant coach in Saskatchewan from 1965-67, then joined Ottawa in 1968 as an assistant to Frank Clair.

The former outstanding end for Oregon State during the early 1950s said he would rather coach a team in a new league than take over an expansion or losing club in the NFL.

"I'd rather go where everyone is getting out of the gate at the same time. That way you have a chance of winning."

Last week, Gotta said, former coach of Toronto Argonauts in the Eastern Conference, joined Toronto Northmen of the WFL as general manager.

Als Change Colors To Join Habs, Expos

MONTREAL (CP) — Montreal Alouettes, running third at the box office in their crosstown rivals in hockey and baseball, Monday moved to the red, white and blue, the predominate sports uniforms in this city.

The Canadiens of the National Hockey League and the Expos of baseball's National League have used the red, white and blue motif on their uniforms while the Canadian Football League team went with green, red and white through the last few seasons.

In addition to the new colors and adoption of a new team symbol, the Als announced the signing of two players and the appointment of a new public relations director.

The club announced the signing of Keith (Skip) Eamon, a Canadian receiving back who played two years with Ottawa Rough Riders. The rights to Eamon were acquired in a trade which sent Jim Foley to Ottawa last season. Eamon did not play for the Als in 1973, choosing to sit out the season.

Canadian quarterback Mike Legan, who played with a semi-pro club in Albany, N.Y., last season, also has signed with the Alouettes for the 1974 season. Legan, the first-round draft choice of Calgary Stampeders in 1971, also plays as a defensive halfback.

Richard Blain, director of marketing for the Montreal club, told a news conference that Roy Degurse will handle public relations duties. Degurse has worked for the Als for the last six years on a part-time basis.

The new team symbol is in the basic form of a triangle and is made up of four parts:

—The form of the letter A incorporates an outline of a mountain peak, representing the Alouettes and the mountain overlooking the city-Mount Royal.

—The letter M is formed by a bird in flight, representing M for Montreal and the bird of the Lark family, the Alouette.

—The Alouettes name is printed in a new modern script which forms the base of the triangle.

—The total symbol is delta-winged to project a forward thrust.

CFL Schedule Shows Earliest Start, Finish

TORONTO (CP) — The Canadian Football League schedule for 1974 released today calls for the earliest opening in its history and one of the earliest Grey Cup games in the last 35 years.

The regular season begins July 24 in Montreal where the Alouettes will play Hamilton Tiger-Cats. The earliest previous start was July 27, 1971.

The national final is set for Sunday, Nov. 24 at Vancouver's Empire Stadium in the earliest championship since the pre-First World War days. Three times before—1934, 1951 and 1956—the Grey Cup game has been played on a Nov. 24.

Eastern Football Conference teams will play 16 games in 1974, an increase of two games from the 14-game schedule they have played in past years. The EFC schedule now is identical to that of the Western Conference for the first time in 26 years in the number of games each team plays.

The CFL added, however, the increase in the number of games would not affect the present interlocking pattern in which each team plays once against each team in the other conference.

The extra EFC games will be intra-conference with Ottawa and Toronto playing an extra game each against Montreal and Hamilton.

Edmonton fans will get a chance to see a matchup of the 1973 Grey Cup game twice during the season—a pre-season game and a regular inter-locking game Aug. 10—with Ottawa Rough Riders.

The Riders defeated Edmonton 22-18 in last year's East-West final.

The exhibition games start July 2 with Hamilton in Montreal and British Columbia Lions at home against Edmonton.

Bathgate Never Threw Game in His Life

VANCOUVER (CP) — Andy Bathgate, coach of Vancouver Blazers of the World Hockey Association, says he never threw a hockey game in his life, nor was he party to anyone throwing one.

Bathgate made the statement in response to allegations from Switzerland that Ambri, a Swiss amateur team coached by Bathgate during the 1971-72 season, threw a playoff game. Swiss officials are investigating.

Bathgate, former National Hockey League star with New York Rangers and Toronto Maple Leafs, said "there could be something to an allegation that my team didn't play its best hockey."

The game in question was played in a snowstorm in an outdoor rink in Ambri, a town of 300, during a round-robin series to determine which of three teams would be dropped from the league's A division to B the following year.

The two other teams were Sierre of Visp and, said Bathgate, his team lost the game to Sierre 2-1.

"But the outcome didn't really matter to either team. We were assured of staying in A division at that time, and Sierre had to beat Visp in the final game whether or not they won or lost against us."

Bathgate said that if the game was thrown, he knew nothing about it and was not party to it.

"I can say our team actually didn't play that badly. It was just a wide-open type of game that we lost control of. I felt as much our players thought they could win it 8-7, or something like that. We've been a lot of games like that, too."

Expos Sign Renko

MONTREAL (CP) — Right hander Steve Renko, who had asked to be traded last November when contract negotiations with Montreal Expos broke down, Monday signed a 1974 contract with the National League club. Renko had a 15-11 won-lost record last season and a 2.81 earned-run average.

Paciullo to Ask Govt. To Follow Canadian Style

SYDNEY (Reuter) — The Australian government will be officially asked to follow the successful Canadian system of financing sport and to introduce a biennial Australia Games, it was announced today.

George Paciullo, New South Wales state labor shadow minister for sport, said he would approach the federal minister for tourism and recreation, Frank Stewart, with the proposal.

Paciullo said Canada's success at the Commonwealth Games in Christchurch was proof of the success of the system.

"In 1958, Canada could muster only one gold medal and it has risen since to two in 1962, 14 in 1966, 18 in 1970 and 25 at Christchurch," he said.

Paciullo, a long-time sporting administrator, umpire, has been studying overseas sporting systems. He had informal talks with Marc Lalonde, the Canadian minister of national health and welfare, in Sydney Monday.

Paciullo said Lalonde outlined the Canadian government's system, which cost $15 million and includes a national advisory centre in Ottawa for sport and recreation which houses 34 national sporting organizations, a coaching association aimed at improving coaching techniques, and the Canadian Academy of Sports Medicine to provide Canadian teams with the best medical services available.

The system also has a panel of judges to choose promising athletes who could be subsidized in training and coaching in their respective sports, and Canada Games to give all athletes the experience of top competition and to help provide facilities in regional areas.

Evert Opens With Victory

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (AP) — Fort Lauderdale's Chris Evert delighted her fans by defeating crosstown rival Laurie Fleming 6-1, 6-3 Monday night in the opening round of the Fort Lauderdale women's tennis tournament.

It was a clean sweep for the Evert family as Chris' sister, Jeannie, defeated Patti Hogan of La Jolla, Calif., 7-5, 6-0 in a earlier match.

In other matches, Carrie Fleming of Fort Lauderdale pushed Sharon Walsh of San Rafael, Calif. to three sets before losing 6-4, 1-6, 6-1, Virginia Ruzicki of Romania defeated Peaches Bartkowicz of Detroit 4-6, 7-6, 6-1, Wendy Overton of Bermuda defeated Sandra Glymnis Coles of Great Britain 6-2 6-2.

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. (AP) — Australians scored a clean sweep in the opening round of the World Championship Tennis competition Monday as John Newcombe, Dick Crealy, Ross Case, Geoff Masters and Norman Holme all took first-round victories.

BIRTHS

ECORE — Gordon and Mildred, 360 Cannifton Rd., Belleville, are proud to announce the arrival of a daughter, Kathryn Heidi, on Thursday, January 31, 1974. A sister for Jeff, Jennifer, Jason and Juliette. Special thanks to Drs. Herchmer, Gibson and Preston.

IN MEMORIAM

MYERS — In loving memory of our dear mother, Mrs. Myers.
He is gone but not forgotten.
And, as dawns another year,
In our heart he is always dearing,
Though from sight he is always hid,
Many times we come o'er us,
That he is not here with us.
But they little know the sorrow,
We hide when we are alone.
— Sadly missed by daughters and brothers, Donald, David, John and Murray Jr.

JOHNSTON — In loving memory of our dear mother, Ellen Elizabeth Johnston who passed away on Jan. 30th, 1973.
Lovingly remembered by: Her family, Floyd, Darlene and Shirley.

CARDS OF THANKS

CRAIG — The family of the late Wilfred J. Craig wish to express their sincere thanks and appreciation for kindnesses shown during their sadness, floral tributes and contributions, cards and visits during the loss of a dear husband, father and grandfather. Special thanks to Dr. Ross and staff of Belleville General Hospital, the John H. Bush Funeral Home, Rev. Canon Ralph E. Wright, Mrs. Wright, Mrs. Ethel Craig, the pallbearers of Corry Dunbar, Ross Wilson and Neil Dunbar, Marguerite, Gladys Aiken.

Your Horoscope

By BERNICE BEDE OSOL

Tuesday, Feb. 5

Aries (March 21-April 19) If you're not careful, pursuit of pleasure and luxury will carry too high a price tag. Be moderate, particularly if shopping for something you can't afford.

Taurus (April 20-May 20) A middle dogmatic line of action may arise today between you and your spouse. Nothing will be solved if each doesn't yield a little.

Gemini (May 21-June 20) You will not respond very favorably to one who tries to force his ideas on you. Keep your anger in check or you'll say too much.

Cancer (June 21-July 22) This could be a day of reckoning if you're overdue on some old account. Try to bring financial affairs up-to-date.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22) Gauge your opposition carefully today when pushing personal interests. If resistance is too strong, back off till another time.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) If the boss thinks he can get away with it he'll strap some extra responsibilities to your back. Have your answers ready.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) Avoid the company of a friend with an enlarged ego. He'll really bug you if you have to listen to him brag.

Scorpio (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Be sure to share the applause and recognition with one you're involved with regarding a certain achievement. A solo bow will infuriate him.

Sagittarius (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Don't make directives more complicated than necessary for someone performing a task for you. Keep ideas easy to follow.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Long-set for your financial interests today if you're doing something with another. Otherwise, you'll be putting in more than your share.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) You'd be better off if you waited a day on any type of major agreement you're thinking of making with another.

Pisces (Feb. 20-March 20) It will seem today like everyone has something urgent they want you to do for them right away: Don't let 'em upset you.

Leg Movements Help Circulation

By G C THOSTESON, MD

Dear Dr Thosteson: When on long plane trips my feet and ankles swell. I do not do anything different except sit still longer. Before recent surgery (removal of a cyst) the doctor asked me if my feet swelled. I said yes so he wrapped them.

Why only under certain circumstances do they swell? When I am home (except for the surgery incident) I have no trouble. I eat the same and drink the same I am 65.—Mrs. J.O.

You don't do anything different except sit still longer," It's the sitting still.

At 65 it's not surprising for your circulation to have slowed down a bit, particularly in the legs. All the blood and fluids that are pumped into your legs and feet have to be pumped back up again through the veins. It takes a lot of pumping.

All of the task of raising this fluid back up against gravity is by the heart alone. The play of muscles against the veins also helps if the muscles are moving, that is.

When you sit still you do not have this muscle action.

In addition, your heart may not exert some constrictive pressure on the veins by virtue of the way you cross your legs can have an effect if you have any degree of varicose veins that adds to the problem.

Since you have only occasional episodes of swelling feet, we can't say that it's a very serious matter—but it's better avoided. In your case, just the ordinary walking around the house gives enough boost to your circulation to prevent the swelling.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I have a problem I don't know how to cope with. I am afraid I have the laxative habit. What do you do to remedy this? I have been taking a laxative daily, and would like to get away from this.—T.M.

A daily laxative? Yes, I'd say you certainly have the "laxative habit," which, among other things, can lead to colitis.

It's a habit that can be broken, but it is a common enough habit.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Would you write about athlete's foot? Characteristic of the disease; what causes it; the cure if any; usual duration. Can it affect other parts of the body? If once contracted, can it come back?—L.M.F.

Itching, cracking of the skin, especially between the toes, and in some types, blisters are the characteristics. Athlete's foot is an infection by many of various types of fungus that thrive in warm, moist areas.

For an ordinary case, I suggest buying an athlete's foot remedy from the drug store. The trick is to continue treatment for a good while after the trouble seems to have stopped, because a little of the fungus can survive in the skin and if given a chance will start to spread again. In severe cases, you need a dermatologist's help. (Yes, it can spread to other areas, including the hands, but that is not the usual course.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Exactly what is polycythemia and what is the treatment?—Mrs. J.M.

It is an excess number of red cells in the blood (the opposite of anemia, in that respect). Treatment generally is based on drawing blood periodically to thin the rest of the blood at normal proportions.

TRIM VEGETABLES

Trim leafy vegetables like lettuce and cabbage sparingly. The dark outer leaves are rich in nutrients.

ALL EGGS ALIKE

The grade of an egg does not affect its food value. Lower grades are as high in nutrients as top grades.

FREEZING MEATS

Raw fresh beef roasts and steaks may be kept in a refrigerator three to five days or in a freezer up to 12 months.

LARGEST ORGAN

The largest church organ in the world is in Passau Cathedral, Germany, with 18,000 pipes and five manuals.

Opening lead—♣ Q

By Oswald and James Jacoby

The reason club systems are too difficult for ordinary players lies in the problem of what to do when your suit is cluby. Of course you can open two clubs to show a normal one club opening, but experience has shown that this is inadvisable unless your hand is of minimum type.

Believe it or not, we watched a pair of expert club bidders pass this hand out in a duplicate game. Another pair did even worse. South passed; North opened one heart. Eventually, he played at four hearts and managed to find a way to get set after East opened the King of diamonds.

Standard bidders all wound up in clubs. Some stopped at a part score; others bid to game. Barry Crane of Los Angeles, the number one man on the master-point list, reached six clubs playing with Dr. John Fisher of Dallas.

The slam depended on locating the queen of hearts. As you can see Barry could finesse for it either way. Experts expect to handle a two-way finesse correctly most of the time and Barry is one of the best in this department.

He could not be certain, but he did find out that East was long in hearts. Hence he was more likely to hold the queen. Barry's finesse succeeded against him and made the slam.

CARD Sense

The bidding has been:

West	North	East	South
			1♣
Pass	1♦	Pass	1♠
Pass	1♥	Pass	3♦
Pass	3♥	Pass	4♥

You South, hold:
♠ A 4 3 ♥ A K 7 4 ♦ 3 6 ♣ K 10 4 3

What do you do now?

A—Bid four diamonds. If your partner is shocked, ask suspect you don't want to be in a slam. If he is shocking the club ace he will make a strong bid over your four diamonds.

TODAY'S QUESTION

He continues to five diamonds. What do you do now?

Algeria Young State But Has Historic Roots

ALGIERS (CP) — Algeria has only been a modern independent state for about 10 years but she has roots deep in ancient history.

Called Numidia in ancient times, Algeria was successfully invaded or colonized by Phoenicians, Vandals, Byzantines, Arabs, Turks, and finally the French from 1830 onwards.

The French occupation was, at first, limited to the region along the Mediterranean coastline, including the capital, but soon spread to the whole country.

However, strong resistance by the Algerian people resulted in French armies spending about three quarters of a century in subduing the country.

The resistance was organized by the tribes who had retained their traditional administrative, religious and economic organizations.

Until the 20th century, the Algerians ceded their territory step by step, finally giving in to the superiority of the French military power.

The heart of the Algerians, however, retained their love of independence and attachment to a Moslem and Arab Algeria. This became the basis for the nationalist movement, which in 1926 saw the founding of the North Africa Star party by a group of Algerian students living in France.

This party, whose policy was made known in 1933 demanded independence rights of the Algerian nation, establishment of an army and parliament and universal suffrage.

In 1936, the party became established in Algeria, but the following year was dissolved by the French government.

In May, 1945, the nationalist demonstrations began, just as the Second World War was coming to an end.

France met with them with harsh repression and thousands of Algerians were killed or imprisoned.

However, this repression only served to stimulate the nationalist movement and "the idea that effective political action must be succeeded by armed revolutionary action."

A few years later, the national liberation army began to form. By November, 1954, it had 3,000 men; 20 months later it had 50,000.

In 1956 students and worker unions came onto the nationalist scene. The French government launched a program aimed at flushing out the insurgents, but strikes broke out in the cities to show worker support for the revolutionaries.

The Algerian cause was debated in the United Nations and the right of the Algerian people to self-government was recognized.

In 1960, the national liberation front sent a delegation to Paris at the invitation of Gen. de Gaulle to negotiate a peace settlement.

In March, 1962, the provisional government came into being and remained in power until the proclamation of independence in July.

This was followed by two months of great insecurity and political battles. The majority of the members of the provisional government were removed from power and in September a national assembly was created.

In September, 1964, Algeria went through another period of instability and elected a new national assembly. Less than a year later, Prime Minister Ben Bella's government was deposed and replaced by headed by Defence Minister a council of the revolution, Houari Boumedione who served as president and prime minister.

It is under the leadership of this man that Algeria began its economic growth and that the current structures of its society came into being.

The foreign policy was oriented towards looking after Algeria's economic interests and internal policy emphasized the maintenance of order, coupled with a strict censorship of the press which exists today.

One of the first steps taken by the new regime was to consolidate national independence by regaining control of the country's national resources.

The hydrocarbons sector was taken over by the government in 1971. Between 1967 and 1971, the government had nationalized the Esso and Mobil oil companies. Since May, 1968, it had given itself the monopoly over trade in oil products as well as the storing and transport of these and transport of these products.

In June, 1970, all non-French, foreign-owned companies were nationalized and in February, 1971, the French companies were taken over.

The government did not spare the banking sector and a banking system was organized to support the country's development. In 1966 the government took over the insurance industry which up to then had been managed by foreign companies.

Iberian Peninsula Ruled for Decades By Dictators

MADRID (AP) — Eight million Portuguese and 33 million Spaniards live in the corner of Western Europe called the Iberian Peninsula. Dictators have ruled them for decades without a quiver to shake their authority.

Antonio de Oliveira Salazar died in 1970 at the age of 81 after running Portugal for 38 years.

The regime of Gen. Francisco Franco, now 81, was dealt its sharpest blow in December since it came to power in 1939. Franco's Premier, Luis Carrero Blanco, was assassinated in an explosion that blew his car over the top of a five-story church.

Franco remains firmly in power; the question remains what will happen when he is gone.

Portugal has already successfully passed this kind of crisis. When Salazar died, President American Thomas appointed Marcello Caetano to the premiership. Caetano took over, without civil disturbance, and now has gained popularity in his own right.

No one knows what may happen when Franco disappears. Carrero Blanco's death may be a foretaste.

Franco came to power only after a long and bitter civil war which has left a lasting imprint on Spain.

In Portugal, Salazar took office more or less by consent of the governed. Portugal has never had a full-scale civil war. In the midst of the great depression of the 1930s Portuguese finances were in such chaos that politicians turned in desperation to the brilliant but reserved professor of economics.

Salazar agreed to put things straight but only on his own terms—full power—and remained in control for four decades as one of the world's most unobtrusive dictators.

Another basic difference between these two neighbors is the role of the military in politics. In Spain, the army is much more of a factor.

Along with the Roman Catholic Church and the so-called ruling movement, the army is considered one of the main factors in any Spanish government.

The army is a lesser factor in Portugal. Salazar was a civilian and so is Caetano, a former law professor.

There are other differences. Spain is European-minded and looks forward to eventual membership in the Common Market. Portugal, which rose to greatness as a maritime nation, still looks out to sea for its future, to its onetime colony in Brazil and its African territories, Angola and Mozambique.

The Portuguese are not yet sure about the Common Market.

Portuguese history is dominated by the struggle to keep from being absorbed by Spain. For a brief period toward the turn of the 16th century, the throne went into Spanish hands for lack of a Portuguese royal heir.

The recovery of independence in 1640 is honored in vivith an avenue or a square of the Restauradores—the heroes who restored Portugal's national identity.

Because of the Spanish connection, Portugal lost India to Britain and the East Indies to the Dutch.

The differences seem endless. In Spanish bullfights, they kill the bull. In Portugal they do not.

Portugal has its national folk song—the fado, generally sad and mournful. Spain has the flashy flamenco. The Portuguese version of the Spanish cold soup, gazpacho, irritates most Spaniards. Portuguese regularly refuse roasted sardines, spanish style.

Portugal is a member of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization. Spain is not, but would like to join.

Portugal, although a meeting place for Allied and Axis spies during the Second World War, stayed largely out of the war despite pro-Allied sympathies.

So did Spain, officially, but it sent a division of Spaniards to fight with the Nazis on the Russian front. It gave the Germans an air base in the Balearics.

Portugal gave the Allies a base in the Azores.

Portugal has a legal opposition which can meet and put forth candidates. Spain also has an established opposition. But not more than 20 of them can gather at once without risking arrest.

Yet there is sameness in the rule of government, a belief that a strong central authority is essential.

Parliamentary government, as practised elsewhere in Western Europe, does not exist in Spain or Portugal. In both countries, spokesmen will tell you that the multi-party system is confined to the Iberian mentality.

Man Killed By Blast In His Car

VAL CARON, Ont. (CP) — A man was killed Monday in an explosion that ripped apart the front section of his car and damaged a school where the car was parked.

A. E. Landry, principal of Our Lady of Hope separate school, in this community 10 miles north of Sudbury said the dead man was identified as Mike Jean, the husband of one of his teachers.

Mrs. Jean was waiting for her husband to pick her up after classes when the explosion occurred just after the car drove into the school parking lot, the principal said.

Windows up to 30 yards away were broken by the blast. Pieces of the car engine covered the roof of the school.

Police gave no details about the explosion.

The dead man was a janitor. In his 30s, at another school operated by the separate school board.

Tank Unit Mutinies

BEIRUT (AP) — Mutiny by a unit of the Jordanian army forced King Hussein to postpone a trip to the United States to return home early, travellers arriving in this Lebanese capital reported today.

The king flew to Amman Tuesday night from London, where he had been on a private visit. He had been scheduled to go on to Washington.

The travellers said foreign correspondents in the Jordanian capital have been prohibited from sending reports about the mutiny.

They said the mutineers demonstrated against various Jordanian officials, accusing some of corruption, but repeatedly expressed their loyalty to the king.

The independent Beirut newspaper An Nahar carried a denial of the mutiny report. The denial was attributed to Premier Zaid Rifai of Jordan. But the travellers said the mutiny occurred in the garrison town of Zerqa, 15 miles northeast of Amman, and was led by units of the 40th Armored Brigade, Jordan's elite tank unit.

Hussein had been scheduled to arrive in Washington Friday. Officials in the U.S. capital said Monday that he was expected to postpone his trip for a week or two because State Secretary Henry Kissinger was going to be busy this weekend preparing for the international energy conference President Nixon is holding Feb. 11.

The travellers attributed the mutiny to discontent resulting from soaring inflation and a living allowance that the troops consider inadequate.

The sources gave this account of the mutiny:

Junior officers, non-commissioned officers and elements of the 60th Brigade in trucks and armored personnel carriers tried Sunday morning to enter Zerqa from their camp north of the town. Military police halted them, and a confrontation developed.

Crown Prince Hassan, acting as regent while Hussein was on a private visit to London, and the army commander, Field Marshal Habis Majali, rushed to Zerqa to meet with mutineers.

The men refused to talk with the prince and the field marshal and waved off. But at the same time they shouted de-

U.S. Gambles It Can Clear Up Nuclear Policy

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Nixon administration is gambling that it can get its own house in order on nuclear arms policy before State Secretary Henry Kissinger goes to Moscow next month, U.S. officials say.

Announcement of a late-March trip to the Russian capital by Kissinger came Tuesday with disclosure that U.S.-Soviet strategic arms limitation talks (SALT) will resume Feb. 19.

The state department said the developments indicated the administration was near a basic position on the second round of SALT.

However, some officials at the Arms Control Disarmament Agency said privately that it might take longer than the two weeks left before SALT II reopens to reach a common U.S. position.

In fact, there is a possibility that one might not be achieved by the time Kissinger leaves for Moscow, these, and officials in other involved agencies said.

Nixon plans a summit trip to Moscow this year, but has indicated he will go only if serious progress has been made toward an accord on limiting offensive nuclear weapons.

mands that the army chief-of-staff, Lt.-Gen. Sherif Zaid bin Shaker, be replaced by Sherif Nasser bin Jamil. Bin Shaker is a cousin of the king, and bin Jamil is the king's maternal uncle.

Late Sunday, the troops returned to their camp, and an emergency meeting was called at army headquarters. Bin Shaker, who was with Hussein in London, flew back in a special plane Sunday night.

On Monday, the mutinous troops returned to Zerqa, and men from other units joined them. The mutineers increased their demands, calling for the dismissal of Premier Rifai and Court Minister Bahjat Talhouni. Rifai's father-in-law accused them and bin Shaker of corruption.

The mutineers drove around in trucks and armored personnel carriers all day Monday, shouting slogans against corruption in the government and calling for the dismissal of a large number of senior government and court officials.

On Tuesday, all troops at Zerqa were confined to their barracks, and the military police contingent in the town were increased.

Envoys Hostages In Kuwait

TOKYO (AP) — The Japanese government agreed to the demands of gunmen who seized the Japanese Embassy in Kuwait today and threatened to kill its ambassador if official unless a plane was sent to take four terrorists from Singapore to Kuwait, the foreign ministry announced.

The foreign ministry said it had received a cable saying the Japanese ambassador in Kuwait, the first, second and third secretaries of the embassy and the attache were all being held in the building.

The ministry said it was unable to establish contact with the embassy and it did not know the number of gunmen in the building.

The four terrorists for whom a plane was demanded have been holed up there for the last week in preparation for the last-ditch effort. Two of the terrorists are Japanese, and two are Palestinians. They seized the boat and the hostages after an unsuccessful attempt to blow up a Gulf Oil refinery on an island off Singapore.

Fruit Trucks Stalled

Canadians Stay Home

By RON SUDLOW
Canadian Press Staff Writer

"Don't shoot, I'm not a Yankee."

That's the message scrawled across the back of the big rig that Al Ferrand of Windsor, Ont., drives for Inter-City Truck Lines Ltd.

He doesn't know who the author is but he does not plan to remove the message before crossing the border into the United States where the violence-ridden protests of independent truckers continue.

This is just one symptom of what is hardening into the anxieties of commerce that supply Canadians with materials for industry and food for the table.

Shortages of fresh fruit and vegetables have been predicted if the strike continues and already there is a trickle of layoffs and the indication of more to come.

Tomato prices have soared in Toronto and one importer said he expects there will be no grapefruit available to retail outlets after today.

Trucking routes from Mexico, Florida and California have been clogged with Canada-bound trailer units filled with produce. Importers have tried to switch to rail but there is a shortage of rolling stock.

To compound the problem, truckers are not bringing fuel to growers in the southern U.S. and they are unable to get their harvesting machinery out in the fields.

One Dominion Stores Ltd. executive said in an interview that his company is considering the possibility of importing tomatoes from the Canary Islands.

Bob McLaren, operations manager for Inter-Truck Lines of St. Catharines, Ont., says the strike in the U.S. east has cost his company "thousands and thousands of dollars."

"We're just not running. Normally we have 65 trucks operating all over the Eastern Seaboard."

Quinn brings in 80 per cent of the fresh produce that is distributed through the Ontario Food Terminal at Toronto to supermarket chains.

"The whole business since Thursday has been "an occasional run in the week to pick up a shipment and deliver it in the province."

"Now boys don't want to go down the road."

Fruitlet Produce Trucking Ltd., also of St. Catharines, had a fleet of 15 trucks on the road. Six drivers have been stranded in Orlando, Florida.

Fruitlet general manager Albert Lincoln said one of the stranded drivers was pistol-whipped at gunpoint and told he'd be dead if he kept rolling.

Another Fruitlet driver had the front of his rig smashed by truckers wielding axes and iron bars in North Carolina.

"It's a bit scary. We're experiencing a loss of about $10,000 a day," Mr. Lincoln said.

So far, fresh food wholesalers and retailers are not predicting skyrocketing price increases.

Tim Williams of Dominion Stores agrees the effects likely will not be higher prices on most products "unless there is a supply or poor quality once we do get it."

Jim Gregory, vice-president in charge of grocery merchandising for Loblaw Groceterias Ltd., says tomatoes are the only specific item he is afraid of in the law of supply and demand.

"But it depends on the length of the strike and how long it will be impacted on the market."

In Vancouver, a spokesman for Canada Safeway Ltd. said "we will resort to any flying perishables in to keep our stores stocked."

Some U.S. truckers have taken Canadian routes to avoid pockets of violence. The Ontario ministry of transportation and communications has issued 15 temporary licences to American trucks in less than a week.

Trucker Shot In Delaware

WASHINGTON (AP) — A trucker was shot and killed on a Delaware road in the shutdown by independent truckers, and officials warned of possible food shortages if the tie-up continues much longer.

Thousands more workers were laid off due to shortages in affected industries.

Leonard Fleet, lawyer and spokesman for the Council of Independent Truckers, Tuesday night urged the drivers to continue their shutdown after President Nixon attempted to halt the strike by freezing the price of diesel fuel.

Spokesmen for independent truckers elsewhere around the United States were also dissatisfied with Nixon's move. In Olympia, Wash., J. W. Edwards, head of the Owner-Operator and Independent Drivers Association of America, called the administration move "just more promises."

The dead trucker, identified as Claudie Nix, 30, of St. Stevens, S.C., was shot from a passing car Tuesday. Police said they were looking for a couple in a pickup truck.

Brick-throwing incidents were reported in Pennsylvania and New Mexico, and truckers in Iowa and New Mexico displayed bullet holes from gunfire.

Authorities escorted some trucks in Ohio and Pennsylvania. Kentucky Gov. Wendell Ford activated 1,000 Kentucky Guard troops and said trucks will begin running in convoys today for added protection.

"Based on all information available, the situation is critical," Ford said. He said that some communities are experiencing serious food, fuel and material shortages.

West Virginia Gov. Arch Moore ordered armed National Guard troops to ride in each truck in the West Virginia counties hardest hit by the shutdown.

He said anyone picketing fuel terminals, truck stops or other areas in the five-county region will be arrested for trespassing.

Troops also stood guard in Ohio, Michigan and Pennsylvania highways.

More than 75,000 layoffs have been reported since the trucker shutdown began last Thursday.

News Briefs

No Talks Scheduled

TORONTO (CP) — No further talks have been scheduled between York County school trustees and teachers, a source said late Tuesday following a fruitless $½-hour bargaining session. Official spokesmen for both sides maintained the news blackout imposed by the Ontario government over negotiations in the dispute.

Strike Is Shunned

TORONTO (CP) — Thirteen unions, representing more than 5,000 construction workers employed by Ontario Hydro, indicated Tuesday they will seek a settlement in contract talks although they have been in a legal position to strike since Monday.

Islands Occupied

SAIGON (AP) — South Vietnamese forces turned back today from one of the disputed Spratly Islands after finding troops from the Philippines there, military sources said. "The postponement is to avoid clashes with the Philippines," said one source.

Potter Names Deutsch Head Of Fiscal Study

TORONTO (CP) — Members of two government-appointed committees to examine wages and working conditions of hospital employees were announced Tuesday by Health Minister Richard Potter and Labor Minister Fern Guindon.

Dr. John Deutsch, principal and vice-chancellor of Queen's University, will head Dr. Potter's committee to examine government fiscal constraints on hospital employees.

The other two members are Henry Langford, former chairman of the Ontario Securities Commission and a board member of the Ontario Hospital Association, and Dr. Percy McGavin, executive director of the financial services division of the ministry of health.

Mr. Guindon's commission, which will examine the wages, salaries and other benefits of hospital employees, will be chaired by J. Stefan Dupre, headed by J. Stefan Dupre, professor of political economy at the University of Toronto.

Other members of the committee are R. E. Alden, general industrial relations manager of the Steel Company of Canada Ltd. and A. S. Tivell.

Nixon Would End Wage-price Controls

WASHINGTON (Reuter) — The Nixon administration recommended to Congress today that mandatory wage-price controls be ended after April 30 for all sectors of the economy except health and petroleum.

In testimony before the Senate subcommittee on production and stabilization, Cost-of-Living Council director John Dunlop said the administration should be allowed to continue its present gradual decontrol of the economy on a sector-by-sector basis through April 30, when the current Economic Stabilization Act expires.

Dunlop said that the Cost-of-Living Council should be continued after April 30 but in a drastically revised role.

It would, Dunlop said, administer mandatory controls only over the health sector of the economy until a national health insurance bill is passed by Congress.

The council would have no authority over petroleum prices which already are under the control of the Federal Energy Office.

In addition, the council would become the government body responsible for helping to moderate inflation in the absence of a mandatory controls program.

Election Talk Is Revived

LONDON (AP) — The order for a national coal strike starting Sunday revived talk today that Prime Minister Edward Heath will call a general election soon.

Sources in Heath's Conservative party said the miners' decision to strike in an attempt to break Heath's anti-inflation ceiling on wage raises left the prime minister no alternative but an appeal to the voters to demonstrate their support of him and his policies.

Members of Heath's cabinet, who recently had been damping down election speculation, were doing nothing to discourage it today.

Council Agrees To Club's Offer

The Bay of Quinte Yacht Club wants to spend $1,000 this year to repair the dock of the visitors' dock adjacent to the organization's club house on Belleville harbor.

The offer was first made in December of last year and according to the club's past commodore Richard Bird, has been re-affirmed "in get us through another boating season."

The yacht club's offer, made to city council Monday, was accepted by council, but as the dock is owned by the Belleville Harbor Commission, a request will go on to that body asking that the work be allowed to proceed.

Alderman Stu Meeks was all in favor of council giving authorization for the dock repairs but Mayor Robin Jeffrey pointed out the facility was owned by the harbor commission.

On the recommendation of Alderman Paul Hunter, the yacht club offer was accepted by council, concurrence to be asked from the harbor commission.

Creighton Carr Heads Agricultural Society

PICTON — Owner of Picton Livestock Sales, Creighton Carr, has been elected president of the Prince Edward Agricultural Society.

He succeeds retiring president Charles Chaney, who has completed a two-year term in office.

Mr. Carr was elected during the annual meeting of the agricultural society held Saturday in Picton.

First vice-president is Howard Seeley of Picton. Second vice-president is Mrs. Doris Whiteford of Cherry Valley.

Mrs. Whiteford is the first woman to serve as a vice-president in the 143-year history of the agricultural society.

She also holds the office of chairman of the Ladies' Section of the county fair and is the newly elected woman representative for District 13 of the Ontario Association of Agricultural Societies.

Fair board directors elected this term include Alex Miller, Thomas Heath, Leslie Tolley, Creighton Lockyer, Walter Demille, Phillip Dodds, Edwin Fraser and L.Lond Doxsee.

Fifty-associate directors also were named.

The election of officers was conducted by South Marysburgh reeve Clifford Walker, Prince Edward County council's representative to the agricultural society.

Murray Workman Heads Red Cross

Murray Workman was chosen president of the Belleville branch of the Canadian Red Cross. His selection came during the annual meeting of the group last night.

He succeeds past president Mrs. C. E. Marsh. Vice-president is F. A. Beeby, treasurer is Gary MacDonald and secretary is Mrs Murray Workman.

The homemaker service chairman is Mrs. A. H. Ketcheson. Mrs. Ellen Boyce its supervisor.

In charge of individual emergency aid is Mrs A. H. Ketcheson. Mrs. George Smith is the women's work chairman while Mrs. Joan McIlorie is assistant chairman.

Merritt Hackett is the blood donor service chairman with Cecil Heard his assistant and Mrs. J. B. Leslie, clinic director.

E. A. Fleming will handle public relations. Miss Josephine Tickell, the loan cupboard and Mrs Herbert McCabe, the disaster services.

Murray Workman is in charge of water safety while Mrs. G. H. Miller will look after the awards.

In her report in the group last night, outgoing president Bessie Marsh emphasized the keen effort and dedication of the volunteer workers in the branch.

She mentioned that the city's blood donor clinic is now on a fully computerized plan under the Toronto centre. She added that blood donations were down in 1973 mainly due to the cancellation of clinic owing to a strike at the plant.

Chairman of the blood donor service, Merritt Hackett reported that there were five public clinics held during 1973 and two non-public ones intended for a specific group, such as Loyalist College of the blood.

There was a total of 1,218 donors offering their blood in the five public clinics. In two non-public clinics there were 169 donors. In addition to these 1,469 donors, there was the need for 10 emergency donors.

Reporting on the disaster committee, chairman Effie McCabe mentioned that last year 19 families involving 61 children lost all their belongings with no insurance whatsoever. They were supplied with new clothing, shoes, bedding, linen and so on.

Industrial Commission Members Appointed

City council Monday approved appointment of 15 members of the 1974 Belleville Industrial Commission headed last year by Bruce M. Nickson.

Of the 25 appointees, three are from city council. They are Mayor Robin Jeffrey with Aldermen Roger Portec and Jack Ireland.

Other members for this year are: B. M. Nickson, H. V. Atkee, B. Curtis, R. Lumbers, J. Marker, Nate Hayes, W Downing, V. L. Lewis, J. Wiseman, Cy Bostwick, G. Whitehurst, Jack Deacon, Bill Townson, F. Ethier, M. Coles, D. Valcamp, D. G. Williams, C. Woods, George Thompson, Ken Pinder, D. Row, T. Lally.

Recreation Program Begins

PICTON — "Recreation for All Ages," an LIP (Local Initiatives Program) opened in Picton recently.

The new program is geared to bring residents from their homes to a central location for enjoyment of shared interests.

A youth group under the supervision of Diane Hobson utilizes the gymnasium at Prince Edward Collegiate Institute each Monday evening for basketball, volleyball, floor hockey and other sports.

This group also will reorganize the Teen Set and is seeking assistance from interested young persons. Miss Hobson can be contacted for information at Bensen Hall Park each Monday between 8.30 a.m. and 4.30 p.m.

The Teen Set's first meeting was held last week and it is emphasized that newcomers will be welcomed to future gatherings.

Seniors' Tax Credits Studied by Manager

And Alderman Ben Corke hoped that when the city manager's report returns to council it will give some indication of what a program of tax credits to senior citizens might cost the city.

Trenton Union Protests to Politicians

Military Police Moonlight As Guards in Plant Strike: Union

By COLIN BRUCE
Staff Reporter

TRENTON — The striking Union of Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers has sent telegrams to Ottawa politicians demanding spare-time-working service personnel from CFB Trenton be withdrawn from guard service at the Lakehead Fabricon Manufacturing plant here.

The union charges several military police officers, working in their off-hours, are being used to supplement security staff at the strikebound plant.

In a telegram to David Lewis, NDP leader and opposition leader Robert Stanfield, the union strongly protests the presence of the moonlighting military.

In a letter to George Hees, MP, Prince Edward-Hastings the union outlines how one night a Canadian Armed Forces vehicle arrived at the plant carrying a squad of security guards.

According to a plant spokesman, Fabricon employs the Canadian Corps of Commissionaires to check the building during the weekend. Since the strike began last week, the corps has had to increase manpower to patrol the building round the clock, seven days a week and accompany president Hans Allemendinger.

Regular servicemen have been signed up to bolster the ranks of the commissionaires a CFB spokesman said.

Union people here aren't happy.

"We strongly suggest that military personnel stay away from our plant," said Doug Tyner, national representative for the union and author of the letter to Mr. Hees.

"The striking union, in its second week of picket duty is concerned that, if the company can obtain the services of the men to patrol as security guards, they could also take over jobs in the plant.

"No way, definitely no way," said Mr. Allmendinger.

"I will never use their services in the plant unless it's through a standard employes application," he said.

CFB Trenton Base Commander Col. Robert Husch regards the letter to Mr. Hees as a pretty disturbing one.

CFB Trenton military police will have the option to either voluntarily curtail their services to the plant or comply with an order, he said.

"The men are perfectly within their rights to accept a part-time job, providing they are not in uniform and are on their own time," said the colonel.

The union found fault with the colonel's statement. Mr. Tyner said: "If these armed-forces personnel were supplementing their income when $134-a-week employees are on strike.

"Because we are causing consternation which could result in physical violence, our people will not be entering the plant during the strike," said the base commander.

"We're suggesting very strongly right now. We might be able to order them if it comes down to a crunch," said Col. Husch.

"We don't want the armed forces involved in a confrontation that could lead to physical violence."

The impending base order will not affect the veterans who form the Corps of Commissionaires. They are not regularly employed as military police.

Mr. Allmendinger said the corps was not hired specially for the strike but were taken on several months ago.

"They're the most reputable in Canada," he said explaining his choice of agencies.

Fire Levels Farmhouse

MARMORA (Special) — A Marmora township farmhouse, home of a Toronto couple, used by them on weekends and summer, was destroyed by fire Tuesday morning. Also lost was $1,500 in tools belonging to Runnalls Electric of Marmora.

Firemen said a wood furnace in the basement of the brick house was responsible for the fire. Runnalls company workers engaged by the owners, Mr. and Mrs. Lyn Kelley, Toronto, to revive the house, started a fire in the furnace about 8 a.m., said firemen.

Later, one of the workers smelled smoke and went to the basement to investigate. The hair was singed from flames erupting as he opened the door. Gary Runnalls called Marmora fire department, but failed to abandon the call before giving detailed directions on how to reach the scene. The house, about eight miles from Marmora village, is at the end of a long lane and difficult to locate.

The Kelley house was burning beyond control when the fire department arrived about 9:15 a.m.

Mr. Kelsey and neighbors Tom Conner and Al Ridgeway have been trying for the last three years to get a better road into their houses, situated down long lanes from the main road. Plans are now under discussion in Marmora township township council to improve the lane into the Ridgeway house, which a private lane to lead from it to the other two houses.

Plan Brings Battles

Trenton's official plan by-laws met with antagonism and wide criticism from its development community Tuesday night. Suburban planning board chairman Doug Livingstone (left) and Mayor Robert Patrick — a guiding force in the plan — confer over next steps in solving criticisms.

Trenton Developers Intend Producing Their Own Plan

TRENTON — A group of local businessmen and developers intend approaching council with their own official plan, following widespread criticism from developers of the town's plan already approved by the provincial government, during a public hearing Tuesday night.

Local developers contended the official plan was geared to include lengthy delays in approvals and would "stifle the development of the community."

Doug Whitley during last night's meeting to discuss the zoning bylaws which will accompany the official plan, said "I don't think there is any doubt about this."

"Our group will approach council with a plan that will substantially alter their plan."

Following council's perusal of the plan, he said the group will ask the plan be forwarded to the Ontario Municipal Board and the necessary provincial ministry.

Hospital Officials

PICTON — At the annual meeting of the Prince Edward Memorial Hospital Board this week D. H. Keeler of Picton was re-elected as chairman.

Vice-chairman is Donald Stanton and other elected board members are Edward Rutter, Walter Bond, Donald Walker and Winston Hicks.

Appointed from the Women's Hospital Auxiliary is Marie Clapp.

Prince Edward County council's appointee is Picton mayor Rose Crookenright and Dr. Benoit Bechard is representative for the medical staff of PECM hospital.

Main Street Honor For McFarland?

PICTON — Picton merchant Jesse Mason has suggested to town council that Main Street be renamed McFarland Street in tribute to late mayor Harvey J. McFarland, said the Council heard Mr. Mason's proposal in a letter read during a meeting Monday night and a committee will be appointed to investigate an appropriate memorial.

Chairman of the Picton police commission, Mr. Mason worked closely with the late mayor for several years and was a personal friend.

His letter to council said that the late mayor's construction offices overlooked Main Street. Each Christmas a tree was erected at the Crotalch on Main Street by mayor McFarland.

He also was a former owner of The Royal Hotel, a Main Street building and for 21 years attended council meetings from chambers on Main Street.

Mr. McFarland was instrumental in location of Bata Industries on Main Street, and donated a Main Street site for erection of Prince Edward County Memorial Hospital His home, Loch Breagh, and the houses of his two sons also are on Main Street.

Mr. Mason felt that the street reflected mayor Mc-Farland's community involvement.

It has been reported that several other county residents have proposed a petition to rename the Skyway Bridge from Prince Edward to Deseronto the H. J. Mc-Farland Memorial Bridge.

"Town's Developers Irate On Official Plan Bylaws

By COLIN BRUCE
Staff Reporter

TRENTON — Trenton developers are up in arms following Tuesday night's unveiling of the town's zoning bylaws.

The 50-page set of bylaws are designed as the tenth of Trenton's official plan which received both local and provincial approval two years ago.

Overriding theme of the comments passed during Thursday's public hearing was that more red tape is being introduced into the development process.

Apparently, the majority of Trenton developers are in accordance with council wishes, will be first subject to town hall approval.

Frank Stokmans, representing the Quinte Planning Board, said the zones would permit council the greatest authority in monitoring development.

The sections heavily weighted with area developers chided the planning board and local planners for the bylaws and the official plan charging they would stifle development and growth of the community.

Developers contended the bylaws if passed — would necessitate lengthy and costly delays during discussion with the town, public hearings and Ontario Municipal Board approval.

Any development not conforming to the official plan would require time-consuming official plan amendments.

Doug Whitley, one of the more vocal opponents of the bylaws said, "the bylaws freeze the much activity and development in the town that it's going to curl up and die."

Mr. Stokmans explained the bylaws, created by his office, were a direct result of the official plan approved by council and public meeting.

"Only minor changes can be made to the bylaw at this point," he said.

Councillor John Bonn drew applause from the crowd when he said, "if there are so many people offended by the bylaws, we as council would be stupid to pass them.

"It all boils down to a poor official plan. The plan forms the basis for the bylaws, said Trenton builder Stan Klemencic.

After briefly reading over the supplied data, town clerk D. W. Larry asked: "Do you realize what that bylaw will do to the development in a community?"

While the majority of developers last night were pushing for a change in the basic concepts of the official plan, Mr. Stokmans replied "if you start amending the plan you will never have a set of zoning bylaws and council will never have control over development."

Following three hours of antagonism and criticism from developers, planners decided comments and criticisms on the bylaws would be received at 4 p.m. and another meeting will be scheduled for the latter part of March.

For Picton Council

Pay Stays the Same

PICTON — Town councillors have vetoed a motion seeking a $2 per week raise in their council and committee honoraria.

Introduced by Councillor Jack Evans the motion was defeated by a five-to-four vote.

The increase from $15 to $25 was opposed by Mayor James Bird, Reeve Ross Cronkwright, Deputy-reeve Larry Richardson and councillors Robert Ingarfield and Bessie Ward. Councillors Evans, Ralph Kinsey and Alexander supported the raise.

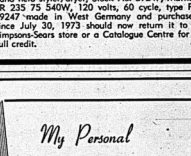
Councillor Evans said that the $10 increase would raise Picton council honoraria to a comparable level with neighboring municipalities and county council.

Deputy-reeve Richardson vetoed the proposal and emphasized that councillors should serve for public better-

Heart Analyses by Phone In Kingston-Picton Linkup

KINGSTON — Prince Edward County Memorial Hospital at Picton will be among three area hospitals linked to a computer system designed to analyze electrocardiograms, and to be demonstrated here today.

Dr. John Milliken, professor of medicine at Queen's University, said the system will enable family doctors in the area to receive detailed specialists' results about their patients in minutes.



At present, electrocardiograms are forwarded for analysis by specialists and results usually take a few days.

The computer-linked system allows a family physician to feed the electrocardiograms into the computer by telephone for immediate analysis. This is returned by printout on a machine in the hospital where the patient is undergoing a test.

The computer clinic is being installed at Hotel Dieu hospital here. A hospital in Smiths Falls also participates in the program.

Announcement

The Prudential Insurance Company Of America

WILFRED A. TAYLOR

John E. Stock, C.L.U., Regional Vice President, Marketing, The Prudential Insurance Company of America, announces the promotion of Wilfred A. Taylor to Sales Manager replacing Thomas C. Knight who was recently transferred to the Company's Winnipeg District Office.

Born in Prince Edward County, Mr. Taylor is a graduate of Trenton High School. A resident of Belleville for the past five years, he joined Prudential as an agent in September of 1969.

My Personal Congratulations

To R. Douglas Rushnell on the purchase of The John R. Bush Funeral Home, Belleville from International Funeral Service, Des Moine, Iowa, U.S.A. Doug was the first embalmer to serve his apprenticeship with my firm, and I'm very pleased to look forward to once more being associated with Doug in our chosen profession.

Yours sincerely,

John R. Bush

Dr. Spock's Admission

Parents: you have a chance to get on top again! . . . to assert the authority you once enjoyed . . . to show you're the way from you by the "experts" — the child psychiatrists, psychologists, teachers, social workers and pediatricians.

In effect, says none other than Dr. Benjamin Spock, "people like myself."

A remarkable turnabout, to be sure. For years parents have been told by Dr. Spock and his fellow experts that "understanding of the child" is more important than disciplining him. Thus began the swift deterioration of parental authority and a rise in what Spock himself refers to in the current issue of Redbook magazine as youthful "brattiness."

Listen to Dr. Spock again: "Inability to be firm is the commonest problem of parents . . . parental submissiveness only encourages children to be more pesky and demanding . . . parents' permissiveness doesn't avoid resplendsantries; it makes it inevitable."

The same premise is true in international politics. Pacifism or weakness can encourage aggressors. Strength and firmness deter it. Where children are concerned, Dr. Spock is still an acknowledged expert, but he is big enough to admit that in this matter of discipline he has erred. Parents and in due course, the younger generation — will come to thank him.

Keeping Interested

School . . . the job . . . life itself can be pretty boring at times. There is a growing recognition of this in the production line sector, for example, and commensurate efforts to lighter upgrade such jobs or make them more tolerable.

But take the matter of boredom in and out of the classroom. There is no doubt that school can be a drag: all those subjects, hitting the books day after day, studying at night, exams. The school building itself, unless it is one of the more attractive, modern structures — a labyrinth of cold corridors with not so much as a living plant like those ripped off with the taxpayer's money and used to embellish the lobbies of government buildings in Ottawa.

Perhaps instead of slicing a percentage of the taxpayer's earnings this kind of initiative should be left to the government employees — and in school, to the students. It could help counter this boredom thing and encourage a little interest in horticulture.

The "boredom index" Globe and Mail columnist Scott Young called it recently in quoting Lenore Sheppard, a former teacher, who recalled a Grade 12 class "composed almost entirely of relatively intelligent but pseudo-sophisticated young people who insisted that French was 'a bore.' "

Without quoting this teacher's entire lament, the burden of it is that nothing — but nothing — seems to interest these kids, leading her to conclude that the boredom was in themselves, not the subjects, and that they "expect school to be like hours of armchair entertainment like TV."

Unknowingly, she has something there, for in a recent issue of TV Guide there was an article telling of the astonishing success being achieved in the East Washington Rhodes Middle School in Philadelphia with the use of contemporary television programming for a whole range of subjects from social studies to geography. Shows are taped or scripts have been obtaindt so they can be used in class. So successful is the program in stimulating student interest that schools across the country are studying it.

What about Canada? Even allowing for any national aversion to the use of U.S. programming (and the fact it it has a wide audience here anyway and the life situations depicted are of universal appeal.

But to return to the student. Ultimately, they say, he is but one element, and in the new, as Lord Chandos (the former Oliver Lyttleton) once said, to discover in life that "nearly everything and everybody is fascinatingly interesting."

Southbound

In line with the foregoing philosophy, and with school spirit, is the hard work members of Centennial secondary school band have put into preparations for their trip to Expo, March 8-10, next month for the Can-Am festivities at the American resort. The kids have raised more than $5,000 for the trip and their week's stay. Congratulations and good luck to them.

Couple of Hours and Then Some for Lunch

A Day in the Life of a Federal Government P.R. Man

By RICHARD JACKSON

OTTAWA — Remember that promise of the Government's to "integrate" Information Canada with the ever-growing and more expensive federal public relations establishment?

Integration was to be in the name of efficiency and economy.

But since then the size and cost of the information services have ballooned into a $100 million plus federal industry with 767 publicists on the payroll at last count, and another 378 jobs open for a total 1,135.

Five years ago when "integration" was the money-saving idea, top public relations pay of $21,000 went to the Prime Minister's press secretary.

Currently the top dollar for government PR is $30,000 and the staff has more than doubled.

What do they all do in putting the best possible face on everything the Government does?

Long-time newspaperman, in charge of information, city editor, managing editor, wire service editor — veteran of the staffs of "THE OTTAWA CITIZEN, TORONTO TELEGRAM and THE TORONTO STAR — John McLeag, an Old Ottawa Hand, in one of the funniest takeouts or put-downs ever done on the federal information establishment that succeeded in his ideal of writing a book in the life of a government PR man.

It went like this:

10 a.m.: Got to brooding over record intelligence that information officers in one department devote more than three days to every press release.

10.31 a.m.: Ceased brooding and turned back to writing release.

10.32 a.m.: Got this snapper down on paper: The Hon. Gerson Gaston, Minister of the Interior, today announced appointment of Jean-Paul Garceau, 38, as West Coast co-ordinator of SCREW. (Notice how I got the minister's name up real high. This is because a really good release must have the news right at the start and readers who have less than three days to get out their paper won't have it awwf.)

10.40 a.m.: Tried another approach. Three names in that (saving and you can't have them all looking alike: The Minister of the Interior, the Hon. Gerson Gaston, announced today (get the switch from "today announced") appointment of J. Garceau (notice I left out his second initial and age. This is to keep news editors on their toes. And giving them this info by phone will help pad out the three days) as West Coast SCREW coordinator.

10.50 a.m.: Decided it lacked sparkle, so had another go: The Hon. Garcon Gaston, Minister of the Interior, has named Jean-Paul Garceau co-ordinator of SCREW on the West Coast. The Hon. Mr. Gaston said Mr. Garceau had a deep understanding of West Coast needs, especially in the SCREW field. (Now that's pretty hot stuff, below how I got the minister's name in twice in two paragraphs.)

11 a.m.: Time OK for coffee. No point in rushing it.

11.40 a.m.: Scanned market report in morning paper, called my broker before deciding it was time to wash up for lunch. It seemed no time since the day had begun and already I'd knocked off three pretty pert paragraphs. No sense in pushing it.

12.02 p.m.: Took elevator to second floor of popular Wellington street oasis (National Press Club) after standing around in the lower lobby for two minutes. Don't want to appear too anxious.

1 p.m.: Went for lunch with information officers most of whom were entertaining other information officers, and had a good meal with excellent wine. Tried to chat about SCREW but the subject was switched to wines to talk about what they'd been up to and hockey.

3.36 p.m.: Wended way back to the office and the long afternoon ahead.

3 p.m.: Picked up the SCREW file and decided I'd better find out what SCREW stood for before wrapping up a press release. Put in several calls only to discover chap in charge of SCREW was on a six-month course at St. Pierre-Miquelon being briefed on West Coast problems.

3.35 p.m.: Received phone call from (Public Service) Commission chap telling me I'd just been named director of information division.

3.40 p.m.: Had coffee to celebrate good news and decided to put out another press release. Jean Paul d'McLean today was named to the position of Director of Information for the Department of the Interior. Mr. d'McLean's new appointment was announced by the minister, Hon. Garcon Gaston who said Mr. d'McLean's vast experience in information field would be of great benefit to the department, especially to the SCREW program. Mr. d'McLean, before joining the department, was an information officer six months ago, was employed in the Newfoundland ground fish industry. He is 22 and bilingual.

4.30 p.m.: Decided to knock it off. After all, how many press releases can you write in three days?

Inflation Will Worsen According to U. S. Economist

By VINCENT EGAN
Business and Consumer Affairs Analyst
Thomson News Service

If you think today's inflation is intolerable, be warned—it could become twice as bad.

That was one of the clearest messages to come from a distinguished colloquy of international financial and economic experts, brought together by the Montreal Stock Exchange the other day to mark its centennial.

If they are right, it means that any Canadian had better think seriously about his or her plans for future financial security, especially in retirement. Those careful plans based on the relatively modest inflation of the 1950s and 1960s, or on the popular view that common-stock investment is a sure-fire hedge against inflation, could go awry if the experts are right.

One of the starriest performers at the MSE seminar came from economist Milton Friedman of the University of Chicago. He is probably the favorite economist of the right side of the U.S. political spectrum, just as John Kenneth Galbraith is the popular favorite of the other half.

There may be an occasional couple—including this year and next—but inflation is almost sure to grow worse over the years, according to Prof. Friedman.

A decade or two ago, today's inflation—approaching 10 per cent a year—would have seemed impossible. But the Chicago economist believes that by the 1990s the value of the dollar could be eroding by 15 or 20 per cent a year.

The big winners of the past generation, he noted, have not been those who invested in stock but rather those who have borrowed on fixed-interest terms—governments, corporations and others—because they have paid "incredibly low" interest rates and have been able to repay their creditors with vastly depreciated dollars.

His solution: Give the investor a better break by creating purchasing-power bonds that would pay the investor a fixed interest (say 4 per cent) plus a sum equal to the increase in the Cost of Living. Thus, in a year when inflation hit 9 per cent, the government corporation would pay its bondholders 13 per cent interest.

Prof. Friedman, in other words, would offset the effects of inflation via escalator, or indexing, features. These are already familiar in wage, rent and other private contracts, and the Canadian government has begun to apply them to tax exemptions, pensions and the like.

One objection to this is that, while it would serve as a brilliant cure for the disease of inflation, it makes it worse because no one has much reason to resist price increases that will be offset by indexing.

When I sought Finance Minister John Turner's views on this recently, he replied, "I don't want to fight inflation on the backs of those least able to protect themselves."

It's true that indexing is a technique to ease the burden of coping with inflation for people on relatively fixed incomes in the short-term at least. And, at the great economist Lord Keynes once observed, "In the long run we are all dead."

And it is equally true, as Prof. Friedman noted, that governments have a moral duty to ease the hardship on only because they profit so handsomely from inflation—both as long-term borrowers and as tax collectors.

But, no prudent person ought to conclude that techniques such as indexing will provide a real shield against the super-inflation that appears to be confronting Canada. Wise investment, with a careful study of tax consequences, is more vital than ever.

National Trading Corporation Idea Lies Dormant

By DON O'BEARN
Queen's Park Bureau
Thomson News Service

TORONTO — This is how things get done—or rather don't get done—in Ontario.

A year ago in December they Minister of Industry and Tourism John White made an announcement.

The government, he said, intended to investigate the possibility of establishing a trading corporation which would develop domestic markets.

This was exciting to a few of us who had been lonely preaching a philosophy for some years.

This philosophy was that while exports were the glamor girls, or the cream, of the Ontario economy, the base was made with the other provinces in Canada.

The big share of Ontario's products—notably automobiles and steel—were being peddled across the country from Newfoundland to B.C.

This meant two things.

One, that it was in the direct interest of Canada for the rest of the country to be prosperous.

Two, that it would be in the province's interest to encourage purchasing in these other provinces for they would have money to buy more from it.

Such encouragement was needed, along with some advice.

In the Maritimes, for example, mills were not getting their lumber for the Ontario market. So its builders had to look elsewhere.

The fine apples they grow in Nova Scotia were not getting into central Canada at all.

The West had plenty of coal. But it was doing nothing about getting a freight rate structure which would make it practical for central Canada's consumption.

So when White made his announcement those few of us who had appreciated these circumstances could see a vision.

A domestic trading corporation, you felt, could do what we could to boost those sales.

But also such a corporation would soon find the need for another organization, probably included in his structure, which would in turn foster sales from other provinces to Ontario.

So what's happened? What has happened to this very practical proposal and to the vision it bred?

Nothing!

Shortly after White made his announcement he was shifted to treasury and was succeeded by Claude Bennett.

And though Bennett managed to spend seven weeks this summer touring Ontario in a motorcade he hasn't been able to find the time to even appoint a committee to look into the question of a domestic trading corporation.

Do We Need Colony In Caribbean?

Rudyard Kipling was not addressing Canadians when he urged 75 years ago, "take up the white man's burden." But his spiritual ancestors are trying to sell us that idea: a proposition that Canada acquire the Turks and Caicos Islands in the Caribbean.

The two small islands of 6,000 population are a Crown colony that the British don't much want, left adrift when Jamaica and the Bahamas acquired independence. Max Saltsman, NDP financial critic in the Commons, introduced a private bill to incorporate them into Nova Scotia. Now a tourist King Ranfurly from the islands is here to propose that, instead, Canada acquire them as an administrative area governed from Ottawa. Their call sell is that the Turks and Caicos could become Canada's "Hong Kong of the Caribbean," adjacent to Latin American markets.

A splendid mission, if Canada wants a colony. If only the white man's burden had the same connotation of moral uplift it once implied. Today some churls might call it imperialism. That's now a bad word.

Be that as it may, one need not be a prophet to see the future. Black islanders, with diverse history and culture, and different geography and problems, would grow restive under the faraway rule of Ottawa; or of Halifax, if Mr. Saltsman's variation were adopted. The freedom struggles — or riots, depending on one's viewpoint — would begin: wall graffiti would tell us, "Whitey go home!" Would Canada send in gunboats and troops?

Let's not get mixed into that picture. Foreign aid and technical assistance for the West Indies, yes. Political involvement, no thanks.

Snowmobile Operations

Brockville Recorder and Times

Snowmobilers often complain that the police are against them, that their "sport" is misunderstood, that municipal and police officials are out of their way to make things tough for them — such as banning their use on local streets and highways.

But when snowmobilers are given a chance to discuss safety, receive instalments of information, and to improve their public image, they can take advantage.

Ontario Provincial Police Commissioner Gordon Aldred put it: "When we put on a program that will benefit them all, nobody shows up!"

Constable Quinn was referring to a recent snowmobile safety night in Lyn, in which only eight snowmobile owners and two interested spectators turned up.

UCS Parley In Caucus

Editor,

I have always been intrigued and shocked at certain remarks by public money have such a desire for secrecy.

Why is it necessary for our own UCS to hold what they call a total caucus meeting on Wednesday, Feb. 6?

I have asked this before and I say it again, an agency using public money should be frank and open with all matters of the public that is the source of their income.

As even the tenants of the building with any contact to the UCS are especially forbidden to be present on that night, I can only ask: What earth-shattering policies are being formulated?

Fishermen Throw Back Catch Worth $8 Million

MONTREAL (CP) — A 21,-60-mile Atlantic coastline puts Canada in an enviable position as far as fishing is concerned, and a group of experts meeting here want to see the country make the most of it.

At present, however, Canadian fishermen are left with dilemmas in the wake of huge, technically-sophisticated foreign fleets that have been depleting fish stocks for years.

Another problem being considered by experts at a three-day conference on utilization of Atlantic fisheries is the amount of fish Canadian vessels must throw back because it cannot be processed.

Dr. Mike Shepard of Ottawa, international fisheries director for the environment department, said Tuesday the latest agreements of the International Commission for the Northwestern Atlantic Fisheries (ICNAF) have given Canada a long-awaited break.

Last year, the 16 ICNAF countries including Canada approved stricter catch quotas, which among other things, gave this country a larger share of the fish off its own coast.

Scattered along this coastline are more than 600 plants that process fish and Dr. Chesley Blackwood said Tuesday these plants are operating far below capacity.

Dr. Blackwood, fisheries inspection director from Ottawa, said, however, their capacity could be expanded through increases of more automated equipment, which would make it economically feasible to process the 400 million pounds of fish — worth about $8 million to fishermen — now tossed overboard.

The trouble is that the trash fish are either too small or there is no market for them in Canada.

A. A. Etchegary, vice-president of Fish Products Ltd. in St. John's, Nfld., said the completion of fishery exploitation demand on over-all plan, not just piecemeal solutions to immediate problems.

What is required, Mr. Etchegary said in a thorough assessment of fish stocks, coupled with more capital spending afloat and ashore and more exploratory fishing, preferably done with private fishing vessels rather than government research ships.

"There does seem to be a void in the long-range planning," he said. "We cannot afford the mistakes of the past."

The conference ends Thursday.

Astronauts Closing Up Skylab

HOUSTON (AP) — The Skylab 3 astronauts have started the long job of closing up their space home and packing their Apollo command ship for the trip back to earth Friday.

Astronauts Gerald Carr, William Pogue and Edward Gibson spent most of Tuesday, their third day in space, transferring 1,718 pounds of film, electronic tape and biological samples from the large space station into the crowded compartments of the smaller Apollo command module, docked at one end of Skylab.

The cargo includes film and electronic tape from more than two months of study of the sun and from 32 earth-resources photo runs.

Biological samples—blood, urine and fecal specimens—will remain refrigerated aboard the Skylab until just before the astronauts board the ferry ship for the return to earth.

Splashdown, ending the record 84-day mission, is set for 10:17 a.m. EST Friday in the Pacific ocean, 175 miles southwest of San Diego, Calif.

The prime recovery ship, the New Orleans, is already on station, awaiting the astronauts. Shipboard meteorologists predict excellent weather for the splashdown.

MEMO FROM HELEN GAGEN

"House brand," "private label brand" — exactly what does it mean? Private label brands are products that are packed or produced specifically for a chain or store, and sold under a name that belongs to that store.

They usually sell for less than their nationally advertised counterparts, even though they may be produced by the same processor. Private label brands must be the equal in safety, and sometimes are better suited to your purposes than national brands.

Miracle Food Mart sells a range of foods and household products under the names of Steinberg, Miss Mart, Orchard King — and in the case of baked goods, Buttercup Farm and Champlain.

Unit value pricing will help you to know how much you save by using Miracle Food Mart private label brands. You're wise to try them at least once — and decide for yourself how they compare with the brand you now use.

Successful Living

She Wants to Help

By DORIS CLARE

Dear Doris: I want to help my girl in school. She is 10 years old and in grade four. She had to repeat grade three and it is keeps on she is going to fail grade four. All her work is wrong.

How can I find out whether I can help the counselling or would it be possible that she is plain dumb?

I keep asking the teachers what I can do to help her but they just don't say anything. Should I scold her or just leave her alone?

I get so provoked it bothers me more than it bothers her. I myself would like to go back to school. I tried. I got a correspondence course for spring three to help her, but I couldn't understand where to start. How can a person tell what they can learn?

I am 34 years old, I had to quit school when I was 12 years old, so that's quite a while ago. Our school closed on the farm. I had grade six.

Learning Problems

Dear Problems: There are times when encouragement at home works the miracle of turning a confused child into a student. You prize the education you never got, and want it for your daughter.

It comes across to me that you are a thinking, capable person. You were right in trying for fifty education, and if you will give me more detail about what was puzzling in the correspondence course, I would like to have a hand in helping.

Meanwhile, further persistence with principal and teachers may give you the key to your daughter's failures. It may be: (1) some gap in pre-school learning, (2) a home (yours) which is less than stimulate; or (3) an intelligence somewhat below average. Make them feel you would not any criticism, if it was in the interest of helping your girl.

Equipping yourself with higher education - through correspondence courses, or reading (through your library) would put you in a better position to help her with homework; besides which, learning more about your world could be an exciting experience for you.

Never scold her. Your daughter needs encouragement; never blame.

Dear Doris: My boy friend, several years younger than me, dated me every two or three weeks. Then he went on a trip. On return he called me to come and get him at the airport.

He had a present for me - perfume - and told me this when I dropped him at his apartment. Would I like it? Yes, I would, but it was in his packing and I asked if he could bring it to my place because I had to get back to an appointment. This was O.K. with him.

I didn't get a phone call, so 10 days later I called to find out why. From his excuses I could tell he wanted to terminate our relationship.

He had said he would call me and I don't think much of his breaking that promise.

I feel I want to call and tell him so and then I wonder - why bother?

But shouldn't men contrive to end a relationship some other way, however difficult?

Deceived.

Dear Deceived: You are feeling frustrated, disappointed and angry. And your real problem is that you have to bottle it up.

Now that you have spilled over to me, forget it. Teaching a lesson to an erstwhile boy friend - and one much younger than you - will get you nowhere. Besides, he won't even listen.

(Your own dilemma may not be as hopeless as it looks. Write to Doris for help, care of this newspaper.)

New Contraceptive Methods Discussed at Sex Seminar

"A lot of people are working very hard to improve on the pill as a method of contraception," Dr. Paul MacKenzie, gynecologist, told Hotel Lloyd Kingsmen last Tuesday night.

Speaking to the third in a series of Sexuality Seminars, sponsored by the Family Planning Association of Hastings and Prince Edward Counties, Dr. MacKenzie said the Ontario and federal governments are funding research into synthetic birth control for that segment of the population not interested in artificial methods.

The rhythm method of birth control relies on determining the "danger" or ovulation periods in a woman's menstrual cycle.

He claimed the rhythm method as an "effective method if properly used."

In his discussion of contraceptive techniques, Dr. MacKenzie said that without some form of birth control, the average family would include seven or eight children.

Families who choose to limit the number of children must use one of several birth control techniques.

"Abstinence is the only perfect method of birth control," he said, "but it hasn't been too popular."

Other "very effective" methods of birth control are the pill, I.U.D., sterilization, he said. Effective methods are the condom and diaphram while less effective methods are withdrawal, vaginal douches and foam.

New developments in birth control by use of an intrauterine device is commonly called a "loop" - include the issuing of new copper IUDs that are proving more effective than current inert plastic devices.

"Within five to 10 years the IUD will be a more satisfactory method for a lot more women including women who have never been pregnant," said Dr. MacKenzie explained that most doctors are reluctant to insert an IUD in women who have never been pregnant.

Currently, however, he said that if a woman can take it, the birth control pill is the "prime choice" for contraception.

He explained there are three types of birth control pills manufactured. One called a combined pill, contains estrogen and progesterone and is taken for 21 consecutive days. Sequential birth control pills are also taken for 21 days and includes two types of pills. The so-called minipill contains no estrogen and is taken consistently.

Dr. MacKenzie said there is no evidence that the pill causes cancer or abnormal babies. He said it does not extend the child bearing years.

Sterilization is becoming increasingly popular in North America, he said. He emphasized tubal sterilization which he said were a clinical procedure requiring only a local anaesthetic, and tubal ligations for women already undergoing major abdominal operation for two to five days.

He said that any person over the age of 18 may consent to his or her own surgery by provincial law and stressed it is important that consent be informed in sterilization operation. However, he pointed out that some physicians and some hospital have their own local rules requiring knowledge or consent for the operation by a spouse.

Dr. MacKenzie called the existing method of abortion a bad method of contraception and no one advocates abortion instead of birth control.

However, he added, when a pregnancy is already a fact, contraceptives are obviously useless.

"Most abortions aren't the result of contraceptive failure but a failure to use contraceptives."

He said the majority of abortions is under five percent.

"After a second abortion, a woman almost never has a third."

Sharon Smith and Glen Spicer of Tweed, were one of the engaged couples at the Welcome Wagon Engagement Party at the Four Seasons Hotel Tuesday evening. Here looking at the bouquets by Warkentin's Flowers, they are making their plans for a wedding in April.

Brides-to-be Feted

Nearly 100 prospective brides attended the Engagement Party given by Welcome Wagon at the Four Seasons Hotel Tuesday evening. Accompanying the brides-to-be were fiances, mothers or potential brides-maids.

Brides-to-be had the opportunity to discuss their bridal arrangements with the experts who were present. Those sponsors present were: Ireland's Furniture and Appliances; Guaranty Trust Co. of Canada; Rodney's Beauty Salon; Stroud's Jewellery and Gift Shop; Warkentin's Flowers Four Seasons Hotel Limited; Pauline Shoppe Bridal Salon of Trenton; Mutual Life Assurance Co. of Canada; Empire Men's Wear of Trenton; The Bellevue Jewelry; W.R. Riley Photographer Ltd. and Circle Television and Stereo.

Modelling fashions for the Intelligencer Bonspiel Tuesday were Jan Wolanski, Marja Anderson and Mary Jean Deacon. The women are wearing a casual ensemble, suede street suit and a beach cover-up from Shana Fashion Boutique.

Fashions Highlight at Bonspiel

Held Tuesday at the Quinte Curling Club, the bonspiel included 96 women from Belleville, Kingston, Picton, Napanee, Trenton and Toronto. This is the 15th annual bonspiel.

Chairman of the Bonspiel was Lou Halpin.

The fashion show was presented by Shana Fashion Boutique. Casual, and formal wear were part of the show which featured 12 ensembles modelled by Marja Anderson, Mary Jean Deacon and Jan Wolanski. Commentator was Tony Wolanski.

The committee assisting Mrs. Halpin included Kay Page, Jean MacLennan, Roberta Vice, Jessie Baber and Gloria Jones.

Concerned about the cost of prescriptions?

You can do something about it.

Ontario's PARCOST program is designed to provide you with prescription drugs at reasonable cost.

It does so by providing your doctor with a PARCOST Index that shows him the comparative costs of high quality drugs. This makes it easy for him to prescribe less expensive drugs.

Your pharmacist can also compare costs using the PARCOST Index, which helps him select lower cost drugs.

But PARCOST needs your participation to make it work most effectively. It's up to you to make sure you're getting full benefit of the money-saving, quality-assuring PARCOST program.

It's in your own interest to do three things:

1. When your doctor prescribes medicine for you, ask him about the cost.
2. Take your prescriptions to a pharmacy that displays the PARCOST symbol.
3. Ask your pharmacist if you are getting the lowest cost drug in the PARCOST Index.

Ann Landers

Fat Therapist Can't Help Overweight Patient Has No Faith

Dear Ann Landers: You called wife and good luck to qualities a woman should be looking for. In a hundred words frequently advise "people who are divorced" to remarry. Well, I am divorced, and I have no intention of ever getting married again. But I have been dating Stan for he has been divorced, is that he has never mentioned (to) his ex-wife. An agreement to marry, or even discuss it. He seems to have neither the ambition or wedding, or the qualities I am looking for in another man. Stan has been dating me for about seven months. At last a dinner to celebrate the anniversary of a marriage that he says was "beautiful while it lasted." Stan professional courtesy, no commitments have been made on either side.

Last week Stan said he had to cancel a date we had made for Saturday night because he was going to a party he couldn't take me to a party because his wife knew about it. He said he already knew why and I didn't go to dinner. It was their anniversary. This has been a traditional special, like a birthday or Christmas, for other people. I'm not looking for money to take it from him. Then I met his wife. She divorce five years ago. I asked her why she left him. She weighed more than I did. I'd be interested to know that other he remarried and he said, "Of course. She is the mother of my children."

Dear Ann Landers: If you don't print this letter, maybe some inconsiderate, selfish idiot will run over a cat or a dog, please have pity on the latter.

When you accidentally run over a cat or a dog, please have the decency to stop and see if it can be rushed to a veterinarian and saved. If it's too late for a need to be reminded.

Dear One: Here's your letter. But it's not for the "inconsiderate, selfish idiots." They couldn't care less. It's for those who love animals and people who love animals and look to the person making the

Women Hold the Real Power

WINNIPEG (CP) — There's a theory that men may be the figureheads in the modern family, but women are the actual decision-makers in the family.

Dr. D. H. Berg, assistant professor in the family studies department in University of Manitoba's home economics faculty, is one sociologist who believes the theory.

He said in an interview women hold the real power because they are the most physically present parent and the centre of the family relations within the family.

"Messages from father to children or from children to father could be reinterpreted. That's power to manipulate.

So many influences and variables enter into the making of a decision, Dr. Berg said, that one cannot simply look to the person making the final decision and assume that it was his or her decision.

For example, a wife might want a new car while the husband wants a boat instead.

"It might be better for the husband to conform to his wife's will in order to ensure that they get along well."

In that case, although the husband apparently is the one making the final decision, it will be influenced to a large degree by other considerations.

Dr. Berg said he is concerned over a new development in the family: the declining parental responsibility to the offspring.

"Society still values the producing of children, the physical act of having them. But the value attached to raising them well is declining."

He believed this big happened because the society has lost its rewarding recognition for the good parent.

"We community pressure and social status into de-

"Before, parents would be asked: 'Why did you let your kid run out that way?' But the community can no longer

A man receives pay, accolade, achievement and recognition on the job.

"But who's going to pat the woman on the back and tell her she had done a good job in raising the children?"

If there was a mechanism for rewarding parenthood, Dr. Berg said, there wouldn't be so many women who say they are frustrated with their job as a mother.

"The job would become meaningful."

He said it no longer is considered humiliating or demeaning for husbands to assume household chores and changes have occurred in social activities.

When women and men get together now, you no longer find men talking high finance in the living room and the women discussing recipes in the kitchen.

"Conversations are shared and that's very important because you're no longer creating two separate worlds. Rather, differing attitudes become familiar."

But through all the changes, Dr. Berg said, the family is here to stay.

Northern Ruling Due Today

OTTAWA (CP) — The Canadian transport commission today was to make public its decision on whether Northern Electric is to be grouped with Bell Canada, its parent company for the purpose of ruling on a Bell rate application.

Commission chairman Guy Roberge said Tuesday the hearing on Bell's latest application for increased rates will continue whatever the decision on Quebec's appeal to have Northern operations examined along with those of the parent company.

He assured Ross Goodwin, Quebec government lawyer, that no major immediate change will have to be made by parties contesting the application as a result of the decision.

On Tour

OTTAWA (CP) — Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield embarks on a three-day tour Thursday which will take him to Toronto, London, Ont., and Kitchener.

Acquitted

It took a jury an hour to clear the 34-year-old surgeon in the December, 1972, death of Eugene Bauer, a 59-year-old Long Island Rail Road engineer, at the Nassau County Medical Centre.

Stores Charged

OTTAWA (CP) — Six Ontario and Quebec food stores have been charged following investigations by the food prices review board, the consumer affairs department and federal and provincial justice departments.

A total of 21 charges, involving misleading advertising, the Weights and Measures Act and grading specifications, have been laid.

Convicted

VANCOUVER (CP) — Xaviera Hollander, author of the Happy Hooker and other books, was convicted Tuesday of theft under $200.

She will be sentenced April 4 by provincial court Judge Darrell Jones.

OUR BOARDING HOUSE with Major Hoople

17 MPs Took Wives On Flights Overseas

TORONTO (CP) — The Globe and Mail says 17 members of Parliament took their wives on holiday flights in Canada and overseas at the taxpayers' expense during the last month.

The flights aboard defence department 707 jets were approved by Defence Minister James Richardson, the newspaper says in an Ottawa report.

It says the department has revealed that 22 members of Parliament, 17 wives and 11 dependents enjoyed free travel, food and baggage service aboard Canadian Armed Forces aircraft from Jan. 1 to Feb. 4.

The destinations included points across Canada and Brussels, Lahr in Germany, London, and Nicosia in Cyprus.

Maj. Dennis Hogan, an armed forces information officer, refused to give out names of the passengers.

Under federation statutes, members of Parliament are entitled only to return air fare once a week to their constituencies from Ottawa and to have travel expenses picked up when on government business.

They have no legal right to fly free on military aircraft but are allowed this favor at the discretion of the minister of defence who can grant free flights to some members while refusing others without explanation, the newspaper says.

Gasoline Bomb Mars Queen's Maori Visit

WAITANGI, N.Z. (Reuter) — Demonstrators threw a gasoline bomb and fireworks today when the Queen and Prince Philip arrived at the historic Treaty House here for celebration of New Zealand's National Day.

The Queen and Prince Philip, accompanied by Prince Charles and Princess Anne, were here for a ceremony to mark the signing of the 1840 treaty of Waitangi.

There was no serious damage.

Fire department officials said the bomb was thrown near Treaty House, where the Maoris ceded sovereignty to Britain. It started a small blaze.

Another fire set a 50-gallon oil-storage tank ablaze. Both fires were quickly put out.

The Queen and the other members of the Royal Family had taken their seats in the grounds of Treaty House when the fires started, and they were not believed to have noticed the incidents.

Starvation Threatens Moving Deer Alive Is Difficult Task

RONDEAU PARK, Ont. (CP) — A hardened farmer, veteran of many hunting trips, sat on the ground cradling the head of a deer in his arms.

By holding up the animal's head, he hoped to keep the oxygen flowing and the mucus from choking the immobilized deer.

The animal died.

That farmer nearly cried — we all nearly cried," said Bob Goulet, vice-president of the Rondeau Rod and Gun Club.

The Ontario Humane Society and gun club members, mostly farmers with spare time now, are trying to transfer alive 30 deer from this provincial park on Lake Erie, 25 miles southeast of Chatham.

Seven deer have been captured, two of which died, since the program started in late December.

Natural resources ministry officials say the park is over-populated with deer which threaten to disturb its ecological balance.

The ministry last November proposed an organized, unselective kill to remove about 300 deer. There was a public outcry and the humane society was given a permit to remove 30 deer alive.

Mike Charbonneau, park superintendent, said an official count last year, by having 40 men walk in a straight line through the forest, showed 341 deer in the park.

Mr. Charbonneau said the deer are eating exotic tree species, destroying the natural regeneration of the forest and upsetting the park's ecological balance that makes it unique in Canada.

Mr. Charbonneau said the ministry plans a proper deer management program next year, possibly including either trapping, seasonal hunting or immobilization. A kill, can be a lasting program.

"Eventually the preserves will be at capacity and then we are left with taking them to remote northern areas. But these deer are spoiled. You can almost see them walking tippy-toe through the little snow we have here.

"Can you imagine them surviving in deep snow with less food in the North? It would be like leaving a baby in the woods."

Government Waiting For Opinion to Alter

OTTAWA (CP) — The government appears ready to apply what one official calls band-aid treatment to the western grain movement problem while waiting for western opinion to swing behind a long-term solution.

The wheat board has told the government it needs 4,000 new hopper cars to handle the bumper crop it sees. Charles Gibbings, a wheat board commissioner, said recently the board doesn't care whether they are built and owned by the railways or by the government.

But based on revenue they gain from carrying grain, the railways are unlikely to build the hoppers — specially designed for the grain trade.

The railways have long said the low rate for grain transportation is unrealistic. Legislated by Parliament, it yields revenue of .5 cents a ton-mile.

The Palliser Wheat Growers Association, a small but influential group of growers in Saskatchewan and Alberta, has suggested a look at the Crowsnest Pass rate, the statutory rate.

And Mac Runciman, United Grain Growers president, said in an Edmonton speech in December that a higher Crowsnest Pass rate might be "a lot more palatable" than not being able to move grain.

This willingness to look at the statutory rate apparently stems from good grain prices. Some farmers seem prepared to pay more for grain transportation if that is the only way to get their crop moved.

Sudbury Probe May Get Facts Today

SUDBURY, Ont. (CP) — An inquest into 23 deaths may receive today its first definite information on how oxygen and nitrous oxide lines were crossed in a new medical gas system at Sudbury General Hospital last year.

During 17 days of sittings, many of the key questions asked of a string of witnesses have been passed along the line for Aldo Defend, a plumbing foreman who supervised the late stages of the gas system installation in 1972 and 1973.

Mr. Defend, who put the system right when the mixup was detected after the death of six-year-old Charbonneau Jr. last Sept. 7, was expected to be the second witness today — and the 43rd since Ontario's longest inquest opened Jan. 14.

After what is expected to be a lengthy examination by Crown Attorney John Skinch and a battery of private lawyers, he is to be followed later in the week by two engineering experts retained by the Ontario attorney-general's department to analyse a mass of intricate and often contradictory construction evidence that has been piling up for days.

Mr. Defend and the three foremen who preceded him worked on the gas lines at various times and in various sections of the piperneal installation, and it likely will require the experts' testimony to tie all the information into a coherent picture.

Once the source of the mix-connection is traced, it will also take further testimony from hospital personnel to determine for just what periods the anesthetic nitrous oxide was getting to oxygen outlets in the hospital's new wing.

Its presence has been confirmed in four rooms of the wing last September but the area was opened in stages, starting in early May, and then has as yet been no evidence of when the centrally-supplied gas was turned on in each of the rooms.

Miss Dominic died in the special procedures room after being administered gas from an oxygen outlet. The other 22 persons also had been prescribed oxygen but apparently in the emergency treatment room, another one of those affected for at least some time.

Testimony Tuesday from three of Mr. Defend's fellow workers failed to throw new light on the central questions before the inquiry. All either had left the job before the new pipes were hooked into the central gas supply or had no direct knowledge of the connection.

Much of the day was spent thrashing over a draftsman's error in labelling oxygen and nitrous oxide lines on a section of the design drawings for first-floor pipes installed in 1972.

One of the foremen of that time, Manfred Seiler, contended this did not lead to the misconnection, a view shared by earlier witnesses.

However, he conceded that there was "sloppy work" in the site office of his employer, Industrial Comstock International Ltd., in not keeping a record of how the artisans had worked around the flawed section of the drawing.

Drunk Union Organizer Voiced Threat to Kill

TORONTO (CP) — Bruno Zanini, a central figure in construction union organizing since 1959, testified Tuesday he heard union business agent Gus Sinclair threaten to kill contractor Elio Bianchini. He said Simone was drunk when he made the threat.

"Gus was tanked up at the time and had just come in from organizing," Zanini said. He was testifying at a hearing of the royal commission into violence in the construction industry.

He quoted Simone as saying, "That guy should be killed."

He said Simone wanted to know where Bianchini lived.

Zanini said Bianchini was president of Leader Masonry Ltd., a firm that was not organized in a drive by Simone's Local 502 of the Wood, Wire and Metal Lathers Union.

Zanini denied he admitted to detectives that he told Simone that contractor Nicholas DiLoreno gave him $1,500 for setting fires at Leader jobs.

The inquiry was told Simone, business agent for Local 983, Lathers International Union, was trying at the time to organize employees of about 30 companies into a union of concrete formers.

Zanini said he had the job of contacting workers and getting them to sign up for the new union.

He said Bianchini's Leader group was one organization that did not sign a contract with Local 502 while many other companies did.

Insp. Bruno Dorigo of the provincial police, an investigator for the commission, said Zanini told him Simone wanted a bomb planted in the Bianchini garage.

Zanini, in his third day of testimony, repeated his position that he was blamed for the destruction of buildings during the union-organizing period but said he was not to blame.

Zanini, 32, said he gave up his name as a lyrics writer 20 years ago when the Italian ambassador did not like Italians mixed in. He suggested he had a role to play in helping exploited immigrant workers.

Men worked 60 to 70 hours a week, overtime, vacation pay and unemployment insurance payments were often ignored and there were no safety standards, he said.

When the workers were being organized, many unions, including the lathers, plasterers, carpenters and laborers, were battling to represent them, he said.

Even when Local 180, International Laborers Union, established control among about 2,000 workers in the early '70s, employers were not paying workers for all the hours they worked, he said.

"They (the workers) were fleeced out of four or five — even nine hours a week," Zanini said.

He said he supplied information about abuses against the workers to Gerald McAuliffe, a reporter for The Globe and Mail in August, 1972. That was the month Zanini was shot and wounded.

More Food Needed

TORONTO (CP) — Agricultural technology will have to improve if Canadians are going to meet growing demands for food, Clayton Switzer, dean of the Ontario Agricultural College in Guelph, said Tuesday.

He told about 300 delegates at the annual meeting of the Meat Packers Council of Canada that production must be increased "particularly if our good land is going to continue to be used for building."

"In the recent past, society said that agricultural research was unnecessary because we had surpluses of all kinds of foods . . . that situation no longer exists, if it ever did," he said.

"We must learn more about animal breeding, nutrition, disease control and management techniques and how to use all our resources more efficiently."

If this is not done, he said, Canadians may have to give up land used for parks and golf courses and use it for agricultural purposes.

Paper Scarce

OTTAWA (CP) — The supply of fine papers used in book production threatens to fall short of demand this year and there is little hope paper companies can increase output, an industry department official said Tuesday.

Amid pressure from publishers for government controls on paper exports and prices, officials are to meet paper company executives this week to assess the industry's outlook.

Sources refused to say whether export controls are being considered.

Farm Body Asks Fight on Pipeline

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — The Ontario Federation of Agriculture has appealed to Premier William Davis to intercede on its behalf to change the federal government's planned oil-pipeline route to Montreal from Sarnia, Ont.

Federation president Gordon Hill said in an interview Tuesday that he has asked the premier in a letter "to use his influence with Ottawa to change their mind about the route."

Mr. Hill, a beef producer in nearby Bayfield and head of the 18,000-member, provincial farm organization, said the route for the $175-million, 513-mile pipeline threatens prime agricultural land.

Valuable topsoil is endangered in the 66-foot width required for the trench and patterns of drainage can be adversely affected, he added.

"Individual farmers would have to make separate agreements with the pipeline company for the replacement of topsoil and for the correction of damages.

"At best, he is compensated for his damages," Mr. Hill said.

Meanwhile, a spokesman for Interprovincial Pipelines Ltd., which will build the pipeline, said the farmers' fears are unfounded because the company is required by law not to interfere with either the productivity or drainage of farmland.

The spokesman said the pipeline will affect about 3,300 acres in Ontario and rejected statements by provincial Agriculture Minister William Stewart last weekend that as many as 10,000 acres of prime land might be lost to the pipeline.

Of the 3,300 acres, the spokesman added, 300 acres are along an Ontario Hydro right-of-way and 750 acres are through rocky terrain in eastern Ontario "neither of which is farmland."

Liberals Win

NORTH VANCOUVER, B.C. (CP) — The Liberals barely retained their North Vancouver-Capilano seat in the British Columbia legislature as Gordon Gibson Jr., a former aide to Prime Minister Trudeau, won a 62-vote victory over Social Credit candidate Ron Andrews in a byelection Tuesday.

His win gives the Liberals five seats in the 55-seat British Columbia legislature. Social Credit has 35 seats, the Conservatives have two and the New Democratic Party government has 38.

Madawaska Conference Cancelled by Hydro

TORONTO (CP) — Michael Cassidy, New Democratic Party member for Ottawa Centre, said Tuesday that a meeting between him and top Ontario Hydro officials scheduled for Tuesday to discuss the controversial Madawaska River dam was cancelled.

Hydro Chairman George Gathercole arranged the meeting last week with Mr. Cassidy, Hydro vice-chairman Arthur Evans and general manager Douglas Gordon, Mr. Cassidy said.

However, Mr. Cassidy said, Mr. Evans's secretary told him the meeting has been cancelled indefinitely." No reason was given, he said.

Mr. Cassidy is fighting Hydro's proposed $78-million Misses dam at Arnprior, west of Ottawa, to control erosion on the Madawaska River. Parts of 69 properties on the river might be expropriated, and last week local politicians and farmers angrily confronted Energy Minister Darcy McKeough who refused to reconsider the plan.

Bitter Blow

IPSWICH, England (CP) — A Suffolk brewery is to cease production of what it calls its "working man's bitter"—a brew since 14 cents a pint cheaper than "best bitter." The brewery blames Britain's power crisis, which the government claims has been brought about largely by intransigent workers banning overtime in the coal mines.

Lewis Fears Ontario to Build Playground for Rich Americans

TORONTO (CP) — Stephen Lewis, leader of the New Democratic Party, said Tuesday he fears the province will proceed with a project to create a year-round resort playground in northeastern Ontario that will cater to rich United States residents at $25 a day.

Mr. Lewis called on the province to make public any plans it has for the resort that will centre on the 16-town area of New Liskeard, Haileybury and Cobalt in the Temiskaming district of northeastern Ontario.

The NDP leader, who flew over the area during a northern tour last weekend, told a news conference he opposes Maple Mountain, to the west of the tri-town area, as the site of the resort.

The provincial government has indicated that Maple Mountain is one of several sites being considered.

No details of the project have been made public although Mr. Lewis produced figures that he said were obtained from feasibility studies done by the ministry of industry and tourism.

"It's just not tolerable that so important a proposal be dealt with on the basis of gossip and rumor," Mr. Lewis said.

Mr. Lewis said his information is that the Maple Mountain project would cost $66 million in private and public funds and produce about 600 jobs, most paying only minimum wages.

He said because the resort would be self-contained, there would be no economic benefits for surrounding communities.

He said one feasibility study showed that the resort at Maple Mountain would have to charge high fees, starting at $30 to $50 a day.

Mr. Lewis said he prefers a less-expensive scheme to be located at Monk Mountain, east of the town, at a rate half of the planned for Maple.

Only the elected officials in the area support Maple, Mr. Lewis said, because "they feel this is all the government will offer them."

Mr. Lewis also suggested Ojibway Indians in the area may have rights to the mountain which he said is sacred historical ground to the Ojibway band.

Tractor-Trailer Tries Tricky Turn

It took a few tries but this massive tractor-trailer carrying a concrete beam finally negotiated a tricky turn onto 401 Tuesday. After tieing up traffic for several minutes, the vehicle managed to make the turn with only minor casualties. Reflector posts were bent to the ground as the tractor-trailer climbed the curb.

57.6 Miles Need Work

Reconstruction of Sidney St. Heads Proposed Road Program

Reconstruction on Sidney Street south from College to Tracey to a four-lane artery will cost an estimated $421,000.

That was the estimate placed on the road project including storm sewer installation in a report from City Engineer Wilbur Purcell to city council Monday.

The report, together with proposals from Mayor Robin Jeffrey outlining the need for roadway upgrading and methods of financing was referred to the traffic and light committe for consideration and recommendation to council.

Proposed roadway work on Sidney Street College to north to Tracey will cost an estimated $286,000 with storm sewer costs of $148,000 being the total to $922,000. Estimated subsidies from the Ministry of Transportation and Communication amounting to $152,350, will reduce the amount to be debentured to $279,750.

Mayor Jeffrey said planning for the four-lane roadway was completed and if an objection to the reconstruction of sidewalks could be overcome construction could get under way this year.

Total estimated cost to the corporation is $187,671.40 with cost to the abutting landowners being $92,078.

In her submission to council, Mayor Jeffrey asked that council approve the principle for an expanded road building program that would be in addition to the five-year capital works program planned for the years 1973-1977.

She said the need for such a program had been proved by requests for such action from citizens and a needs report from the city engineer.

The city engineer's report showed that 2.9 miles of four-lane major streets, 15.8 miles of two-lane major streets and 39.3 miles of residential streets were deficient or would be deficient within the road building program period.

Mayor Jeffrey said that an expanded program of road reconstruction had been her desire and that of council members during the last municipal election campaign.

She asked for council concurrence for an additional road rebuilding program be financed by debenturing the landowners local improvement costs and taking amounts annually from the city's reserve fund and matching it with an amount from the current budget.

Mayor Jeffrey asked that reconstruction of Sidney Street north from College be the first priority under the additional road building program.

The reasoning behind the suggested Sidney Street priority was that the necessary field work for the project was completed and the present narrow artery now being used as an arterial road was dangerous. The dangers of the street had been outlined in a report earlier this year by Police Chief Douglas Crosbie.

City Manager Albert Elliott, in a report to council, noted that capital expenditures out of current revenue as a percentage of general city expenditures had been allowed to decrease from 7.8 per cent in 1969 to 2.81 per cent in 1973.

He said it was sound municipal financing management to provide substantial capital expenditures out of current revenue. Such expenditures increase the amount that can be spend for capital purposes as debenture interest charges are avoided to the extent that current revenue is used as a source of some capital funds.

The city manager's view is that a minimum of five per cent of general municipal expenditure should be allowed each year for capital expenditures out of current revenue.

If this practice had been carried out in 1973, an additional $500,000 in capital work could have been carried out.

UCS Board Is Formed

An advisory board, composed of presidents of United Way participating agencies has been formed to bring recommendations as to courses of action to community bodies.

At a joint meeting between the United Community Services agency review committee and representatives of United Way agencies, Monday, the advisory board aims and object was formulated.

Ted Kelly, review committee chairman, said the new board must still be ratified at the UCS's annual meeting next week.

Kelly, explained Mr. Kelly, today, the proposed board's aims will be as follows:

— To safeguard the interests of United Way agencies.

— To promote unity among those agencies by providing a method and an opportunity for communication.

— To provide the agency review committee with a body to refer matters to, other than directly to UCS board of directors.

All members of the new board would also become ex-officio members of the UCS board of directors, without voting rights. The board would meet four times a year.

Northern Electric Profits Increased

MONTREAL — In spite of heavy losses in Microsystems International Ltd., a consolidated subsidiary, Northern Electric Company Ltd. has reported profits of $32,000,000 for 1973. Consolidated sales for the year totalled $612,821,000.

This compares with sales of $534,313,000 and profits of $20,098,000 in 1972.

Earnings per share, based on the weighted average number of shares outstanding, were $1.63in 1973 as compared with $1 cents in 1972.

John C. Lobb, president and chief executive officer of the company, said the sharp earnings improvement was due chiefly to four factors.

He said for the first time in the company's history the switching division operated to capacity while the transmission division introduced a number of adapted products.

Other factors for the record year were the high demand for Northern products in the U.S.A. and overseas while Sedco, Northern's wholly owned distribution subsidiary, also reported significantly improved sales.

Microsystems International Ltd. reported a net loss in 1973 to $10,146,000 on sales of $29,475,000 as compared with a net loss of $4,193,000 on sales of $14,303,000 for 1972.

Microsystems is a major manufacturer of semiconductors and integrated circuits for the consumer and telecommunications industries.

Ellis Would Co-operate

Indication of Inquiry Into UIC Applauded

Jack Ellis today says he applauds an indication from Manpower Minister Robert Andras that the minister is considering an inquiry into the federal Unemployment Insurance program.

And remarks made by the minister in a speech Tuesday in Quebec prove the validity of criticisms the Hastings MP has been levelling at the UIC in recent months, said Mr. Ellis.

Since November the MP has been calling for an inquiry into the Unemployment Insurance Commission, charging it with administrative chaos.

In his attacks, he quoted government documents — source of which later came under RCMP investigation.

Mr. Andras told the Canadian Construction Association in Quebec City he is considering setting up a commission of inquiry to study the operation of the UIC program. He said reports from the UIC are conducting a review of the Unemployment Insurance Act to see what kind of legislative changes could solve some of the program's problems.

The minister admitted that the new program, enacted in 1971, had created administrative problems because the UIC was not adequately equipped to provide service to persons who genuinely need help, or to seek out those illegally receiving benefits.

But he indicated at a press conference later that the full story of the corrective measures taken last year would be placed before Parliament by his department within a month and he is "not enthusiastic" about the need for an independent inquiry.

Most of the criticisms levelled against us a year ago even six months ago were valid," he said.

"But the administration has been tightened and criticisms have less validity today. We have a year's experience, a basis for review, and we are studying the legislation for ourselves. I'm not enthusiastic about a commission of inquiry, but we may look at the possibility again after an analysis of our review."

In Belleville, Mr. Ellis said the review was being carried out by experts of the UIC which had created the administrative problems in the first place, and therefore was "not qualified" for such a task.

Although the minister still appeared to be "waffling" about an inquiry, Mr. Ellis nonetheless said he applauded the indication that one could be forthcoming.

"If he's sincere about an inquiry it should be mentioned in the next Throne Speech. All the information I have would be placed at the disposal of such a commission," said Mr. Ellis.

Mr. Andras' remarks about the validity of criticism had proved it true, he said. "I see shooting my mouth off in the past few months," said the MP.

In Quebec Mr. Andras said changes in the administrative procedures and increasing benefit costs have resulted in 250,000 claim disqualifications in 1973 — four times as many in 1972.

But many employers, including many construction firms, still feel the program creates problems for them in the administration of claims.

Recently OCA president Henry de Kopje presented a brief to Mr. Andras suggesting a commission of inquiry might help find solutions.

"It is clear that some solutions must be found," Mr. Andras said, "but the question is what really is the problem.

He did not agree with employers who blame UIC and other programs for their difficulties in finding workers, saying the same problems exist in other western countries.

The minister said he did not want to suggest that the 250,000 persons disentitled or disqualified from receiving benefits were cheating the program but said the problem had given, and continues to give the UIC "quite a headache."

And he added that employers were also sometimes guilty of bending the UIC regulations to their benefit by dealing with their employees to fire them instead of giving them paid holidays or the promise they will be rehired after UIC benefits complete with unemployment insurance payments, was over.

Banquet Food Samples Studied

Area public health authorities are still awaiting the results of tests on food samples not provided at the banquet after which several people were reported ill.

Dr. C. R. Lenk, Hastings and Prince Edward counties health officer, said Tuesday night specimens of food served at the banquet at Trenton Chamber of Commerce were being provided to the provincial public ministry regional laboratories in Kingston.

Dr. Lenk personally collected samples of food. "Immediately they were informed of the situation after the banquet Saturday. A number of people were ill," said Trenton Memorial Hospital for gastroenteritis. A public health inspector was assigned to investigate following reports from the hospital and physicians, said Dr. Lenk.

"The matter is under thorough investigation," said Dr. Lenk.

The food was prepared by a local caterer for the dinner at Trenton Country Club.

Squash Club Tops for Month

The permit, valued at $75,000, was for the club structure at 100 Station Street. Construction is now under way.

Total permit value for the month was $240,500, and included three new single family dwellings. Permits for alterations and renovations made up the balance of the month's building list.

Apartments Big Concern At First Plan Meeting

By AL ZABAS
Staff Reporter

Apartments. We know some people want them. We know they're necessary in areas of Belleville. But must they be built in our backyards?

This, in part, was the concern citizens of the city's southeastern sector expressed Tuesday, during the first of a series of four public meetings called to discuss the Belleville draft official plan.

Expected heavy traffic flow along a proposed arterial road — the extension of Bradgate to Haig Rd. — and the alleged unavailability of sufficient parkland in the Moira planning district came under fire from some of the 100 people in attendance.

Part of the audience was members of Concerned Homeowners in Adolus, a ratepayers group representing citizens in the Sunny Park South planning unit. Quite Planning Board members, the mayor, and city aldermen were also present.

The four meetings were called by the planning board to gather public reaction to Belleville's draft official plan — a document that will guide development in the city in the coming years.

Greatest among the areas of public concern was the proposed high density of an area roughly bounded by the city limits, Whalen Court and the Bradgate Rd. extension, Highway 2, and Elizabeth Cres.

Residents with the area to remain primarily composed of single family dwellings, and exclude multiple family row-houses, townhouses or walkups.

One resident pointed out a discrepancy in proposed optimum density figures as calculated in the draft plan document. For the Stanley Park South area.

According to the figure present population exits at 1,200 in Stanley Park South. Projected population is 1,800. However, she said, residential construction planned within a matter of months will provide available roughly another 250 units.

Estimating at least three people to a family, the building units would generate at some 750 people. This figure is larger than the draft plan's stated "practical capacity population" of 1,800 for the area, she claimed.

This being the case, she said, proposed higher density construction in the planning area's southeastern corner said, proposed higher density higher than estimated by planners.

Bert Kenny, Quinte Planning Board director, added that the population projection figures saying, "our city is optimistic is obviously off is this one."

As will all points raised by the public, Mr. Kenny said the proposals will be studied by the Stanley Park West and East planning units.

The proposed Bradgate Rd. extension and designation as an arterial road came under fire by some residents.

They claimed that what is now a quiet residential or rural area would be turned into one with a heavier traffic flow. This would not allow the retention of the character of a single family home area, one resident said.

However, said Mrs. Mostetih, there is a need in Belleville of a variety of housing units, both single family, horizontal multiples (such as rowhouse), and Belleville apartments.

Alarm Box

Belleville firefighters responded to the following call between Tuesday, 12 noon and Wednesday, 8 a.m.:

1:30 p.m. — north end of Coleman St., grass fire in garden, no damage.

9:06 p.m. — 285 Bridge St. East, hi-fi equipment caught fire, probable cause — cigarette in bed, smoke damage.

1:31 a.m. — 135 North Front St., pen left on griddle causing smoke, no damage.

Further, one audience member claimed the plan did not provide for adequate high density areas in which high-rise apartment buildings could be located.

He claimed the present Bridge and Alchemy Streets area could into a situation where a proposed highrise would have to be approved, saying such a precedent set by a developer could prove there is an obvious desire by the public for high-density housing forcing council's hand.

Planners will further study the draft plan's land allotment for highrises, said Jean Mostetih, planning board consultant with Totten, Sims, Hubicki Associates, a Toronto consulting firm.

The audience members objected to highrise apartment concentration in only a few areas, saying that it is suggested that highrises could be spread more-generally in the Hillcrest planning unit and in an undeveloped area south of Station St. but north of the Stanley Park West and East planning units.

The proposed Bradgate Rd. extension and designation as an arterial road came under fire by some residents.

They claimed that what is now a quiet residential or rural area would be turned into one with a heavier traffic flow. This would not allow the retention of the character of a single family home area, one observed.

However, said Mrs. Mostetih, there is a need in Belleville of a variety of housing units, both single family, horizontal multiples (such as rowhouse), and Belleville apartments.

City's Dead Elm Trees Fight Fuel Shortage

With official sanction, trees cut in city parks are helping warm Belleville-area homes these days.

But fuel and environment conservationists needn't have a limb in alarm.

No one's deliberately denuding civic greenbelts. And fuel problems haven't reached proportions already choking the savaging of shady city parkland.

It's been going on for years. In fact, ever since the city's parks department had to face up to Dutch elm disease. It's an old story that surprisingly — hasn't yet reached its conclusion.

The disease hit the Quinte area years ago — it first arrived in North America in the early 1930s — and by now has killed off most of the district's elms. In public areas — like Belleville's parks — it was found a wise precaution against accident to cut the stately old shade trees as they were ravaged by the beetles causing their fatal decline.

Surprisingly, some elms still remain.

Sadly, they too face the inevitable.

Tuesday, chainsaws rasped through the dying branches of East Riverside Park as parks workers went about felling trees already choked last summer for cautionary removal.

Ed Burleigh, parks foreman, points out the giveaway: Bark peeling from elm limbs show the disease has reached the end stage.

Once felled they're quickly sawn to log lengths — although larger trunks are kept for the park's fireplace and its own use including groundlevel seating around barbecue pits.

It's used for by people like James Haight of Corbyville, out at East Riverside with his stack Tuesday. Mr. Haight uses the logs to make his fuel oil stretch further.

The department has a list of people who want the dead wood and still receives "requests" for the smaller logs.

The city treasury also benefits, he says. The logs otherwise would have to be trucked to the city's Sidney township dump — which also has a reputation about how long each log must be before dumping is permitted. Thus, the work and transportation costs are saved.

He said that the tree-cutting activity is what it once was.

"We've got nearly all the big elms down now," says the foreman. "We started years ago and once we probably felled about 50 trees a year."

Now, the annual total averages out around 20.

Consultant Clarifies Density Definition

People are becoming more aware of requirements necessary for construction of apartment buildings or complexes in the city said Jean Wells Mostetih, planning consultant working on completion of Belleville's draft official plan.

"I think there was a glimmering that there has to be some location criteria for construction of apartments," said Mrs. Mostetih after the first of a series of four public meetings called to discuss the plan Tuesday.

Arterial roads to carry a heavy traffic flow must be present, as must parkland and other community facilities, she said.

Although east and Belleville residents do not want high density dwellings in their area, they appear to realize that apartments cannot be located in isolation.

"They can't all be in the Hillcrest area or in Thurlow township, east of the city," she said. Mrs. Mofletih insisted that there must be various kinds of housing available in the city.

During Tuesday's meeting, she attempted to dispel the confusion between density designations as outlined in the draft plan document and the zoning bylaw that will implement the plan once it is adopted by city council.

"When we're talking about density (permitting a maximum of 20 dwelling units per gross residential acre), we're talking about duplexes, triplexes and walkups," she said, "the gross acre includes roads, parking areas, parkland.

But when one speaks of zoning, planners become more specific she explained. Lots and dimensions, calculated in feet, are then taken into account. This is not done through the draft official plan document which only generally outlines areas of permissible construction.

Once the draft plan is again revised and adopted by city council, Quinte Planning Boar; professional staff and the consultant will begin work on the zoning bylaw.

Bert Kenny, QPB director, last night explained that the public will again have the opportunity to comment upon the bylaw. At present, two meetings have been scheduled for this purpose.

Islanders' Nystrom Fires 16th

Another Rookie Shines Through

By GLENN COLE
Canadian Press Staff Writer

When observers start reeling off the names of the top National Hockey League rookies, Tom Lysiak, Borje Salming, John Davidson and Denis Potvin are among the first to come to mind.

Lysiak has been at or near the top of Atlanta Flames' scoring list this year, Salming has been defence standout for Toronto Maple Leafs, Davidson has shone in nets for St. Louis Blues and Potvin, last summer's No. 1 draft pick, contributes to shine on the New York Islanders defence.

But there is another member of the Islanders starting to attract some attention: Theoren Robert Nystrom.

Nystrom scored once Tuesday night to bring his goal total to 16, tops among NHL rookies this year, as the Islanders defeated Minnesota North Stars 5-1 in one of two scheduled games. In the other, Montreal Canadiens edged St. Louis Blues 3-2.

Islanders 6 North Stars 2

Nystrom, a 21-year-old native of Kamloops, B.C., who was the Islanders' third pick in the 1972 amateur draft, has been on a scoring streak. Tuesday's goal was his fifth in his in four games as the Islanders continue their improved play.

Last Thursday, Nystrom scored three times in the third period as New York defeated Los Angeles Kings 4-2 and Saturday, he got the tying goal late in the third period as the Islanders battled to a 2-2 draw with Vancouver Canucks.

Gary Howatt, Billy MacMillan, Billy Harris, Germain Gagnon and Ed Westfall got the other goals for the Islanders Tuesday with Jean-Paul Parise and Jude Drouin replying for the North Stars.

Islanders goalie Glenn Resch, called up last week from Fort Worth of the Central Hockey League, played well despite being extremely nervous.

"I was more nervous tonight than I have ever been in my life," said Resch, a 25-year-old native of Moose Jaw, Sask.

"A goalie's nerves are just shredded away and everything is reflex."

The Islanders, who can pro-ject only two goalies in the NHL expansion draft this summer, called Resch up to see what he could do in the NHL.

"I sort of feel like an intruder coming up here," he said. "I know Gerry Desjardins and Billy Smith have been playing real well. I'm sure the team knows that, too, and the main thing you don't want to do is let your team-mates down. That's why this feels so great. The name of the game is winning, not tying or losing."

Royals, Remparts Are Big Winners

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Cornwall Royals and Quebec Remparts were big winners Tuesday night in the Quebec Major Junior A Hockey League and Trois-Rivieres Draveurs were big losers.

The Royals scored 10 times in the third period on 29 shots to defeat Drummondville Rangers 12-2 in Cornwall while the Remparts scored six unanswered goals in the second period en route to a 13-5 win over Sherbrooke Beavers.

Meanwhile Claude Dolbec, coach and general manager of Draveurs, announced he had fired all the members of his club after they dropped a 4-0 decision to Hull Festivals. The assistants were not revealed.

Gary MacGregor scored three goals and Dan Geoffrion, Bob Ferguson and Kevin Treacy added two each to lead Cornwall past Drummondville. Doug Chase, John Nazar and Dan Laginiski were the other Cornwall marksmen.

Gaetan Leganit and Claude Lavoie scored for the Rangers.

Daniel Beaulieu scored four goals and Richard Nantel added three as Quebec crushed Sherbrooke. Real Claudio added a pair of goals for the Remparts with Robert Sauve, Michel Lemaire, Guy Chouinard and Jacques Locas adding singles.

Fighting Saints Hot Again, Crusaders Victims This Time

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Minnesota Fighting Saints are back in contention for first place in the Cleveland Crusaders.

And veteran Gordie Howe of Houston Aeros continues to dazzle, much to the displeasure of New Jersey Knights.

The Saints, hot and cold throughout most of the World Hockey Association season, took their fourth victory in their last five games with a 6-3 decision Tuesday night over the Crusaders.

Once in contention for first place early last January, the Saints tumbled to fourth in the West Division with five straight defeats later in the month. In their last five games, however, they've climbed their opponents 30-12, including two wins in a row over the Crusaders.

Howe scored two goals—his 18th and 19th of the season—to lead the Aeros to a 4-0 triumph over the Knights, Monday night. The Aeros defeated the same club 7-1.

In other games, Vancouver Blazers defeated Edmonton Oilers 8-6 and Chicago Cougars defeated Winnipeg Jets 3-1.

New England Whalers still lead the East Division with 60 points, four more than Toronto Toros, and five ahead of Quebec Nordiques. Cleveland has 51 points, Chicago 47 and New Jersey 46.

In the West, Houston has 64 points followed by Winnipeg with 56, Edmonton 56, Minnesota 51, Los Angeles Sharks and Vancouver 40 each.

Sabres Outshoot 7

Mike Walton got his 32rd and 34th goals of the season and assisted on George Morrison's 25th, into an empty net at 19:24 of the final period, to pace the Saints before 3,828 fans.

Steve Carlson scored the other Minnesota goal, his 17th of the year and ninth in his last five games.

Aeros 4 Knights 0

The Aeros increased their home record to 19 wins, five defeats and two ties, thanks to Don McLeod's strong goaltending and Howe's two goals.

McLeod, 27-year-old native of Trail, B.C., picked up his second shutout of the year—compared with one last season—by stopping 24 shots, 13 in the final period before a crowd of 7,627.

Howe, who also has 51 assists, got his first goal at 11:30 of the second period, giving the Aeros a 2-0 lead. He added his 19th less than nine minutes later.

The 45-year-old right winger now has 873 career goals, 853 of those coming after 25 years with Detroit Red Wings of the National Hockey League.

Blazers 8 Oilers 6

Bryan Campbell, former star with Hamilton Red Wings of the Ontario Hockey Association Major Junior A series, had three goals and two assists for the Blazers before 9,637 spectators. He now has 18 this season.

Right winger Johnny McKendrie added five assists as the Blazers led 3-0 after the first period and 5-0 at the end of the second.

Cougars 3 Jets 1

The Cougars built five games in hand on the fourth-place Crusaders, scored two goals in the first period and one-in the second for their 32nd triumph in 67 games.

Goalie Rich Coutu, a rookie, turned in a strong performance with 20 saves. Ernie Wakely, in goal for Winnipeg, stopped 32 shots.

Goal with 69 Seconds Left Ties Canadians

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Dave Staffen's sixth goal of the game, with 69 seconds remaining, earned Ottawa 'Us an 8-8 tie with Kingston Canadians in Ontario Hockey Association Major Junior A action Tuesday before 2,700 fans.

Staffen capped a brilliant night with a quick wrist shot in the top corner from about 20 feet out to gain the tie. It brought his season total to 31 goals. The 19-year-old forward joined 'Us from Sudbury Wolves when the season was about two months old.

"I should have had a couple of more, but I'll settle for the tie," Staffen said after the game. "I've never even had a hat trick before but I've had a lot of two-goal games."

Coach Les Bowie, who had benched Staffen's line for most of the last four games because it hadn't played well, said Staffen had just been going through the motions until Tuesday.

"But that'll show you what the kid can do," Bowie said. "The kid's got a lot of potential if he wants to work and he certainly showed it tonight."

Staffen, in his last year of eligibility in junior hockey, is married with one child. He also has played for Kitchener and Hamilton.

Derek Smith and Dan Blair scored the other Ottawa goals.

Eric Brubacher led Kingston with three goals and Peter Driscoll added two. Greg Holst, Alex Forysth and Larry Murphy got the other goals.

The Canadians, who trailed 5-3 after one period and 6-4 after 40 minutes, outshot Ottawa 50-42.

In other games Tuesday, London Knights defeated Hamilton Red Wings 5-0 and St. Catharines Black Hawks fought to a 4-4 tie with Toronto Marlboros.

Blackhawks 4 Marlboros 4

In their homebrown game, the Hawks had 3-1 at the end of the first period. But the Marlboros came back to even the score on Brad Winter's goal in the second, then took a 4-3 lead in the third on goals by Bernie Johnston and Kevin Devine.

Gary McAdam scored an errant pass by Marlboros John Simkus to cut the margin to 4-3 and Sal Cuffaro notched the score on Dave Gorman's 36th goal of the season.

Also scoring for St. Catharines were Dave Saistan and Mark Dumesnil. The first Toronto goal was by Mark Napier.

Knights 2 Red Wings 0

In London, Bruce Aberhart recorded the first shutout by a London goaltender in four years as the Knights defeated the Red Wings.

Tom Rowe and Ron Zanussi scored for London in the second period.

Aberhart faced 27 shots, 12 of them in the third period.

The last shutout by the Knights went to Daniel Bouchard, now with Atlanta-Flames of the National Hockey League, who blanked Niagara Falls Flyers 11-0 in 1970.

The league resumes action Thursday when St. Catharines meets Peterborough and Otawa takes on Sault Ste. Marie.

Whalers Not Moving, At Least Right Now

BOSTON (CP) — New England Whalers, troubled this year by sagging attendance, are still tied to the Boston area and have no immediate plans to move elsewhere, says general manager Jack Kelley of the World Hockey Association team.

Reports earlier Tuesday said the Whalers, East Division leaders and defending WHA champions, had been sold to a Hartford, Conn., group which hoped to begin play in a new 16,000-seat civic arena scheduled to open there in January, 1975.

Kelley agreed he was not actively interested in the Whalers, but so far all we've had is preliminary talks and most of the discussion has concerned playing exhibition games and part of the schedule there next year."

"As of this moment, there's nothing concrete about our discussions with the Hartford people," Kelley said. "You know that whenever rumors start going around these stories are bound to come out."

Stanley Schindler, director of the downtown council of Hartford, said his group was negotiating with the Whalers but talk of the sale was premature.

Bears Record Come from Behind Win

SMITHS FALLS, Ont. (CP) — Smiths Falls Bears gave away a 4-0 early lead Tuesday then came back to nip Brockville Warriors 7-6 to grab a share of first place in the Central Junior B Hockey League.

They now are tied with Nepean Raiders and Gloucester Rangers atop the six team league with Pembroke Lumber Kings four points behind them.

The Warriors went ahead 2-0 in the first period and led 4-1 after two. But the third period belonged to Smiths Falls.

George Thomson and Brian Johnston scored two goals each in the final period to pace the victory after Des Allen had opened their only goal in the second. Barry Kerfoot and Don Robertson scored the other Smiths Falls goals.

Rick Bordeleau scored twice for Brockville, a distant fifth in league standings, while Ron Ferguson, Peter Culp, Wayne Menichan and Bob Summers contributed single goals.

Next scheduled league action is Thursday when Pembroke is in Gloucester.

'Pistol' Holstered

ATLANTA (AP) — Atlanta Hawks coach Cotton Fitzsimmons Tuesday suspended guard (Pistol) Pete Maravich, No. 2 scorer in the National Basketball Association, "for disciplinary reasons." The suspension is indefinite, Fitzsimmons said. The suspension is believed to be connected with a near-scuffle Sunday in a Hawks game at Houston, in which Maravich was assessed a technical foul in the first half.

Intelligencer Bonspiel Winners

Lambert Takes Intell Bonspiel

By MIKE BRADSHAW
Sports Staff

"It was a terrific finish to a fabulous bonspiel," said Sally Lambert, skip of the Grand Champion rink at the Intelligencer Ladies Curling Bonspiel.

Sally's description of the finish of the bonspiel were both about as accurate as they came following last night's Championship matches for the two day event.

"This has to be the most competitive curling I've curled even in this district," added Sally.

Lambert has been skipping a rink in the Intelligencer competition every year since 1966 and her victory last night was the first championship she had won in the eight years she has been participating.

Her rink this year was the same as last year's, with Mary Knuth at vice, Kaye Davidson, second and Benita Murphy, lead. Knuth, her vice, has been working with her for the past eight years, while the second and lead have only been with the rink for one year. Lambert's rink curls out of the Napanee Curling Club.

Sally had to best out some stiff competition to take the top honors, but "the toughest" she said, was the Helen McCorquodale rink in the finals.

McCorquodale's rink, consisting of Betty Walmsley, vice, Bertie Dyble second, and Shirley Coe, lead, work out of the Quinte Curling Club, host club for the Spiel.

"We just barely made it past two rinks to get into the final," added Lambert, "and it was an uphill battle against Helen (McCorquodale) all the way."

Twice in the final game it appeared as though McCorquodale's rink was going to take the championship.

After three ends, the Quinte rink was 5-3, but the Napanee rink came back in the fourth with one and in the fifth with two to make it 5-4.

In the sixth, the McCorquodale rink went up three, to 8-5, when Helen, the skip, made a fantastic double on the last rock of the end.

Napanee still had no intentions of being counted out, taking one in the seventh and three in the eighth to tie the score at 8-8 after the regulation number of ends.

Then came the unbelievable ninth.

Both rinks jammed rocks outside the 12 foot ring, making it impossible for either to hang one anywhere inside the 12 foot. For the Belleville rink, however it gave them golden opportunities to raise one into the middle.

Napanee had one rock laying on the inside of the 12 foot circle and even though the McCorquodale rink tried three consecutive times to raise, it didn't work. The rock which won the end and the championship turned out to be the one laying nine feet from the button.

Jane Ann McCow, representing the Intelligencer, was on hand to present the awards immediately following the extra end.

As to the success of the tournament, well, over 100 people stayed to watch the final event of the bonspiel and that event ended until 12-45 a.m. setting a new record for the longest Intelligencer Bonspiel.

Louise Halpin, Chairman of Bonspiels for the Quinte Curling Club, credited the success of the event to "the friendly attitude that everyone had. There were some people who it didn't know each other when it started, but when it was over everyone knew everyone else."

Prizes were alloted to eight other rinks, besides the two in the final of the Grand Championship.

Second Event winner was also a Napanee rink, this one skipped by Marj Pearce with Ev Gulet as second, June Dickson, vice, and Bea Robin, lead.

Winner of the third event was Lorna Bennett's rink from the Quinte Curling Club. Mary Livingston, Jean Quincey and Helen Lewis played vice, second and lead respectively.

Consolation winners was Carol Appleton's rink, from Kingston Curling Club. Faye Gardner was vice, Joan Reid, second, and Carol Moe, lead.

Runner-up in the second event was a Quinte Curling Club rink. Wyn Maund, skip, Marg Boak, vice, Mary Lou Letersky, second, Madge Cowley, lead.

In the third event, runner-up, was Betty Reid's rink, from Kingston-Cataraqui Curling Club. Isabelle Donaldson was vice, Nancy Watts second and Jessie Wallace lead.

Consolation runner-up was from Kingston-Cataraqui Curling Club. Kay O'Neil skipped the rink with Betty Milne as vice, Gerry McDonald, second and Joan Shy, lead.

Semi-finalists in the first event were Marihel Clare's event team, Marihel Clare's rink from the Quinte Curling Club and Judy Breen's rink from the Kingston Curling Club.

Meads Prove Worth

In the other games played in the league, the Intelligencer downed Constellation 4 - 1 and Chuckwagon Foods were shoutout by Stanley Structures 4 - 0.

Mike Coogan, Wayne Levesque, and Russ Herrington all shared in the Mead Johnson scoring over Golden Mile Restaurant, with Vern Whalen in the nets to record the shutout.

Keith Park and Ted Rowlands each collected two assists.

The Intell received two goal performances from Chuck Powell and Jim McGuire enroute to their victory over Constellation, with Warren Hay's shutout being broken by Ron Mitchell.

captured top honors in the two day Intelligencer Women's Curling Bonspiel. The Napanee rink went undefeated in four draws to win the Bonspiel. Members of the champion rink from left to right are Benita Murphy, lead, Kay Davidson, second, Marie Knuth, vice-skip, and Sally Lambert (far right). Jane Ann McGraw, representing The Intelligencer, presents the trophy to Sally.

Huskies Even Series

FRANKFORD (Special) — The Frankford Huskies evened their Lakeshore Junior C playoff series with Port Perry at one game apiece last night here, edging the visitors 8-6.

Gary Payne fired five goals to lead the Huskies win, with singles going to John Locke, Ken Jackett and John Masterson.

Port Perry outshot the winners 38-36 in the game, and took ten penalties to Frankford's eight.

The Huskies return to Port Perry tomorrow night for the third game of the set, with the fourth game scheduled for Saturday night in Frankford. Game time Saturday night will be 7 p.m.

Lions Lead 2-1 In Series

With the help of outstanding goaltending by Jeff Merrill, the Belleville Lions' Midget Majors took the third game of their best of five OMHA playoff series with Peterborough at the Memorial Arena last night, defeating the Lift-lock City crew 5-1. The locals now lead the series two games to one.

Merrill played an excellent game in the nets for the Lions', as he had done in the first two games of the series.

The only Peterborough marksman to beat Merrill one past him in the first period of last night's game.

Ross Lawrenceson came back to even the score for Belleville just a minute later, with Rick Barbeau scoring the eventual winning goal at 18:10 of the first period.

Belleville scored the final three goals of the game in the third period into the open Peterborough net. Gary Thompson scored two of the three, while Peter McBride scored the other.

QH Awards Announced

The Quinte Hockey League has announced its awards for the 1973-74 season, as selected by the players in the league.

Selected as Most Valuable Player in the league was Kevin Allen, of Stinson Construction. Allen finished the regular season with 29 scoring points, tied with Ted Waite of Reid's Dairy. However had more goals than Allen, with the crown going to Waite.

Dave Horwood, also of the Stinson team, was chosen the league's most Gentlemanly Player, with Reid's Jason Morris the league's Most Improved Player.

Bad Outweighs Good in Stamps' Dollar Tally

CALGARY (CP) — The bad news outweighed the good for Calgary Stampeders when the financial tally for the Western Football Conference club's 1973 season was released Tuesday.

Revenues for the season reached an all-time high at $1,172,459. So much for the good news.

The sad tidings was a record expense account totalling $1,206,500, giving the club a net loss of $32,031.

In comparison, the 1972 season saw revenues of $1,069,716 recorded with an expense of $1,052,980 for a net gain of $16,836. Club president Tony Ananiuso told shareholders that even with last year's addition of 2,500 seats, constant capacity crowds of 30,000 at Macmahon Stadium will not cover expenses this season.

Attendance in' 1973 was 85.4 per cent of capacity.

"If we are to continue with a competitive and winning club, an increase in ticket prices is almost inevitable," he said. "In addition, other forms of revenue must be generated to offset the rapidly increasing inflationary costs and the additional competition for players by the proposed world football league."

Revenues in 1973 were made up mainly of $827,807 from league-game gate receipts, $176,509 from Grey Cup, playoffs and gate equalization and $118,459 from exhibition games.

Coaches' and players' salaries and travelling expenses accounted for $651,803 of the expenses followed by $129,808 for park rental.

A minor bright point was that the team had retained earnings of $270,236.

General manager Rogers Leahy noted that Calgary, Edmonton and Saskatchewan provide the cheapest fan entertainment within the structure of the nine-team Canadian Football League. But with the 16-per-cent discount plan the Stampeders offer to early season ticket buyers, they have the cheapest ticket prices in the league.

A study group has been delegated to assess the team's financial situation and whatever form the price increase will take will depend on the group's findings, he said.

Spitfires Bomb Americans

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Windsor Spitfires outshot Michigan Americans 39-19 Tuesday as they won a Southern Ontario Junior Hockey League game 15-1 in Windsor.

And Scott Miller scored three goals for the Spitfires, the first goal—his 60th for the season—breaking the league goal-scoring record set in the 1971-72 season by Bob Dobek of Detroit Junior Red Wings.

In the only other game, Niagara Falls Flyers defeated Welland Sabres 6-3.

Steve Keech also scored three goals for Windsor. Hugh Mitchell and Joe Nelles scored two each. Bill McCreary, Glen Imrie, Darryl Kerr, John Pavella and Dan McCourt added one each. Darryl DiPace scored for Michigan.

In Welland, the Niagara Falls victory gave coach Bob Hurtubise, who took over the Flyers two weeks ago, some personal satisfaction.

Hurtubise had coached the Sabres but after a disagreement with general manager Larry Cooney, he resigned and was picked up by the Flyers.

Boyle May Quit

MELBOURNE (Reuter) — Australian woman sprinter Raelene Boyle, double sprint gold medallist at the Christchurch Commonwealth Games, threatened to quit track and field today if she is not allowed to run in Canada.

Last Saturday, Raelene, 22, was invited to run in the Toronto Star Maple Leaf indoor games and other races in Canada and the United States, and was to have left Australia today or Thursday.

But the Australian Amateur Athletics Union (AAAU), whose sanction she needs to allow her to compete overseas, says she cannot go unless she is accompanied by a manager whose expenses would have to be paid for by Canada, and not until a detailed itinerary is supplied.

Raelene objected to such an escort, saying: "What do they think I am, a three-year-old? I'm extremely disappointed.

"If I can't go overseas, I'll quit running this season and I won't compete in the national titles."

Track and field officials say it is unlikely the Canadians will agree to pay for a chaperone, but no reply has been received to an urgent cable sent Tuesday by the AAAU.

Television's Influence Worries Broadcaster

The role of television in modern society: Is it an aimless medium, a babysitter of children, the greatest advertising medium ever known, a huckster, a teacher of morals, and educator?

Television was both praised and panned in these terms in a speech delivered recently by Roy Bonisteel, host of the CBC show Man Alive, to the annual board of governors of Albert College banquet at the Four Seasons. The banquet is given each year by the board for the teaching staff of Albert College.

Also brought up in Mr. Bonisteel's speech was the position of the church in trying to reach the young people today.

"The average child today spends more time in front of a television set than he does in classes at school or in games outside. More time than eating, than reading, than anything except sleeping," said Mr. Bonisteel.

"Part of the problem is that it's hard for us to hear. We have become immune to essential information. So the truth is so mixed up with the lie, not only is it hard to find .. we have come to like the lie.

"We are indoctrinated by television and educated by it from womb to tomb," said Mr. Bonisteel, who lives in Frankford.

"The child's largest and most penetrating environment is that which is offered to him by broadcasters and advertisers. His brain and emotions are shaped by the world that television selects for him. For everyone in general, but particularly for children, observing the unreal world of television is their central day-to-day mental experience.

"Television is a new medium but it has aged prematurely. It lacks a sense of aim or purpose," said Mr. Bonisteel.

"The technicaid devices, the coaxial cable, color...all have developed at tremendous speed, but the medium itself has remained bland and for great promise of yesterday has not been fulfilled.

"There are many in the elevision industry who want to work with ideas—but they are outnumbered by those who want to sell soap. Television at the greatest advertising medium ever known," said Mr. Bonisteel.

"Generally speaking, the mass media in Canada is not really up to much. It is mostly directed at the middle ranks and upper classes at least those with enough money to buy what the media's advertisements have to sell.

"There is nothing wrong with this as long as we don't go around pretending we are serving the public as a whole.

"Our concern is that people are losing faith, that the media, not only broadcasting, can be rguch more than a backdrop. More and more people are becoming disillusioned with the mass media and rightly so. The notion is false that the facts lie entirely with the broadcasters. If the mass media is going to change, it's the viewers and listeners and readers who will have to change it.

"Much of the trouble between the media and the public stems from the fact that people are profoundly ignorant of how newspapers and broadcasting operate. I advocate a course in Mass Media Education in every elementary school in Canada starting as early as kindergarten. Students in all our schools should be taught early how to read newspapers and listen to radio and television," said the television personality.

"Even at the Grade 6 level, the kids are far ahead of their parents in understand ng the communications process. Very few parents know the media well enough, or care enough to take the time to sit down with their kids and evaluate what they are seeing.

"Instead of using television as a means of communication within the family... it has become the babysitter, the destructor, the teacher of morals and the one evening the family to which the child can always relate and be accepted."

Turning toward his other field, religion, Mr. Bonisteel said that the church, the educational system, the mass media, all must face changing future. "The dynamic common to all of this is change."

"We must ask ourselves, has the church anything to say to young people today. If yes, how can we say it. The problem is a credibility gap.

"Young people disbelieve the church today. They believe in action and the church is not where the action is.

"Young people are impatient. The church moves slowly. There are even some young people who think church union is irrelevant."

"Youth is turning its back on the institutionalized church in alarming numbers. This is a reaction to the fact that over the years they have never really been given the opportunity to be a part of it," said Mr. Bonisteel. He pointed out that our presbytery or conference meeting "took more like a reunion of Civil War veterans." The church was never meant to be an old man's club."

In closing, he gave his definition of communication. "Communication's function is to enable men to reach out to one another in loving concern."

ROY BONISTEEL

Celebrities Critical of CBC

TORONTO (CP) — A brief calling for the CBC to improve its television programming or pose its various licences has been submitted to the Canadian Radio-Television Commission (CRTC) by a group of almost 70 persons, many of them prominent in entertainment circles.

Kirwan Cox, a Toronto film maker who formed the group called The Committee on Television said Monday night:

"We believe in public broadcasting and we don't th nk the CBC is fulfilling its job . . . and is incapable of reforming itself."

The CBC carries too much United States television pro gramming, he said, and "not enough Canadian feature films.

The 187-page brief, Saving the CBC, will be heard when the CRTC opens hearings in Ottawa Feb. 18 on renewal of CBC licences for radio and television.

The CBC licences come up for renewal every four years, said Mr. Cox. "It was a case of CBC is fulfilling its ... and make a statement now or wait another four years and put up with the mediocrity."

Among others who signed the brief were film-maker Alan King, Patrick Watson, formerly associated with the controversial CBC-TV program This Hour has Seven Days, and Robert Fulford, editor of Saturday Night magazine.

Feature Times

AT THE PARK — In Cinemascope. We presume that's the reason the picture is so wide. Otherwise, from beginning to end, "The Spy With My Face" is a pretty ordinary spy thriller. Not up to the "Man From U.N.C.L.E." or "Get Smart, Please Times Three". A new kind of spy picture for the 70's. Rating: Fair. Running time for this picture is one of 5.25 hours. Suitable for persons 21 years of age and over.

Your Horoscope

By BERNICE BEDE OSOL

Thursday, Feb. 7

Aries (March 21 - April 19) Even though you may have other plans, keep your schedule flexible so you'll be available for an unusual invitation today.

Taurus (April 20-May 20) Something you've been waiting for for the home has suddenly affair may come down in price. Recheck ads and other sources.

Gemini (May 21-June 20) There is a unique solution to a problem that has been on your mind. Should the idea pop into your head, at least give it a try.

Cancer (June 21-July 22) An unexpected channel for extra funds will suddenly be made available. Treat the source confidentially.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22) Something you're involved in will make splendid progress if you try some new twists. Improvise in sluggish situations.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) You will be unexpectedly compensated for a past good deed. Someone you felt had taken things for granted didn't at all.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) Do avoid pitfalls, think back on a past experience similar to that facing you now. Use what is worthy, but add your new knowledge.

Scorpio (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) In pursuit of today's goals keep your trump cards close to your vest. Wait till the other guy makes his move, then make yours.

Sagittarius (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Your best ideas today are the ones that come to you with the least effort. Bunches are worth following tough.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) What you unselfishly do to help others will turn out to be equally helpful for you. Seek no special reward—what you get will be a bonus.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Misunderstandings will be much easier to arrive at today. You'll be willing to make compromises. So will the other party.

Pisces (Feb. 20-March 20) This is a good time to make creative changes around the house. Use the ideas you have that permit you to do much of the work yourself.

BIRTHS

LAPENOTTE — Linda and Larry Lapenotte are proud to announce the birth of their son, Jason Robert, at 7:42 p.m., Jan. 3rd, 1974 at the Belleville General Hospital. Weight 7lbs., 7½ ozs. A baby sister for Jason. Special thanks to Doctors Sinclair and Strachan and Nurses of the 5th floor.

BRASSERIA — Dr. and Mrs. John Brasseria (nee Jeanne Weiss) are pleased to announce the birth of their second daughter, Jennifer Louise, on January 18, 1974 in Ottawa. A sister for Christopher John. Mrs. A. Weiss.

IN MEMORIAM

HOLCROFT — In loving memory of a dear father, Harold L., who passed away February 6, 1973.
Sadly missed but I would give all we have to say.
Much, Dad, in the same old way,
Just be here and make me your baby.
To sit with you and chat awhile,
To you and have a cup of tea,
Cherish him with care,
If you'll only grant me the heart-
And
Tell you are his rarest chair.
— Always remembered by his son Rod, daughter-in-law Sharon and grandson Christopher.

FLUNDER — In loving memory of a dear brother and uncle, Harry, who passed away February 6th, 1972.
Three years have passed, dear brother,
Since you were called away,
Your loving smile we remember,
That sad and sudden day.
You suffered much, you murmured not,
We watched you day by day,
We cried and prayed that your dear
Would not be taken away.
— Ever remembered by Sister Doris, brother-in-law Arthur, nephew Eric and Ann and niece Cindy.

TYNE — In loving memory of a dear husband and father, Frederick Tyne, who passed away February 6, 1971.
Precious God forgive a silent tear,
A fervent wish our dad was here,
A thought of him in each prayer,
That he is safe, in God's loving care.
Dear God take a message,
To our father in heaven above,
Tell him we miss him,
And give him all our love.
— Sadly missed by son Timmy and daughter Debbie.

TYNE — In memory of my husband Alfred Tyne, who passed away suddenly February 6, 1971.
—Sadly missed by his wife Bertha.

RALTY — In loving memory of a dear husband, father and grandfather, Percy Ralty, Georgetown.
Our family circle has been broken
A link some from our chain,
But though we're parted for a
We know we'll meet again.
Some day we hope to meet you,
Some day we know we will,
We shall meet in a better land,
Where all is peace.
—Sadly missed by brother Harvey and sister Joan.

Tenners From Heaven

LONDON (CP) — Shoppers and motorists scrambled to grab a literal windfall when dozens of £10 notes floated down on a busy south London street. The benefactor was 25-year-old Carol Reynolds from Jamaica, who tossed away £1,500 ($4,000) "to spread love and happiness." Carol held back £200 for her fare back to the West Indies.

Luck of the Draw Doesn't Bother Mississauga Rep

TORONTO (CP) — Earle Morris isn't bothered by the luck of the draw which has bis rink meeting Joe Gurowka, highly-rated Mississauga representative in today's first round of the Ontario men's curling championship.

After all, the Morris crew will be posting a 30-game winning streak on the line in the opening match of the 10-rink round-robin competition at Toronto's East York Arena.

The Ottawa foursome—which also includes lead Cal Hegge, second Bill Erickson and third Peter Halme—last tasted defeat in December when defending Ontario champion Paul Savage of Toronto Scarborough Golf and Country Club eliminated Morris in the—provincial championship round at Kitchener.

The competition was scheduled to begin at 2 p.m. EST and also had Doug Palmer of St. Catharines taking on Glen Corner of Brampton. Vince Gelbpeas of CFR Trenton meeting Savage, Mac White of Burlington tackling Jim Currie of Pickering and Bill Lovelin of Toronto Thistle.

The winner will advance to the Canadian championship, starting March 4 at London, Ont.

Savage and Corner are the only skips returning from last year's competition.

The 36-year-old Savage is making his third trip to the Canadian final and his second in a row, a feat last accomplished by Bob Mann of Hanover in 1963-64. Savage also won the Ontario championship in 1976.

The Savage rink, which went undefeated in 12 successive games in 1977, will have Ron Green at lead, Ed Werenich at second and Bob Thompson at third—the same crew as last year.

Other members of Corner's rink will be lead Doug Reid, second Ron Heffman and third Jack Bryans. Corner had a 4-5 record last year.

Palmer's rink also rules consideration. Palmer—along with lead Dan Munroe, second Brian McQuiggan and third Al Rivers—didn't lose a game in club, division and inter-division playoffs leading to the Ontario competition.

The second round is scheduled tonight at 8 p.m. with Currie taking on Otto, Savage against Whale, Palmer going against Morris, Gallipeau playing Lovelin, and Corner meeting Gurowka.

Two rounds are also scheduled for Thursday and Friday with three to be held Saturday, the final at 8 p.m.

Three Goal Outburst Gives Leed 3-1 Victory

London Reuter — A three-goal outburst in a six-minute spun gave Leeds United a 3-1 win over Arsenal Tuesday and stretched their unbeaten run since the start of the First Division season to 28 games.

Leeds now is only two matches away from Burnley's 42-year-old league record of 30 successive games without defeat in one season.

In other First Division matches, Liverpool defeated Coventry and Norwich upset Queen's Park Rangers by identical 2-1 scores while Sheffield United blanked Wolverhampton 1-0. West Ham shocked Ipswich 3-1 and Southampton outscored Newcastle 3-1.

In the second replay of their fourth-round English Football Association Cup tie, Portsmouth finally managed to overcome Orient 2-0.

But for the second time in three days, Leeds had to fight back from a first-half deficit to beat a low-placed London club at home.

Arsenal went ahead in the 26th minute when Alan Ball ran on to a cross from Pat Rice to score. However, Leeds went through the second half, Peter Simpson put through his own goal and Scottish World Cup striker Joe Jordan scored twice in two minutes, heading in a centre from Billy Bremner and netting after a brilliant solo run.

At Liverpool, the home side went ahead through a 37th-minute penalty by Alec Lindsay and Kevin Keegan made it 2-0 12 minutes after half-time. Jim Blomer netted for Coventry seven minutes from the end.

In the upset of the day, last-place Norwich ended Queen's Park Rangers' run of 25 home games without defeat, spanning 13 months.

Trevor Howard started Norwich on the path to his first away win of the season with a 27th-minute headed goal and Ellnack John Benson made it 2-0 with a spectacular volley a minute later. Stan Bowles had Rangers' only goal.

Trevor Brooking was the star of a transformed West Ham side. His 32nd-minute shot hit a post and Ipswich back Mick Mills scooped the ball into his own net for the first goal. Five minutes later, Brooking gave John McDowell a perfect pass for a 2-0 lead and although Bryan Hamilton pulled one back in the 69th minute, Clyde Best put the outcome beyond doubt two minutes later with West Ham's third goal.

At Newcastle, the game ended on an explosive note with the visitors' Irish winger Tommy Cassidy being sent off for kicking an opponent seven minutes from time.

In the second replay of their fourth round F.A. Cup tie, Portsmouth finally managed to overcome Orient after clinch an away meeting with Nottingham Forest.

The Orient-Portsmouth marathon, staged at Crystal Palaces Selhurst Park ground, ended when Bobby Kellard netted a superb 27th-minute goal and Ron Davies added a second in the 86th minute.

Three Inducted Into Hall of Fame

CANTON, Ohio (AP) — Tony Canadeo, Bill George, Dick (Night Train) Lane and Lou (The Toe) Groza have been named to pro football's Hall of Fame, it was announced Tuesday.

Formal induction for the four players will be July 27 at the annual Pro Football Hall of Fame game here. The new inductees bring to 91 the number of players enshrined in the hall.

Canadeo, best known as the Grey Ghost, played in the Green Bay Packers offensive backfield from 1940 to 1952. The 5-foot-11, 195-pounder was used as a running back, quarterback, punter and kick returner.

George spent his pro career with Chicago Bears as a middle linebacker from 1952 to 1965, making the all-pro team eight times. The 6-foot-3, 230-pound George intercepted 18 passes, returning them 114 yards, and recovered 16 opposition fumbles during his career.

Lane, who never played college football, was signed by Los Angeles Rams in 1952 after being discharged from the U.S. army. He also played for Chicago Cardinals and Detroit Lions until retiring in 1965.

Groza, who also never played college football, was with Cleveland Browns from 1946 to 1967. He played in nine Pro Bowl games and in 13 league championship games with the Browns, scoring a record 1,608 points with his toe.

Red Wings Score 4-2 Victory

BRAINTREE, Mass. (AP) — Third-period goals by Len Fontaine and Rick Newell led Virginia Red Wings to a 4-2 come-from-behind victory over Boston Braves in the only scheduled American Hockey League game Tuesday.

Doug Gibson and Ron Roehm scored both of Boston's goals in the first period, but that ended their scoring for the game.

Virginia came back in the second period with goals by Larry Klewchuk and Fontaine's first goal of the night.

It was Fontaine again at 4:05 of the final period who put the Wings ahead to stay. He picked up a Lee Carpenter rebound off the boards and fired in an easy forehander.

Newell got the other Virginia goal at 6:49 of the third period on a power play after Boston's Bob Gryp went off for slashing.

Bristol to Handle A's?

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn. (AP) — Dave Bristol, Montreal Expos coach, says he would like to manage the world champion Oakland Athletics but isn't waiting by the telephone for a call from owner Charles O. Finley.

"I talked to Finley last fall, but we haven't discussed the job since," said Bristol, in Chattanooga Monday to address the local quarterback club.

He said he has signed to return to the Expos, but the club has assured him the contract will be cancelled if he is offered a major league managerial post.

"Since it's getting so late, I'm really not figuring on the A's anymore," he said. "I just don't know what Finley is going to do."

Oakland has been without a manager since Dick Williams quit at the end of the season to manage New York Yankees, a move thwarted when Finley held Williams to his contract with the Athletics.

Sharks Sold

NEWPORT BEACH, Calif. (AP) — Los Angeles Sharks of the World Hockey Association have been sold to Metro-Sports Associates of Detroit, league president Dennis Murphy said Tuesday.

Charles H. Nolton and Pete Shagena, Detroit industrialists, were announced as general partners in Metro-Sports.

No purchase price was reported.

"The Sharks will remain in Los Angeles," the new owners said in a joint statement. "It is a solid hockey team that has not reached its potential."

WINGS DROP MELLOR

DETROIT (AP) — Detroit Red Wings have assigned 24-year-old rookie defenceman Tom Mellor to their Edmonton farm club in the American Hockey League, the National Hockey League team announced Tuesday.

WFL Holds 2nd Round Of Draft

NEWPORT BEACH, Calif. (AP) — Lucius Selmon, George Sauer Jr., Woody Green and Sonny Stahller are the names the aspiring World Football League is talking about today.

Selmon, an all-America middle guard from Oklahoma, signed a three-year contract with Toronto Northmen.

Sauer, a pass catcher from Texas who retired from New York Jets, was reported signed by Boston.

Green, an all-America running back from Arizona State, had his draft rights traded to Memphis from Florida.

Stahller, who starred as quarterback for the University of Washington, has tentatively agreed to a contract with Southern California's entry, but hasn't signed yet.

These were many of the developments as the WFL held the second phase of its draft Tuesday.

"I spoke to Sonny on the phone and sent him a contract," said Curly Morrison, Southern California's general manager. "I think we have agreed to terms. He seemed enthusiastic and I think we may have something".

Stahller had a tryout with Los Angeles Rams of the National Football League last year, but was cut before the start of the regular season.

Selmon became the fourth outstanding collegian to sign a WFL contract, following Southern California's trio of James McAlister and Kermit Johnson, both UCLA running backs, and offensive tackle Booker Brown of the University of Southern California.

The decision by Sauer to come out of retirement came as a surprise. Once a favorite target of Joe Namath, Sauer quit in 1970 after a six-year career.

Selmon 6-foot-11, 240-rounder, was selected by the Northmen in the sixth round. The WFL conducted the first six rounds of the college draft two weeks ago, and rounds seven through 30 were held Tuesday.

John Harvey, outstanding running back last year with Montreal Alouettes of the Canadian Football League, was selected by the Northmen in the 22nd round.

In Toronto, general manager Leo Cahill, former coach of Toronto Arconauts in the CFL, said the Northmen would be interested in Ray Jauch as their head coach. Currently, Jauch is coach of Edmonton Eskimos in the CFL's Western Conference.

Jauch was mentioned several weeks ago as a candidate for a coaching job in the WFL, but he made no comment.

Ralph Goldston, former CFL player and later an assistant coach with Montreal, has advised the Northmen that he may be interested, Cahill said.

Cahill drafted 29 players Tuesday but he would not say if any, or all, would attend the Northmen's camp. Some were also drafted by NFL teams.

Ed Harrington, former CFL all-star defensive end with Toronto Arconauts, will be invited to the Northmen's camp. Harrington, 33, retired two years ago after developing calcium deposits in his leg.

Johnny F. Bassett, president of the Northmen, said the club has signed "three or four others unofficially."

Over-all, the WFL now has now drafted 422 players and president Gary Davison said he is confident many will be signed.

He added that he would be satisfied if one-third of the first-round choices were signed.

He believes the collegiate crop of 1973 is awaiting WFL offers before deciding whether to sign with the established NFL or CFL.

Davidson did say that about 100 players have been signed by the 12 teams.

There may be a delay in the WFL draft of present professionals. Originally set for late this month, it may be delayed to afford the teams the opportunities to sign their draftees.

Questions and Answers On Highway Travel

Ontario Motor League
Eastern Ontario Club

Question: When is the Quebec Winter Carnival in "Quebec City"?

Answer: The Quebec Winter Carnival will start February 17 and run to February 17. The opening parade begins in Lower Town with drums and bugles, marching girls and vividly colored illuminated floats wending their way along a three-mile course through narrow streets. The central figure of the parade is Bonhomme Carnaval, a seven-foot talking snowman escorted by a Queen and six Duchesses, chosen from the city's most attractive maidemoiselles.

It is a very gay carnival with people singing and dancing in the streets. There are many carnival events such as skiing, skating, snow-shoe races, curling championships, dog-sled derbies and motor cycle races on ice. There are also nightly dances and masquerade parties.

It is very difficult to get accommodation during the carnival and you may have to settle for a room in a boarding house. To find a place to stay contact carnival headquarters at 60 Rue d'Auteuil, Quebec City 4. Telephone 418-524-8481.

Many of OML members who have returned recently from Florida have had no trouble getting gas during the week. But it may be increasingly difficult to find it available on weekends - particularly on Sundays and holidays, and tips are at night throughout the week. In various parts of the country motorists will find some stations restrict the amount to be purchased. The Ontario Motor League advises motorists to drive on the op half 'of their tanks and fill up when they get to the half-full mark. It is better to travel the first of the month to Florida as the American service stations get their monthly quota the first of every month and some stations may have used it all up by the end of the month.

The speed limit is 55 miles an hour now in all states on the way to Florida except in New York State where it is 50 miles an hour and Georgia where it is 60 miles an hour. It can take you four days to reach Florida now instead of the usual three. We suggest starting out on Monday so that you reach Florida by Friday before the busy weekend, when every one tries to fill up on Saturday because stations are closed on Sundays. There are usually long lines at all service stations in Saturdays, so you may have to wait a long time. The best place to fill up in Florida, for premium, ranges from 44 cents to 54 cents a gallon. The average is 50 cents, up about 10 cents in the past six months.

Rationing is a real possibility if automobile use does not drop soon by at least 25 per cent. If rationing were to be put into effect, the U.S. government reports it would take at least two months from the time of the announcement to the actual implementation of a rationing program. This should give people travelling by car ample opportunity to return home without danger of being stranded.

The United States went on daylight saving time January 6, so when you cross the border it may be less confusing if you turn your watch ahead one hour.

The State of New York has enacted legislation that became effective February 1, with respect to residents and non-residents whose vehicles are registered in that State. In accordance with the non-resident requirement of the new no-fault law, we advise all our members who intend motoring in New York or any other no-fault state, to contact their insurance company before leaving to see if they have this coverage.

Twelve-year old David had spent his whole life with his family aboard the schooner 'Iris' in the South Pacific. When his father accepted a charter, he was delighted to go as cabin boy. When the passengers turn out to be up to no good, David is sure his sailing days are over.

YOGA FOR CHILDREN — Erica Cheki Hanney.

Interest in yoga is spreading to children. Here, in a fair quantity of pictures, children are taught to resemble creatures from rabbit to zeppelin. Clear drawings and directions illustrate the sixteen postures, which together work the entire body from head to toe.

ME TOO — Vera and Bill Cleaver.

Lydia and Lorna were twelve-year-old twin girls. But Lorna was different from her sister. She was an exceptional child, retarded from birth. Throughout one summer, Lydia tries to teach her sister where all other had failed. In her final acceptance of Lorna's way of life, Lydia reaches a new understanding.

STA BDOG—A. M. Lightner.

Set in the not too distant future, this is a story of a college boy whose dog has strange telepathic powers. Hoit feels sure his dog has been sired by a UFO, and events soon prove him right. An excellent story for older children.

RECIPES FOR ART AND CRAFT'S MATERIALS — Helen Roney Sattler.

Beginning doing craft work with children will find this book invaluable. Recipes are given for pastes, modeling compounds, paper machie, finger paints and other useful craft materials. Instructions are clear and will be readily understood by children.

VICTORIA AND THE CROWDED POCKET—Carolyn Sloan.

Mother Kangeroo kept a very crowded pocket, so her daughter Victoria left to find another place to live. She was tired of being covered with cheese and pricked by a cactus. A lively picture book for pre-schoolers.

NO DUCKS IN OUR BATHTUB — Martha Alexander.

Young David thought his mother was mean. No bugs in the apartment, no ducks in the bathtub, and only reluctantly would she allow him to keep 103 fish egs. But when the family returns from vacation the fish eggs provided a surprise.

THE POOH GET WELL BOOK — Virginia T. Ellison.

Peppered with quotations and pictures from Milne's stories and poems, this book contains ridd'es and activit'es for the sick child as well as simple recipes involving fruit juice, honey, etc.

Election Feb. 28

Heath Calls Vote; Miners May Work

LONDON (CP) — Hemmed in by threatening militant unions, Prime Minister Heath today called a snap election for Thursday, Feb. 28, and at the same time urged coal miners, due to strike Sunday, to postpone the walkout until the end of the campaign.

The Conservative leader, deciding to go to the polls 17 months before the end of his five-year mandate, is certain to make union militancy a central issue in the fight that is likely to be one of the most bitter in post-war history.

Joe Gormley, head of the miners' union, agreed that the strike should be deferred because of "the current climate" but said a final decision will be up to the union executive, which is to meet Friday.

The prime minister's announcement said Heath has written to miners' union president Joe Gormley asking him to postpone the strike—scheduled to begin Sunday—for the duration of the election campaign.

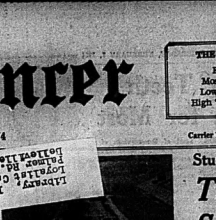
Gormley said the union executive will meet Friday to consider the request.

"My own personal view—and it is personal—is that we ought not to fight an election in the current climate and therefore a strike ought to be deferred," he said. "But that is for the executive to decide."

The Conservatives, with 330 members in the 630-member House of Commons, have an effective majority of about 30. Heath undoubtedly will seek to widen that margin to provide him with increased parliamentary power to restrain wages and prices in Britain's struggle against inflation.

The opposition Labor party, under Labor leader Harold Wilson is expected to accuse Heath of muddled economic planning, including entry into the European Common Market, which led Britain to its current grave economic crisis and its huge foreign trade deficit.

About 43 million Britons are eligible to vote. In the 1970 general election more than one million trade unionists were estimated to have stayed home and may have cost the Labor party the election. This time the trade union turnout is likely to be large.



In a clote vote the tiny band of 11 Liberals, headed by Jeremy Thorpe, may tip the balance of power in deciding which of the major parties will form the next government. In a number of byelections since the last general election, the Liberals increased their seats to 11 from six.

The vote for the Liberals was described by many commentators as public disillusionment with the operations of the major parties.

In the 1970 vote, Heath came to power promising to reduce inflation "at a stroke" and to reduce the country's strike problems. But inflation is rising at about 18 per cent a year and the miners' strike is perhaps the worst industrial dispute since the end of the Second World War.

A Labor victory likely would mean a better pay offer to the miners despite the risk of further inflation. Britain's bookmakers give the Conservatives the edge. They quoted the Tories at 7 to 4 on—meaning you bet 4 to win 7. Labor was quoted at 5 to 4 against—you bet £4 to win £5. The Liberals were 100 to 1 against.

The election decision, after weeks of political uncertainty and industrial turmoil, was announced from 10 Downing Street, Heath's official residence.

Truck Strike May Be Ended

WASHINGTON (AP) — Negotiators reached tentative agreement early today to end the eight-day strike of independent truck drivers in the United States. Truckers were promised all the fuel they need and higher freight rates.

Federal Energy chief William Simon announced that long-distance highway truckers will be allocated 100 per cent of their fuel needs.

Simon said the change will make an additional 78,000 barrels of diesel fuel available each day at truck stops throughout the country. He said truckers using gasoline would receive similar treatment.

Representatives of striking independent truckers said they will recommend acceptance of the agreement.

They said it may take at least 48 hours or more before the agreement reached with government negotiators is ratified. They urged drivers in the meantime to stay home and refrain from further violence.

The negotiated deal there would be no formal ratification vote, but they would be polled in the field to explain the agreement and urge that truckers signify their acceptance by starting up their rigs again. In the meantime, they asked drivers to stay home and refrain from violence.

Details of the agreement were not immediately disclosed, but government officials said the Interstate Commerce Commission will announce later today approval for a temporary surcharge that would allow the truckers to raise their rates.

The truckers have asked for a reduction in the price of diesel fuel, higher freight rates and exemption to pass their increased costs along to shippers.

After the six-hour bargaining session which ended shortly after 4 a.m. EST, government negotiators gave the truckers assurance that truck stops will have all the fuel they need. Additional measures were to be announced later today.

In Belleville, stretches of United States highways were under heavy guard as violence spread prior to announcement of the tentative settlement. Extra police patrols were ordered at critical areas in 10 states and National Guard units were on duty in seven states.

The shutdown has left at least 100,000 persons out of work and some regions dangerously short of critical supplies.

The automobile and coal-related industries began to feel the pinch, and gasoline supplies in some areas were nearly depleted. Meat was being flown to some areas in the Northeast, and an increase in rail traffic by food shippers was reported.

But officials in the Northeast said a combination of the strike and panic buying by consumers may soon deplete supplies of produce and most of the shutdown continues through the weekend.

Prices for available meat and produce in the area were going up.

Governors in many of the more than 40 affected states denounced the "guerrilla warfare" tactics evident Wednesday in some areas.

Route of Pipeline May Be Altered

By THE CANADIAN PRESS.

The proposed route of the Ontario western-oil pipeline to Montreal has been hit by uncertainty.

Federal Manpower Minister Robert Andras said Wednesday the government might have to reconsider its original plans to extend the pipeline eastward from Sarnia through southern Ontario.

His comments, in a Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., interview, came on the heels of statements by specialists, that southern Ontario farmers were overdoing complaints that a pipeline might damage their farmland.

In between, Ontario government officials were still studying the pros and cons of which way they think the line should go.

Mr. Andras said a northern route might become more feasible if southern Ontario farmers make a legal issue whether the line would be detrimental to their operations.

That would create a "whole new ball game," Mr. Andras said.

He said the main reason for deciding on a southern route had been the expected speed in getting extra oil moving in areas of Eastern Canada that now rely on imported crude. A Northern Ontario route would take up to two years longer to befid.

In addition, the federal government has said the $150-million pipeline might cost an extra $10 million if it goes north.

Meanwhile, federal specialists have suggested there is little foundation to charges that a Sarnia-to-Montreal route would damage farmland.

"I have seen hundreds of miles of pipeline in construction on cultivated land," said engineer A. V. Deugros of the National Energy Board. "And I have looked at crops in most areas the following year."

He said crops appeared to grow even better over a filled-in pipeline ditch.

Nixon Says Heritage Pair Involved in Bankrupt Firm

TORONTO (CP) — Two executives of a company awarded a $10 million contract to restore an historic site near Thunder Bay were involved with a previous firm that went bankrupt, Liberal Leader Robert Nixon said Wednesday.

Mr. Nixon was speaking to a reporter inquiring about the award of the contract, without tenders, to National Heritage Ltd.

Terrence O'Connor, secretary-treasurer of the company, was executive counsel to an Ontario cabinet minister when the contract was signed in 1971 and now is a federal Progressive Conservative representative in the House of Commons.

Ab Campion, former executive assistant to James Auld, who negotiated the contract, is now a vice-president of the company.

Bill, according to Mr. Nixon, William Pigott and Murray McCance, president and vice-president of the firm, respectively, "had previously been involved in another action work on a smaller scale with another company."

"Their experience was presumably an important factor in the government's decision to give the Thunder Bay contract without calling for tenders," Mr. Nixon said.

Mr. Nixon said the London, Ont.-based firm, Campion, McCance and Pigott Ltd. "was unable to pay its debts and on May 11, 1970, it made a proposal to its creditors under Part III of the Bankruptcy Act."

Mr. Nixon said the company had debts of about $215,000 and assets of $33,000.

"This is the extent of the experience in restoration offered by National Heritage Ltd, when the government of Ontario gave it a $10 million contract 14 months after Thompson, McCance and Pigott Ltd. became insolvent," Mr. Nixon said.

Kuwait Refuses Terrorists Haven

KUWAIT (AP) — Guerrilla gunmen freed four hostages from the Japanese Embassy today, and Interior and Defence Minister Sheik Saad el-Abdullah, said the siege may end tonight.

He said he has "been in touch with the leader of the gunmen and obtained a pledge that no harm will befall the hostages."

But the government still refused to let four pro-Arab terrorists from Singapore land on its territory.

The terrorists who seized the embassy Wednesday said they were holding "more than 20" Japanese and Arabs. They vowed to blow up the hostages and themselves unless the Singapore terrorists and their hostages were flown to Kuwait.

A special Gulf Air Lines plane arrived in Singapore early today to pick up the group, but the Kuwait government said it would not let the plane land "to avoid further complications." It also refused to send food into the embassy.

Negotiations between Kuwaiti authorities and the gunmen continued through the night, and the government reported the hostages were in good physical condition.

The Japanese government said the guerrillas in Kuwait had set a deadline of 6 a.m. EST Thursday, for the arrival of the planes and the terrorists and hostages from Singapore.

The Japanese said they were trying to get the deadline extended while they continued to plead with the Kuwaitis to agree to the terrorists' demands.

In Convoy

Scores of semi-trailer trucks travel Interstate 80 in Iowa in convoy for protection against snipers. Iowa Highway Patrol aircraft and squad cars accompanied the caravan of trucks. Officials said 33 trucks began the trans-Iowa journey, but their number had increased to 71 by the time the convoy arrived at the Iowa-Illinois border. Most of the trucks that began the journey carried meat bound for the east coast.

Gas Killed Three

ACTON, Ont. (CP) — Three men found dead early Wednesday in a house trailer at a quarry near this community apparently died of asphyxiation, provincial police said. The dead — Hugh Todd, 40, Henry Ney, 42, and Cecil Brown, 58 — all were from Burks Falls, Ont., and were employed by Industrin Ltd., operators of the quarry.

Truckers Protest

TORONTO (CP) — A group of angry truckers descended on the Ontario legislature building Wednesday to demand the government halt the flow of commercially-licensed trucks on Ontario highways. The truckers, belonging to the 600-member Ontario Haulers' Association, say there are too many commercial trucks on the roads, which has resulted in price-cutting and loss of jobs.

Glut May Follow Famine

TORONTO (CP) — A spokesman for a Toronto wholesaler predicted the prices of some fresh fruit and vegetables in Ontario are likely to soar and then collapse as a result of the truckers' strike in the US. Murray Glazier, produce manager for National Grocers Co. Ltd., said the strike had virtually cut off produce shipments from Florida with the result that tomatoes, lettuce and perishable vegetables already are in short supply. But he said price increases are likely to be short-lived and an early end to the strike would most likely lead to a market glut.

Forced Vacation Annoys Truckers

Canadians Too Scared to Leave Florida

By DAVE GROFF
Canadian Press Staff Writer

A forced vacation in the sunshine state of Florida is anything but a delight for a number of Canadian truck drivers stranded there because of the continuing violence in the strike by independent United States truckers.

"We're too scared to leave" Dave Wilson, 36, of Smithville, Ont., said Wednesday in a telephone interview with The Canadian Press in Orlando from Orlando, Fla. He and a handful of other Canadians are "hanging around" there, waiting for the strike to end.

Mr. Wilson is one of six independent Canadian truckers marooned at the Fruitheli Produce Trucking Ltd. terminal in Orlando, some with tractors loaded with $3,500 to $4,000 worth of citrus fruits.

Dave Cleaver, Fruitheli operations manager in Orlando, said there are about 30 Canadians stranded in the state afraid to leave because of the violence.

Brick throwing incidents have been reported in several states, some trucks have been shot at and some drivers killed, he said.

Irvine Maszkiewicz, 35, of St. Catharines, Ont., has been stranded in Orlando since last Wednesday when he was approached by two men, each armed with a shotgun. They told him would not be allowed to return to Canada.

Mr. Maszkiewicz said he had a load of grapefruit destined for Toronto when two men in a passing transport flashed a sign telling him to pull over to the side of the highway.

They allowed him to continue to the Fruitheli terminal, and followed him to make sure he went no farther.

But despite the confrontation, Mr. Maszkiewicz said he supports the demands of the U.S. truckers, as did other Canadian truckers interviewed.

Still, the tie-up is causing financial hardships. Wilf Henderson, 35, of Hamilton said truckers bring in about $1,800 each week—before costs are deducted—in runs between Toronto and Florida. They clear about 21 per cent of that amount.

And, he added, no one is paying him for meals and motel bills while in Florida now that the runs have stopped.

The strike is not much easier for about 50 other truckers at Fruitheli's terminal in St. Catharines.

"We've got about 25 to 30 drivers sitting around here right now waiting for this thing to end," said dispatcher Vic Barsalok.

He said the truckers are unlikely to get other jobs if firms know they are able to leave for Florida once the strike is finished.

Irregular Teeth Problem for Most

By GARY SOLOMON, DDS
Dip. Orthodont

Irregular teeth, a condition called malocclusion, is present in 85 percent of children and may occur in many different forms.

Some of the most common include protruding or buck teeth, crowded teeth, spaced teeth, open bite, (no and-or tom teeth do not meet) deep bite and teeth on of position within the dental arch.

All these conditions can be corrected with orthodontics, the dental specialty concerned with treatment of malocclusion.

The necessity for correction will vary with the severity of the problem. About 22 percent of the population has a severe need of the services of an orthodontist. If these services are not obtained, serious problems may develop as the child matures.

Some of the consequences of malocclusion are poor function of the jaw joints, teeth and muscles, causing jaw pain, headaches, arthritis and gum and bone disease, emotional problems which may affect the child's personality, digestion problems caused by the inability to properly chew food and speech defects.

The three main causes of malocclusion are heredity, environment and poor function.

A child may inherit large teeth from one parent and small jaws from the other. Consequently, the jaws cannot accomodate all the teeth and crowding results. If this child developed a habit of thumbsucking the upper front teeth would tilted within the bone and buck teeth would result.

No malocclusion is self-correcting. Most become worse with age.

When should treatment begin?

There is no definate answer, because all cases of malocclusion are different.

Preventive orthodontics will prevent a malocclusion from developing. It consists of regular twice-yearly visits to the dentist for checkups. These examinations should start as soon as the baby teeth have all erupted, at about two and one-half years of age. Although this may prevent some malocclusions from developing, it cannot prevent those of hereditary origin, or many of environmental origin.

Interceptive orthodontics for children from age 6 to 10 is an attempt to prevent malocclusion from developing by doing a minimal amount of treatment. Almost all types of malocclusions can be intercepted and this often eliminates the need for major treatment later.

Corrective orthodontics should begin by the age of 10½ for girls and 12 for boys. By this age an orthodontist cannot prevent malocclusion, as he must correct it with braces.

Olympus is pushing "a natural high".

But it'll be through music and physical fitness. The six-member combo is appearing at the Four Seasons Hotel nightclub, The Mad Mechanic, till Saturday, Feb. 9.

The group is sponsored by leading sports and fitness authority, and director of Toronto-based Fitness Institute of Canada. It has something to say.

Through its music the group hopes to encourage public awareness of the importance of physical fitness. Money raised through performances will be applied to the development of championship calibre athletes for the Montreal Olympics in 1976.

Music Appreciation

Navy League of Canada Asks Financial Help

The Belleville branch of the Navy League of Canada, with an offer of $50,000 from the Belleville Yardmen to purchase its barracks on the Belleville harbor, has made preliminary plans for a new structure.

But before going ahead with construction, the Navy League wants assurance of a tax concession or annual grant from city council.

Reg F. Murry, president of the Belleville Navy League, appeared before council Monday evening with the request which was referred to the city manager for budget consideration and recommendation.

Mr. Morry told council that the Navy League owned two Belleville harbor lots - one on which their RMCS cadets' barracks stands and the other adjacent to the Sports Shop.

Belleville Yardmen had offered to purchase the barracks property for $50,000, with the stipulation the sale proceeds be used for erection of a suitable replacement building.

In anticipation of the sale being completed, preliminary plans for a new two-storey structure 33 by 80 feet have been prepared, but additional operational costs of the new structure are posing a problem for the Navy League's limited finances.

Taxes on the proposed new building are estimated at approximately $1,350 as compared to $800 on the existing building.

As it stands, the present barracks building is in need of extensive and otherwise accelerated deterioration would make it uninhabitable in a few years.

Mr. Morry requested some measure of long term assistance from council by way of tax relief to the amount of approximately $1,000.

Obituaries and Funerals

JOSEPH M. HUCK

One of the original employees at the former Canada Cement plant at Point Anne and retired for the past 16 years, Joseph M. Huck, 218 Herchimer Ave., died at his home on Wednesday evening following a lengthy illness. He was in his 81st year.

Son of Mr. and Mrs. Jacob P. Huck, he was born at Chapstow, Ont. but had lived for most of his life at Point Anne and in Belleville.

He went to work for Canada Cement in 1903 and retired after 48 years' service with the company.

Mr. Huck was a member of St. Joseph's Church.

Aside from his wife, the former Susan Sweet, he is survived by a daughter, Mrs. William (Lela) McDowell and a son, Gordon, both of Toronto, and five grandchildren.

He was the brother of Mrs. Mary Simmons of Belleville, Mrs. Amelia Bennett of Montreal, and Alexander Huck of Belleville. He was predeceased by brothers Albert and William and sisters Laura and Ann.

The funeral will be held Saturday from the O'Brien Funeral Home to St. Joseph's Church for requiem mass at 11 a.m. Interment, St. James' Cemetery.

JOSEPH WILLIAM SPENCER

Former Northern Electric employee with 43 years' service with the company in Montreal, Joseph William Spencer, 41 Lake Street, died suddenly at Kingston General Hospital on Wednesday. He was in his 67th year.

Born in Montreal, he was the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Joseph W. Spencer and had lived in Belleville since his retirement. He moved to Belleville six years ago.

Aside from his wife, the former Joan Meldrum, he is survived by a son, Lorne of Montreal and a daughter, Mrs. Robert (Joan) Pearce of Holloway and Janice at home. There are four grandchildren, Mrs. Susan and Diane Pearce and John Spencer.

He was the brother of Mrs. A. (Ida) Steward, Mrs. W. (Lenore) Cairns, Edward, James, Norman, and Lorne Spencer, all of Montreal.

The funeral will be held Saturday, Feb. 9 from the Pinkston and Luscombe Funeral Home with service at 2 p.m. to be conducted by Rev. A. L. Sutherland. Interment, Belleville Cemetery.

MRS. BURLEIGH EMMONS

Following a lengthy illness, Mrs. Viola Emmons, formerly of Henry Street, Stirling, died on Friday at Belleville Nursing Home. She was 73.

Daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. William Scott, she was a member of St. Paul's United Church in Stirling, and also belonged to Stirling WI.No. 64.

A former elementary school teacher, she at one time taught at Table in North Hastings and also at Sillsville. She had lived at the Manor for the past four years.

Predeceased by her husband, she is survived by a daughter, Marie and two grandchildren, William and Jo-Ann.

She was the sister of Murney Scott of Stirling and Clarence of Norwood.

The funeral will be held Saturday from the Hogle Funeral Home at Stirling with service in the chapel at 1.30 p.m. conducted by Rev. John Mac Entoshemoot in Stirling Cemetery vault with spring burial in Wellman's Cemetery.

MISS ANA LORETTA (LAURA) FOLEY
Marmora

The funeral for Miss Ana Loretta (Laura) Foley was held Feb. 1, 1974, from Cassidy Funeral Home, Marmora to Sacred Heart Church for service at 10 a.m. Rev. T.G. Scanlon officiated and entombment was in Sacred Heart Cemetery Vault.

Bearers were Charles O'Neill, Cecil Neal, Morris Lynch, Francis Cook, Edward Warren and Eugene Brady.

Miss Foley, a retired telephone operator in Marmora, died Feb. 3 in Belleville General Hospital in her 86th year. Born in Marmora township, the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Marcus Foley, she was an operator for 34 years, retiring in 1958. She was a life member of St. Mary's Church.

She was predeceased by three sisters, Mary, Rose and Teresa and by a brother, Maurice, and four cousins, Freeman and Mary Gilmore, Miss Foley was a member of Sacred Heart Church and the Catholic Women's League.

KILEY THORNE

The funeral of Kiley Thorne was held Wednesday morning from the O'Brien Funeral Residence with Rev. Charles Gazley saying prayers at the residence and at the graveside in St. James Cemetery.

The bearers were William Taylor, Henry Taylor, Tom Marcelle and Jim Ling.

Four Held In Paper Box Thefts

Four Quint-area residents are being detained by Durham Regional Police for a bail hearing in Pickering today following two thefts from construction sites in the Ajax-Pickering area Monday, Feb. 4.

The youths are charge with two counts of theft under $200 by Durham police, police spokesman said today 13 additional charges for theft from newspaper boxes are pending from various police departments between Belleville and Toronto.

Charged are: Brenton Keith Critch, 17, of no fixed address; Donald Lindsay Hyde, 16, of 189 Albert St., Belleville; James Lee Sargent, 18, and Charles Maurice Sargent, 24, both of R.R.7 Trenton.

Belleville detachment provincial police has sent an officer to Oshawa to follow up the investigation. Charges are pending, said a Belleville provincial police spokesman today.

Wednesday, the youths were arraigned in Belleville under a warrant issued by the Durham police.

Proposed Zoning No Jeopardy

Waterfront Scheme Said OK

By COLIN BRUCE
Staff Reporter

TRENTON — Plans for a mid-million dollar waterfront development will get town hall's go-ahead, it was revealed to The Intelligencer Wednesday.

Arco Holding Uncorporated of Port Hope, intend investing about $2.5 million in a combination retail-high-rise development on the east side of the river near Canadian Tire.

Despite earlier indications from town hall staff and council that the development conformed with planning, developers viewed the project as being in "considerable jeopardy," following the first glimpse of the town's proposed zoning bylaws.

In spite of the official plan recommending commercial and high rise development in the area, the zoning bylaws bisected the proposed site, threatening to kill the project. Developers said the project would die if this apparent contradiction between bylaw and official plan was not rectified.

After assembling the necessary 3.5 acres bounded by Dundas, Bridge and Ontario Streets, under the direction of what the intended use conformed to planning, developers were told Tuesday night that zoning bylaw amendments would be needed.

The project — if delayed by public hearings and Ontario Municipal Board adjudication, would be economically unfeasible ... it would drive the rents too high," said development firm principal Michael Alyward.

Developers met with Mayor Robert Patrick Wednesday who assured them the project would get the green light, said Mr. Alyward.

Mayor Patrick will forward a "strong letter" on the town's intentions regarding the proposed bylaw discrepancy, allowing developers to complete financial arrangements.

Developers say the delays in rezoning procedures would reflect in the project's total cost.

Following his meeting with the mayor, Mr. Alyward said "everything seems hooky dory," and that the project should soon be awarded a building permit.

"The mayor's letter makes it a 'go' situation," he said.

SIX property transactions will be completed soon with affected homeowners, completing the land parcel.

The structure, which ultimately will bring about $40-50,000 in yearly taxes to the town, is planned for approximately 13 stores and a major food store on the ground floor. Negotiations with the food store continue this week. Topping the small will be seven stories of apartments units.

Developers say store rents will be competitive with area malls and the 60 apartments will be competitive with similar existing rentals. Take 4

Already value of land acquisitions proposed and site preparation expected to being this spring is about $500,000.

About 100 construction jobs will be generated by the complex followed by about 75 full-time jobs in the office/retail segment of the development.

The Arco scheme, and predicament, is a carbon copy of one experienced a few weeks ago by Western Realty Equities regarding plans for an eastend mall.

Council circumvented zoning problems for the east-end mall by granting's a building permit before zoning bylaws could come into effect.

It is expected Arco and the waterfront scheme when presented to council, will receive the same treatment and be reached within the following two weeks.

Jack Ellis, Chief Brant

MP Flies, Photographs

TYENDINAGA — Jack Ellis, MP Hastings, is also a flier who is a photographer.

It's a combination that will keep him popping up at local government sessions throughout his riding in coming months.

Last fall Mr. Ellis took aerial photographs of the municipal centres in his political district — including this Bay of Quinte Mohawk reserve.

Now he's started distributing them to the local governments involved, Wednesday night he made a presentation to Chief William Brant and the Mohawk council.

He's already made similar presentations in Marmora, Madoc and Bancroft. But that's only a start. There are 21 local governments in Hastings riding.

After that he'll make a montage of all the photographs involved and make the final presentation to Hastings County council, he says.

Reserve's Police Cannot Be Armed

TYENDINAGA — The Bay of Quinte Mohawk council learned Wednesday night its full-time police force which patrols this reserve is barred from carrying firearms.

The situation may stem from hedging by senior governments, council was told.

Indian affairs are a federal jurisdiction. But administration of justice - including permission to carry firearms - is a provincial responsibility.

And provincial authorities have refused to permit sidearms for the two-man staff force, reserve administrator Elton Brant told council. The province classifies the Mohawk constables as bylaw enforcement officers. To bear arms they would have to become special provincial police constables.

The information evoked some irritated reaction in council.

The two-man Tyendinaga force, reorganized in the past year and trained at police college, is otherwise fully equipped, with two modern cruisers.

Said councillor Brant.

A provincial police staff officer from Belleville who visited the reserve Wednesday to discuss the firearms issue had agreed the Mohawk force was doing a "commendable job," said Chief Brant.

"If there was a police force, doing the job of a police force, I don't see why they shouldn't be equipped the same way," he added.

Constable Takes Dismissal To Ontario Supreme Court

TRENTON — Former Trenton constable Carm Schwager will stand before the Ontario Supreme Court near the end of the month in a bid to regain his active position on the Trenton Police force.

Mr. Schwager and his dismissal were subjects of a two-day examination last fall when a provincial arbitrator attempted to judge the constable's appeal.

At the end the arbitrator decided he had no jurisdiction in the case.

Dennis Latten, Ontario Police Commission secretary-treasurer said the case is scheduled to go before the Supreme Court Feb. 21, but this date is "flexible."

He said the Supreme Court docket could allow Mr. Schwager's case to be heard a couple of days before or after that date.

Mr. Schwager was released from the police force by local police commissioners who deemed him physically unfit to complete his duties as a police officer.

Mr. Latten who represented Mr. Schwager during the earlier proceedings will move for the court to empower the arbitrator to make a decision or completely squash the dismissal.

He said he hoped the court will not require a second set of arbitration hearings.

Once the case has been heard the case, issues will be adjudicated and a decision reached within the following two weeks.

Assess Trailers

PICTON — Regional Assessment Commissioner G. Leighton Thompson has informed town council that all mobile homes used as permanent residences in Picton must be placed on the assessment rolls.

"Much controversy has taken place over this matter and in some parts of our region, as well as in other places in Ontario, trailers and mobile homes used for permanent residence have been assessed, while in other localities, they are not," he stated in a letter to town clerk Andrew Jarvis.

"In view of this I have a divisional directive that instructs us to place mobile homes and trailers on the assessment role at the earliest convenience."

Snowmobile Event Delay

ATHOL—The snowmobile-a-thon originally planned by the Athol Recreation Committee for Sunday, February 3 has been postponed for one week.

Those with pledge forms for this annual event are asked to continue to solicit support until the event is held next weekend.

More Firemen Needed

PICTON — Picton fire chief Leonard Tripp has suggested that town council hire six more volunteer firefighters because of additional areas now covered by his department.

Chief Tripp also recommended purchase of a 1,200-gallon tank truck to be used in rural areas as well as in Picton in the event of a low-water flow situation.

A fire hydrant inside the Prince Edward County fairgrounds was recommended by the fire chief in the event of a serious fire in the County Centre or the Curling Club. He stated the closest available hydrant now is located at the corner of Main and Bay streets.

Leases

TYENDINAGA — Expiry of land leases with non-residents of this reserve should be publicly posted, Bay of Quinte Mohawk councillors decided Wednesday night.

Any reserve residents needing such lands would know when the leases come up for renewal before council, said Councillor Carl Brant.

CFB Policemen Quit Strike Security Jobs

TRENTON — CFB Trenton military policemen, who came under labor union fire this week have left their part-time security jobs at strikebound Febricon Manufacturing here.

Members of the Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers of America walked off their jobs nearly two weeks ago following a negotiation stalemate with the company.

In the meantime the company was forced to recruit guards round-the-clock.

The union claimed the airmen were constituting a $12,000-a-year salary while workers were trying to better their $134 a week salary. The figure is incorrect says a military spokesman today, who report the affected five military policemen would average about $8,000 a year, two-thirds the union quote.

Warrant Officer Joe Bird of base security said none of the men went to work Wednesday and all voluntarily quit security work at the plant.

The airmen were in compliance with a "strong letter" from Base Commander Col. Robert Husch. Col. Husch said he did not want the armed forces involved in a confrontation that could lead to physical violence.

Reject Housing Site For Senior Citizens

PICTON — A Picton land parcel under consideration as a site for senior citizen housing units has been rejected by the Ontario Housing Corporation.

The site, at Downes Avenue and Washburn Street, had been approved in principle by municipal council subject to certain conditions.

S. J. Kaye, development officer for the provincial arm of the OHC, told council in a letter that the location was unacceptable because the purchase could not be substantiated by OHC appraisals.

"As discussed, we are currently appraising two other parcels of land which appear suitable for consideration of the senior citizen units and we shall apprise the town when the required approvals are obtained," he stated.

Mohawk Centre Almost Ready

TYENDINAGA — Less than three years ago it was only an appeal for funds after total destruction by fire.

Now our reserve's new council house — community focus for the Bay of Quinte Mohawks — is almost complete.

Elton Brant, reserve administrator told Mohawk councillors Wednesday night, that interior work on the new building should be concluded by the end of this month.

The new structure, in actual use for some time, was raised on the site of a frame building that was gutted by fire after more than a half-century in use.

The Mohawks raised funds through various programs to help build the new centre.

New Chairman

PICTON — A Glenora man, Roy Wight, has been elected chairman of the Prince Edward County planning board for 1974. He succeeds Brant Hyatt.

New vice-chairman is McCrae Dunford who defeated Douglas Marvin of Wellington in election to office.

Canada Fortunate

We wonder will it ever be thus in Canada: that as the rest of the world burns to one degree or another — violence in the United States, economic chaos or even further talk of a coup in Britain — the worst we have to fear is inflation, and whatever minor sartorial and temperamental flurries Prime Minister Trudeau will cause next.

Yes things are so calm and prosperous in stable, wealthy and progressive Canada that Mr. Trudeau can find time to get away for a while, indulge his unconventional modes of dress in the company of the more formal European diplomatic set, and even walk out of the Club of Rome deliberations when, in his view, things became unproductive and time-wasting.

Let's hope things never become as desperate in Canada as they are in Britain, and even in the United States where violence is an everyday affair and is now being compounded by outbreaks in the wake of unrest among truckers.

The latter incidentally is having repercussions in Canada, with some truckers refusing to cross the border.

As for inflation, which has been spotlighted in Belleville in recent days, business and consumer affairs analyst Clement Egan for one is predicting that the upward spiral will continue, with grave long-term repercussions for the value of the dollar and for current savings and investments.

Alderman Jack Ireland in recent days forecast growing inflationary pressures at the municipal level.

Government spending, as discussed at Rotary by Hastings MP Jack Ellis, threatens misery at home without any apparent end in sight to the trend, but instead further spending, waste, and consequent depreciation of the dollar.

For the moment there is no prospect of public revolution exceeding the democratic process, but one Rotarian, Ron Cass, warned that government one day might take more in taxation than people would stand for. He said he believed things would then "grind to a halt . . . and there would be chaos."

Far-fetched? We have only to look at the United States and Britain, to see how the smooth tenor of life can be severely affected. It is said the Communists are coming out of the woodwork in Britain." Let us look to our own continued stability, lest events, and political skulduggery, do not overcome this country too.

Chivalry and Courage

There is something in the judgment of Mr. Justice M. B. Manning in this case that is eloquent of chivalry on his part and greatness of spirit on Miss Loney's, in an era when chivalry is rarely exhibited, and as seldom recognized by those to whom it is directed . . . in an era too in which it is cool to treat life as a bore and pass by on the other side.

But here Justice Manning, in the course of a 56-page judgment, said it was always pleasant to see her in the courtroom and when she reads what I have written I hope she will be reassured that she won the warm and friendly admiration obviously of all lawyers and certainly of all the court staff."

Miss Loney wept — a very human response to the concern of the judge, whom she thought was "very nice, courteous and kind."

With the money the young woman plans to buy a home. Confined to a wheelchair, and will only limited use of her arms, she has been in hospital since the accident.

The court award is believed to be the highest ever made to an accident injury victim in Canada and we are left pondering two further — and conflicting — points: the agreeing with the sentiments in this country, and the fact that Miss Loney's poignant example of courage would never have come to light had the accident never occurred.

Bonds Enjoy Fresh Interest Among Canadian Investors

By VINCENT EGAN
Business and Consumer Affairs Analyst
Thomson News Service

The high returns that money can earn in today's bond market, combined with the prolonged uncertainty in the stock market, are creating new interest in bonds among Canadian investors who had previously stuck strictly to stocks.

Yields on the highest quality bonds are currently in the range of 8 to 9 per cent. A group of 14 leading Canadian stocks, average yield is just over 5 per cent.

And if you find the economic outlook especially gloomy, bonds have one other attractive feature: when a company is liquidated, the bondholder is entitled to be paid in full before shareholders receive any repayment of capital.

Debentures, which are similar to bonds in other respects, are secured by the general credit of the borrower, and don't provide the same prior claim on assets.

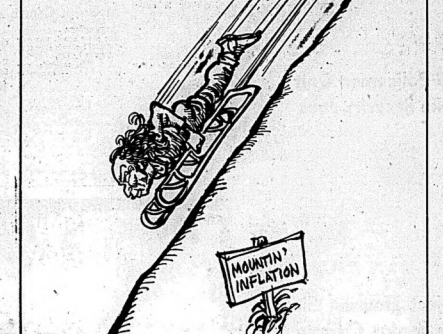
Canada's bond market has four main categories—bonds issued by the federal government and its agencies, by the provinces and their agencies, by municipalities and by corporations.

Canada Savings Bonds are the most familiar bonds—and the safest, since they can be turned into cash at any time. But a wide variety of other Canadian government bonds are traded. Because their quality is the highest, the yield to the investor may be as much as one percentage point less than the yield on other good quality bonds.

Provincial bonds usually have a higher yield—and municipal debentures still higher—since their quality, based on such factors as the ability to repay, varies from one government to another, and one decade to another.

The market in corporations' bonds is even more diversified. Yields might range from just over 8 per cent on the most highly regarded, to several points higher when there is a substantial element of risk or other uncertainties.

One element to consider in assessing corporate bonds is the so-called "sinking fund" which corporations, to facilitate their borrowings, make their bonds convertible into a given number of their common shares—a valuable privilege if the shares should appreciate considerably, but worthless if they don't.



Others may offer warrants entitling bondholders to buy their common stock at a certain price for a certain period. The warrants' value depends entirely on the price of stock.

Whether sweetened or not, corporate bonds should be looked at carefully by the potential investor. Check, for example, whether the 5-year earnings have comfortably exceeded the total bond interest charged.

Any borrower, governmental or corporate, should be of a reasonable size. It's risky to lend your savings to a company with operations so limited that it may not be able to repay you.

In general, the yield on a bond should be low—relative to other yields—if its safety rating is high, and vice versa.

And remember that the market price of bonds is directly affected by interest rates. Should the general trend of interest rates ever turn downward, the market value of the bonds you hold would be likely to rise.

U.S. Hard-Line Against Cuba May Moderate

By PETER BUCKLEY

WASHINGTON (CP) — The United States, which routinely keeps a bulletin eye on events in the offshore island of Cuba, is analysing the recent visit there of Soviet leader Leonid Brezhnev for signals of a further thaw in Fidel Castro's enmity toward the "Yanquis."

After more than a decade of the bitterest hostility, there have been indications that Cuba is prepared to start out on what would eventually be a long and complicated road toward resuming diplomatic relations with the U.S.

Castro's anti-American rhetoric—including personal denunciations of President Nixon and his predecessors in the past—has taken a noticeably milder turn in recent months.

When the state department intervened late last year to persuade Canada to lift its ban on sales of Canadian aircraft to Cuba, Castro's government responded by allowing Canadian businessmen to bid on a contract to supply Cuba with 10 turbo-prop transports.

Then in Castro's speech welcoming Brezhnev to Havana, he said Cuba would be willing to negotiate with the U.S. on the basis of "peaceful coexistence" and "mutual respect."

Perhaps if a fatality occurs there—changes would be made or if they were sued along with the City for negligence in case of an accident as a result of this condition on the road. Sand is something I don't think the City owns — even that would be of some solution until the proper arrangements can be made.

Anything you could do to help rectify this problem I am sure would be most appreciated not only by myself but by all local residents and Insurance Companies.

Bible Digest

by H. B. DEAN

"And they were all filled with the Holy Ghost, and began to speak with other tongues, as the Spirit gave them utterance." Acts 2:4.

Here is a strange and marvelous thing that happened in Bible days, repeating itself today in the lives of Bible believers who are willing to recognize God as no respecter of persons. "The promise is unto you ... Be filled with the Spirit," half of a Cuban vessel detained in the Panama Canal Zone. Castro let it be known through intermediaries that he welcomed the gesture.

The Canadian ambassador in Mexico spoke recently about increased contacts with the U.S. and the state department hastily replied that it would "weigh carefully" what Hawana had to say on the topic.

On the surface, observers here believe, the United States has lots to gain from an improvement in relations than either Cuba or the Soviet Union.

Largely because of the U.S.-sponsored boycott of Cuba by most OAS nations, Cuba has become almost an economic appendage of Moscow.

Soviet subsidies are estimated to run at more than $500 million a year and Cuban trade is overwhelmingly tied to the distant Soviet bloc.

Such essentials as oil must be shipped thousands of miles from Russian ports, while Venezuelan oil lies tantalizingly close across the Caribbean. Other scarce goods are abundant on the U.S. mainland, only 90 miles from Cuban shores.

In addition, Castro's dependence on Moscow—and his unswerving support of the Soviet political line—have cost him much of his standing in the Third World. He was openly denounced at last year's conference of non-aligned nations in Algeria.

Repairing relations with the U.S. might improve Castro's credibility among his peers and make him a more effective spokesman for the Soviet brand of communism.

An improvement in relations would also carry side benefits for the U.S.

Washington has found it increasingly difficult to round up a majority of OAS colleagues in favor of the annual renewal of the Cuban embargo. The block side is a source of strain in the Americas, an area that has enough other strains to worry about.

Word at a time when President Nixon and State Secretary Kissinger praise the warmth of American relations with China and the Soviet Union, the continuing tension in relations with little Cuba has come to appear increasingly bizarre.

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FILES OF BYGONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO

Trenton's mayor Ross Burtt will retire from service with the CNR on February 12th. When Mayor Burtt swings down from his regular run as brakeman he will be ending an association with the railroad that began in 1913, was interrupted by World War I, and which has been continuous since 1923.

Increasing costs of television servicing and the cost maintaining skilled technical help will result in a readjustment of the servicing costs for television in the Belleville district. An announcement of suggested price increases will be made Monday by the Belleville division of the Radio Electronic Technicians Assoc. of Ontario and the Belleville T.V. dealers.

30 YEARS AGO

February 7, 1944.

Two years' training in vocational studies should be part of the regular curriculum for every Ontario high school student, according to Normah Smith, vocational director of the Belleville Collegiate, who was the guest speaker at the regular weekly Rotary luncheon at the Hotel Quinte. Mr. Smith said the ultimate aim of such studies was not only to teach a student what to do but how to live, with emphasis dependability.

Traffic Hazard Near City School

The following letter has been addressed to Mayor Jeffery.

A severe hazard to motorists and children exists at the corner of Sidney Street and Leland Drive in the City of Belleville, during the winter months as Sir Mackenzie Bowell School which is behind the high-rise apartment building on Sidney street pumps sump water out onto the road in great quantities, much more than the one sewer drain can possibly handle. This in cold weather creates extremely icy road conditions at this corner. It is impossible to stop at the stop street and very hazardous; what with wet, bad road conditions, children walking to school, school buses depositing children, exits of the high rise apartment onto the same intersection etc., this is most critical.

I feel with our modern engineering policies that there would be some solution to this horrible problem.

I have written you since I have received no co-operation from the school board regarding this problem which has been mentioned to them by concerned residents for several years. I, myself have been a resident of Belleville for seven years and this has existed ever since my arrival 6 years ago. This hazard appears to be of no concern no matter who you talk to, there is the usual "pass the buck" that appears to be what I am faced with.

The first military submarine went into action 110 years ago Saturday (Feb. 7, 1864) — and sank the United States warship Housatonic. The submarine, the Hunley, was a small Confederate vessel which carried a single torpedo in its bows. It had to ram the Housatonic to sink it, while withdrawing from the crippled ship. Early submarines of this type were powered by six or eight men turning a crank which drove a propeller.

Crime and Punishment

Brantford Expositor

An unusual degree of public reaction has been stirred in Brantford by the five-year prison sentence imposed on a 16-year-old youth found guilty of beating and kicking to death a man of 71. The original charge was non-capital murder. The accused, Keith Knight, 18, pleaded guilty to manslaughter and was convicted on this charge.

The burden of comment heard around the city is that the sentence is unduly light for a crime committed with revolting ferocity on an aged, frail and helpless victim. No one of normal sensitivity could have failed to be shocked and sickened by the evidence describing the ruthless attack. After the guilty verdict, Knight's defence counsel suggested a five-year sentence. Crown Attorney Charles Scott, in citing four homicides in Brantford since October, three of them brutal, and the public concern they had aroused, asked for a ten-year term.

Before Mr. Justice Galligan decided on five years, he had weighed the pros and cons with a degree of care that few, if any, critics of his "light sentence" are likely to have applied or been capable of. Public reaction to both the crime and the penalty was understandably emotional, a luxury denied to judges.

As was his duty, but not that of the public, Mr. Justice Galligan took into reckoning the appalling upbringing of Knight, shifted from foster home to foster home from age two, introduced to drugs at 13 and in and out of courts in recent years, but never until now for a crime of violence. And when at age 17 he killed Fraser last October, Knight was so heavily drugged as to be incapable of forming an intent to kill and was possibly beyond understanding what he was doing. His temporarily drug-induced conduct was not so much brutal as brutish, that is, lacking human faculty and intelligence.

If indeed, five years is too light a sentence, where would critics place the proper level, and on what grounds? And if the prosecution thinks a sentence is too light, it can appeal it. Only rarely does this happen. Still, in this case the feeling that the sentence is too light is understandable — and it may well be justified.

Smoking and the Young

Boston Herald American

A 10th-anniversary analysis of what has happened since the U. S. surgeon general first warned against smoking cigarettes mixes good with bad. Ten million Americans, mostly men, have quit. Without the warning of subsequent educational program 22 million more Americans would be smoking than are at present. And the main cause of increased numbers of smokers is simply increased population. That is good.

Yet on balance the knotty, medical authorities say, given cause for encouragement.

Most bothersome is the finding that the increase in smokers, from 50 million in 1964 to 52 million now, is marked by 1,200 new teenage smokers every day. The youngsters who are themselves immune to smoking-caused ailments don't realize it, but this is a tragedy.

The 10-year recap shows one thing very clearly. The campaign to convince people to alter their lives will be better, healthier and longer if they don't have to wait needlessly. The kids just haven't got the message yet.

Tree Plan For Moira

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

I commend Ald. Stuart Metks' plan for massive "tree planting" along the banks of the Moira River.

It is an imaginative idea which would provide added shade and attraction to the area.

It would, however, also be necessary to, that there would be the possibility of Pacific salmon congregating at the mouth of the river.

The only drawback to it all is — how are the fish going to survive in the murk and slime of the water?

Anyhow — the trees will make fine perches for the flying fish".

Premier Arrests Opponent

Grenada Now Independent But Celebration Boycotted

ST. GEORGE'S, Grenada (AP) — The strife-torn little island of Grenada got its independence from Britain today, but other Caribbean leaders boycotted Prime Minister Eric Gairy and stayed away from the five-day celebration.

Only second-string foreign officials were on hand as the Union Jack came down at midnight Wednesday night, and the red, green and gold flag of the 110,000 Grenadans was raised.

There were no representatives at all from Grenada's two major neighbors, Trinidad and Barbados. And the British government, because of the possibility of trouble, cancelled plans for Prince Richard of Gloucester to represent the Queen at the ceremonies.

Canada is being represented at today's celebrations by L. A. H. Smith, Canadian commissioner to Grenada. He will present a gift of books to the Grenada public library.

CBS News reported in New York that a few hours before independence, troops and Gairy's secret police, known as the Mongoose Squad, arrested his chief opponent, Maurice Bishop of the leftin New Jewel Movement.

Gairy's opponents have demonstrated for weeks against the prime minister, who they say plans to set up a police state now that Grenada's 210 years of association with Britain have come to an end. Gairy, supported by the island's rural peasants, denies the charge but his armed secret police have already been well in view.

Violent anti-Gairy demonstrations were predicted during the independence celebrations, which began Sunday and end today. But Eric Pierre, chief of the seamen's and waterfront workers' union, said the island's fuel shortage will keep people at home.

Few Clues in Hearst Kidnapping

BERKELEY, Calif. (AP) — Authorities say they have few clues to the whereabouts of kidnaped newspaper heirress Patricia Hearst.

They are not ruling out the possibility her captors may still be holding her in this university town.

"For all we know they could be six blocks from here," police information officer Richard Berger said Wednesday of the white woman and two black men who abducted the 19-year-old from her apartment here Monday night.

Lieut. David Johnson said police were searching the Berkeley hills by helicopter in the area where Miss Hearst's kidnappers headed and were going door to door in her neighborhood questioning possible witnesses.

"Something's going to break in the next day or so," Johnson said. "I just can't (believe) whoever has her is going to keep her much longer without making a move."

John Kelley, assistant agent in charge of the San Francisco FBI office, said "quite a number of men" are pursuing unspecified new developments, but he emphasized there had been "no big breakthroughs" in the case.

Neither the police nor the Hearst family had received any ransom demand or contact of any kind, Kelley said. Miss Hearst is the granddaughter of the late William Randolph Hearst, founder of the newspaper and magazine empire that bears his name.

Kelley said a special FBI artist from Washington is using witnesses' descriptions to make composite pictures of the three kidnappers, all said to be in their 20s.

He also said agents are circulating photographs of "notable suspects," both male and female. He declined to comment on published reports that pictures of women associated with radical groups are being shown to persons on the University of California campus here.

Meanwhile, Miss Hearst's parents met with reporters at their estate in Hillsborough, 15 miles south of San Francisco, to renew their pleas for the safe return of their daughter.

Pay Irregular, Jobs Unsafe

Workers Are Said in Need Of Government Intervention

TORONTO (CP) — The Ontario government should intervene in the concrete-forming industry to protect the workers, two witnesses told the royal commission into crime and violence in the construction industry Wednesday.

John Stefanini, business manager of Local 183, Laborers International Union, which represents most of the residential concrete formers, said contractors do not regularly pay their men and safe working conditions are often lacking.

In the last two years his organization "has recovered at least one-quarter of a million dollars" in wages that contractors originally did not pay, Mr. Stefanini said.

And the local has mechanic liens against builders for another $58,000 in wages and has also lost "a few thousand dollars" in union dues the companies failed to submit for their employees, he said.

"The situation got so bad at the end of 1972 that I went to the minister of labor asking that something be done about the disgraceful situation . . . such as bonding of contractors . . . especially those in the concrete-forming industry," Mr. Stefanini said.

Earlier, John Grobovaz, editor of the Italian newspaper Il Giornale Di Toronto, told the inquiry that union leaders are untrained for their job and that he wants the province to license union business agents. He said they should have to take courses and pass tests.

During the 1969 labor strife in the concrete-forming industry, Mr. Grobovaz spent six months working for the Council of Concrete Forming Trade Unions. At that time, Local 183 was part of the council and was trying to win jurisdiction over the men from another union.

Union executives were supposed to be taking care of the men 365 days of the year, but are battling each other for jurisdiction, he said.

"The industry is in a shambles for a long, long time and it's time somebody straightened it up," the witness said. "It gives me a pain in my heart."

NDP Opposes Increase

OTTAWA (CP) — The New Democratic Party will demand nullification of new rate increases granted Bell Canada, NDP Leader David Lewis said Wednesday.

"Bell is not entitled to any increase," he told a news conference. "They are making enough profit already."

He said the NDP will adopt the same position it took last year when the transport commission awarded Bell its fourth increase since 1969. There was opposition from the NDP and other groups and the government suspended and later reduced the increase.

Mr. Lewis said Bell's profit picture would be large now if it took into account deferred taxes and profits by its subsidiary company, Northern Electric.

Ontario and Quebec Claim Bell Withholds Information

OTTAWA (CP) — Ontario and Quebec complained Wednesday that Bell Canada has not provided them with sufficient information for use in their fight against telephone rate increases proposed by the company.

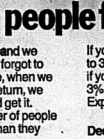
Lawyers for the two provinces told the Canadian transport commission they are afraid the information they requested of the company may not be forthcoming or that it may be provided too late for efficient use.

Raynald Langlois, representing the Quebec government, said 50 of the 75 questions he submitted to Bell in December have been answered, but some answers were inadequate or merely refusals to provide the requested information.

Dan Bartnicki, representing Ontario, told commission chairman Guy Roberge he is afraid the information he sought last month may arrive too late to be used effectively in the current hearings. So far, his questions had not been answered.

Mr. Roberge asked the lawyers to submit copies of the questions and any answers received for study by the commission. Arguments would be heard Friday on whether Bell is providing appropriate responses.

Quebec's fight against the proposed increase suffered a set-back Wednesday when the commission rejected its attempt to have Northern Electric operations scrutinized publicly during rate hearings involving Bell, its parent company.



Mr. Langlois and fellow Quebec lawyer Rosa Gendron said the province may decide to appeal the decision to the Federal Court.

Last year, we set up a new $150 Employment Expense Deduction that applied to most Canadians...but almost half a million people forgot to take it.

Probably because it was new and we didn't tell you enough about it, you forgot to take advantage of it. And of course, when we ran across the oversight on your return, we corrected it and made sure you did get it. (Which also explains why a number of people received a refund that was more than they expected.)

Anyway. This year remember to deduct your $150 Employment Expense Deduction, because if we don't have to correct it on your return, we can process it faster and in turn, get your refund to you faster.

Who does it apply to?

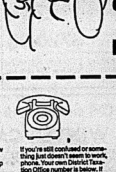
Almost every employee who worked for any length of time last year. There are very few exceptions to this, which are outlined in your Guide, Item 4, but by and large it's for everyone who was employed.

Does everyone get an automatic $150?

Actually, it's calculated at a rate of 3% of your income, to a total of $150. Which means that if you earned $5,000 or more, you automatically get $150 and you don't have to bother calculating anything.

If you earned less than $5,000, you're entitled to 3% of what you earned as a deduction (i.e., if you earned $3,000 last year, you can claim 3% of that, which is $90, as your Employment Expense Deduction).

Where is the Employment Expense Deduction explained in my guide?



It's Item 4 in the Income Section and it's clearly labelled "Employment Expense Deduction".

Where do I enter it on my form?

On Page 2, the one that deals with "Summary of Income and Deductions". It's near the top of the page in the section labelled "Income from Employment", and you enter the figure on the line numbered 05.

Is anyone allowed more than $150?

No. $150 is the maximum allowed, no matter what you earned. Just remember that if you did earn a salary last year, as an employee, you're almost certainly entitled to the deduction, so take it.

Together, we can get it done.

Blind Centenarian Continues Sewing

ST. CATHARINES, Ont. (CP) — Although there are dark circles under her eyes now and her hearing has almost gone, Lilies Buchner hasn't really changed in the three years since she was 100 years old.

She's still a sprightly, trimfigured old lady whose personal room at Lisswell Hall are neat as a pin.

She has always been a fastidious person and sees no reason to change just because she was 103 last Jan. 30. She does her own hand-washing, keeps her room tidy and dusted and even gets down on her hands and knees and dust mops her floor every week.

"And when I can't get down to do her hair," said her great-nephew's wife, Mrs. Vernon Buchner, "she washes and sets it herself with pin curls."

Sunday is the senior Mrs. Buchner's favorite day "because that's when I can sleep a lot," she said. Sunday she takes off," she said. Sunday she takes a break from what has become almost a business with her in the last years—making footstools from old tin cans. She looks on this as work, as she sells them to residents and their friends, and she doesn't believe in working on the Lord's Day.

Mrs. Buchner worked for seven years for a tailor, she said, so sewing is no hardship to her. But since she has lived at Lisswell Hall, residence of the Canadian National Institute for the Blind, for five years, she can no longer see what she's doing.

One of the staff is kept busy threading needles for her, while she feels her way around the footstool, covering each can first, then padding the tops and covering the entire stool in brightly patterned fabric provided by her family.

Mrs. Buchner's life hasn't been easy, she says, referring to a lifetime of looking after sick parents and her husband as "just work, work, work." Her favorite time was 20 or so years ago, when she lived near Cornwall and spent much time at her cottage on Sheik's Island.

She says she's not had time in her life for fun and outings, but "lots of work and exercise keep up your spirits and keep you moving." This, she feels, is why she's lived so long.

She wouldn't want to be 110 years, old though, because "there's no pleasure in being an old woman," she stated emphatically.

"If I didn't have these (footstools) to tinker about with there'd be nothing at all to do except think," she said. "And I don't want to sit here all day and just think and think of things that have happened."

First Woman Floor Trader Works Toronto Exchange

TORONTO (CP) — Heather Whitehead, 22, the first and the only woman floor trader on any Canadian stock exchange, says her future in the Toronto exchange is not certain.

"It depends if I get bored," she said in an interview.

The daughter of a doctor in Saint John, N.B., Heather said: "One of the reasons for my wanting to become a floor trader is the excitement. I like the independence of working there and the opportunity to make decisions."

She added she would like to get into the sales and research side of the job and then there's the London Stock Exchange in England which is one of her current daydreams.

Heather's need for challenge is the factor which brought her to Toronto. She took two years of psychology at Dalhousie University in Halifax islending to work with disadvantaged children.

"But that wasn't a smart decision, because, although I enjoy teaching, I'm not really all that keen on children," she said.

Instead she came to Toronto and applied for a job through Canada Manpower.

She was hired as a clerk at Richardson Securities and eventually became an order clerk on the New York trading desk.

Alastair Gray of Richardson's remembers her as the girl who got away as fleather left to join Wood Gundy Ltd. there, before long, she became the first woman phone order clerk on the floor of the exchange.

In a telephone interview from New York, Muriel (Mickey) F. Siebert, who has had a seat on the New York exchange since 1967, wished Heather the best.

"I think the news about Heather Whitehead is great," she said. "It's a very good business."

Waste Paper Feeds Stock

NEW YORK (AP) — A scientist and officials from Louisiana State University said Tuesday they have developed a process to convert waste paper in the laboratory into an animal food with more protein than steak or soybeans.

Eventually, they said, they hope to be able to produce food for humans, too.

The process was developed in a six-year research program at the university in Baton Rouge, La. It will take another five years to adapt the process to produce the food substance commercially they said.

The process uses bacteria called cellulomonas to break down cellulose fibres in wood, paper, textiles and land wastes into a nearly tasteless granular synthetic protein substance.

Dr. Vadake Srinivasan, who discovered the bacterium in a sugar cane field, to make the fining the process to make the product digestible to humans could take seven to 10 more years.

As it can be used now, he said, the process would convert 100 pounds of pure paper into 60 pounds of food mash with a protein content of 60 emints said, steak has a 25 per-cent protein content and per cent. By contrast, the soybeans about 44 per cent...

Ann Landers
Ladies' Night Out — Or Is It a Manhunt?

Dear Ann: Either you are living in the dark ages or your own marriage is a midwest version of the Doris Day syndrome. When, oh when did you get the crazy idea that a married man's night out with the boys consists of a get-together to talk? The whole point of a night out is just that, a chance to get out of the house. Women deserve the same right.

What makes you think the only respectable thing married women can do is visit in each other's homes? Just because they go to a bar doesn't mean they are looking to get picked up. It so happens a group of couples who work together enjoy movies, theatre, dinner out and, yes, even bar-hopping. There are many things women can do of an evening that falls midway between cookware parties and hustling strange guys in bars. So tell it like it is.—Fort Wayne

Dear F.W.: I'll repeat the advice. Verbatim. "When you say 'a night out' I assume you mean a bar-party, card-playing or a gathering at home for gab fests. If so, the answer is yes, if by 'night out' you're hoping or going to a cocktail lounge and dancing with guys, the answer is no."

If this sounds like the Doris Day syndrome, so be it. But married women who leave their husbands home while they make the bars are looking for trouble and usually get it, no matter how you slice it. Sorry, baby, it's still baloney.

Dear Ann Landers: Our family of four beautiful children is almost grown. I am 42 years old. Throughout my married life I've not used my fine china or lovely silver because I was afraid my children would break or bend it.

Now that we have a new home I want to use my lovely things. My family thinks because they are so expensive and irreplaceable they should be saved. Not for them, you understand, they just think it would be awful if something happened." I say, "So what?" If I don't use my beautiful possessions now, I will simply hand them down to my children who will also save them because their mother saved, and my mother saved. Saved for whom? Saved for what?

I would long to have some dinners with candlelight and wine, even though my husband prefers pizza and beer. I would enjoy the gift of a pretty nightie and be can well afford it) but he always buys me flannel gowns, reminiscent of the days when I had to get up at all hours in a cold house. He's a saver, too. Blast us, Ann. We need it.—A.M.C.

Dear A.M.C.: Haul out the china and the silver and have dinners with candlelight and wine. If your husband prefers pizza, let him have it. Go out and buy a chiffon nightie, with marabou and lace, if you feel like it. He'll notice.

I've yet to see a Brinks money wagon in a funeral procession. Nobody takes anything with them. Today was tomorrow yesterday. People who live for the future and deny themselves the joys of the present are as foolish as those who live in the past.

Dear Ann Landers: What do you have to say about a person who is forever healing, or do they call it ribbing now? The joke is always at the expense of someone else. When the victim reacts unfavorably he is called a poor sport. Get the picture? Sacramento

Dear Sac.: Those jolly jokers are malcontents with a small streak of sadism. People who needle intend to hurt no matter how broad the smile or firm the contradiction. They are my least favorite people—and I let them know it.

Nutritious Navy Beans Still Economical

Whether home-baked or dressed up from a can, white pea beans - some call them navy beans are nutritious, tasty and despite rapidly rising prices, relatively economical.

Some tips for beginning bean cookers:

First, always soak beans before cooking. A quick soak method allows three cups of water for each cup of beans. Bring the beans and water to a full boil; boil rapidly two minutes. Remove from heat and let stand one hour. Bring beans to boil again, reduce heat and simmer gently 30 minutes. (60 minutes if there is no further cooking.)

One cup of raw dried beans makes two to three cups of cooked beans; one pound raw dried beans is about two and a third cups; one pound makes six to seven cups cooked beans.

Oil in cooking water reduces foaming.

Adding one tablespoon of oil for each cup of beans during presoaking will reduce the foaming which occurs in the 2 minutes of rapid boiling.

Baking soda should never be added to the cooking water.

Baking soda speeds up the cooking time, but it also destroys valuable vitamins. If the beans are soaked as recommended, they will be tender when cooked.

Slow cooking makes the difference.

For moist and tender beans, slow cooking (3 to 4 hours) at 300 to 325 is recommended. A heavy pot makes the difference.

A covered, heavy earthenware or cast iron pot is recommended for moist, evenly cooked baked beans.

Beans can be pressure-cooked to save time.

After the beans are presoaked, they can be cooked under pressure in less than one hour with very acceptable flavor and tenderness. Never fill pressure cooker more than 1/3 full.

Dry beans keep indefinitely if stored in a tightly covered container in a dry place.

Baked beans freeze well for up to 6 months.

Ontario Bean Bake

Six slices bacon
three medium onions, chopped
one medium green pepper, chopped one cup cooked ham, chopped two cans tomato soup
two cans beans with pork
one tsp Wordestershire sauce
salt and pepper
two tbsp brown sugar.

Fry bacon until crisp. Remove from pan; drain and crumble. Saute onion and green pepper in bacon drippings until tender. Combine bacon, onion, green pepper and remaining ingredients in a two quart casserole. Bake uncovered at 350 for 40 minutes. Serves six.
Take 3

Chili Beans

1 cup dry whitebeans
2 cups water
1 lb ground beef
¼ cup chopped onion
1 cup tomato juice or canned tomatoes
1 cup chili sauce
1 or 2 Tbsp chili powder (to taste)
1 tsp salt
1 small bay leaf
4 whole cloves
¼ tsp pepper

Bring beans and water to a boil in a covered saucepan. Boil 2 minutes. Remove from heat and let stand, covered, for 1 hour. Return to boil; reduce heat and simmer, covered, for 1 hour. Drain beans, reserving liquid.

Brown beef and onion, stirring constantly; add beans. Cook over low heat, stirring constantly for 5 minutes. Add remaining ingredients. Simmer, covered 15 to 20 minutes. If necessary, add additional tomato juice, canned tomatoes or reserved bean liquid to give desired consistency. Makes 4 servings.

Ontario Maple Syrup-Rum Baked Beans

1 lb. dry white beans
6 slices bacon, cut in 2-inch pieces
½ large onion, chopped
½ tsp. dry mustard
1½ tsp. salt
½ cups maple syrup
one third cup dark rum
2½ cups bean liquid
2 tbsp. brown sugar
2 tbsp. butter

Bring Beans and water to a boil in a covered saucepan; boil 2 minutes. Remove from heat and let stand, covered for 1 hour. Return to boil; reduce heat and simmer, covered, for 40 minutes. Drain, reserving liquid.

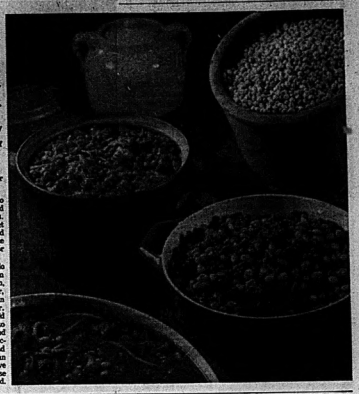
Place half of bacon in bean pot. Add beans. Mix onion, mustard, salt, maple syrup, rum and 2½ cups reserved liquid; pour over beans. Top with remaining bacon. Add remaining ½ cup bean liquid in last hour of baking if necessary. Bake covered 4 hours at 325. After 3 hours of baking, sprinkle beans with, creamed brown sugar-butter mixture and continue baking uncovered for last hour. Makes 4 to 6 servings.

Baked Yellow-Eyed Beans

2 cups yellow-eyed beans
6 cups cold water
¼ lb. salt-pork, cubed
¼ tsp. dry mustard
¼ tsp. pepper
1½ tsp. salt
2 tbsp. catsup
1½ cups bean liquid
¼ cup molasses
¼ cup brown sugar

Combine beans and water. Bring to a full, rolling boil and boil for 2 minutes. Set aside for 1 hour. Return beans to a boil, reduce heat and simmer, covered, for 1 hour. Drain, reserving 1½ cups liquid. Pour beans into 2-quart bean pot and stir in pork. Combine remaining ingredients and pour over beans. Bake, covered, 4 hours at 300. Uncover for the last 30 minutes. Add more bean liquid, if necessary.

Hearty Meatball Bean Soup



Meatballs
1½ lb. ground beef
1 tsp. salt
¼ cup grated onion
OR
2 tbsp. dried onion, moistened
¼ cup dry bread crumbs
1 egg, lightly beaten
¼ cup tomato juice
¼ tsp each black pepper, marjoram, sweet basil, garlic powder

Combine all ingredients and shape into bite-size meatballs.

Soup
1 cup dry white pea beans
2 cups water
1 tsp. salt
1 clove garlic, finely chopped.
½ cup each diced celery, grated cabbage, diced rutabaga, diced carrot
2 medium onions, thinly sliced
4 cups beef broth or beef bouillon
1 can (28 oz) tomatoes
1 bay leaf
1 cup broken spaghetti or small macaroni

Bring beans and water to a boil in a large covered saucepan. Boil 2 minutes. Remove from heat and let stand, covered for 1 hour. Add salt. Return to boil, reduce heat and simmer covered, for 30 minutes. Do not drain.

Brown meatballs, but do not overcook; remove from pan. Drain fat from pan, reserving 2 tablespoons. Stir, fry vegetables and garlic in reserving 2 tablespoons. Stir, tdes or until golden. Add tomatoes and bay leaf to beans and liquid. Cover and simmer 1 hour, stirring occasionally. Add spaghetti and meatballs to soup; simmer an additional 30 minutes. Serve with shredded Cheddar cheese and crusty French bread. Makes 10 servings.

Red Cross Homemakers Report Year's Activities

Red Cross Homemakers have completed the first year of a pilot project in expanded services in conjunction with the Ministry of Health.

The program is designed to make more hospital beds available by discharging patients under home care by Red Cross Homemakers. The provincial government pays for the services of the homemakers for a period of 15 days.

In her annual report for 1973, homemaker service chairman Helen W. Ketcheson reports more than 60 homemakers are sometimes employed.

In 1973 there were 467 cases with 337 children cared for by the homemakers. There were 281 continuing cases.

Mrs. Ketcheson said in her report the function of the service is to keep the family functioning normally when a mother is ill and enable the father to continue to work outside the home.

The fee for the service is $17.00 per day which is reduced in case of need and supplemented by Red Cross funds. Patients are also cared for under the government's welfare program.

Just In Time

BAKERSFIELD, Calif. (AP) — Two stalled vehicles didn't prevent Linda Osborn from reaching the hospital in time to have her baby. Linda, 29, and her husband James began the 20-mile journey in their car, but it broke down. An oil worker nearby loaded them into his pickup, but it soon ran out of gasoline. Eventually two highway patrolmen took Linda to the hospital where she gave birth to a boy. James was left to hitch-hike the rest of the way.

Marcella Svoboda, left, who operates a weekly flea market at Tobe's with partner Henry "Sundance" Ridder, with dealer Jean Wannamaker. Since December 1, the flea market, formerly held in Stirling has been held at Tobe's each Sunday beginning at 10 a.m. Ms. Svoboda reports "good crowds" at the market and says she and Sundance haven't decided yet whether they'll move back to Stirling with the cold weather.

Successful Living

Who Should Enter First?

By DORIS CLARK

Dear Doris: I am a widow 51, keeping company with a man 57. He is very good to me, but he always insists that he walk in first, no matter where we go. I tell him this is bad manners.

He says no; a man is supposed to walk in first. Such as entering a bar, he says the man should walk in first, clear the way for his lady friend, and find a place to sit. Who is right?

Just Wondering.

Dear Just Wondering: Circumstances decide it.

Usually a man steps forward to open a door and hold it for a lady to pass through. But if the door is extremely heavy, it is only common sense for him to go through first and be in a better position to hold it open.

If the door revolves, the man first steps in, allows a lady to go next, then follows her in, the next section and pushes the door for both of them.

When entering a crowded restaurant, he may well walk ahead to clear the way.

Chapel May Be Rebuilt In National Gallery

OTTAWA (CP) — The Victorian Gothic chapel of the Grey Nuns convent here, torn down in 1973 to make way for a shopping centre and office building may be reconstructed in the proposed new National Gallery of Canada.

Jean Sutherland Boggs, director, writes in the latest gallery review that the chapel may be rebuilt as a reading room for the new building the gallery hopes to have completed by 1980, the centennial of its founding. Location of the new gallery is to be decided this spring.

The chapel of Notre Dame du Sacre-Coeur was built about 1857, with an elaborate wooden fan-vault ceiling imitating the famous chapel of Henry VII at Westminster Abbey in London.

Miss Boggs calls it "an endearingly picturesque example of a late flowering of Victorian Gothic."

When the old Grey Nuns convent was threatened with destruction for the new buildings on lower-town Rideau Street, there was a public outcry and efforts made to preserve the chapel. The National Capital Commission and the Historic Sites and Monuments Board sought to preserve it, but could find no real use for it.

The National Gallery undertook to buy it for a token price and put it in storage. The elaborately-carved woodwork was taken apart, piece by piece, and trucked to a storage depot.

There is a local controversy raging about the location of the new building, since word came out that the government might put it across the Ottawa River in Hull, Que. The government wants to put a major federal cultural agency there to try to bring the Quebec city into the cultural orbit of Ottawa.

Miss Boggs, however, favors a site in downtown Ottawa, south of Confederation Square and the National Arts Centre, between Eight Street and the Rideau Canal. This now is occupied by the old defence department headquarters buildings, built as "temporary" in the Second World War and now being vacated with a new defence building across the canal.

Since 1880, the National Gallery has been located in the Lorne Building on the west side of Elgin Street, across from the arts centre. It was originally built as a general purpose government office building and leased to the National Gallery when its old quarters in the Royal Victoria Museum became too cramped.

Government officials and art curators alike agree the National Gallery needs a new building, properly designed and equipped for the display and preservation of its priceless art works. Without proper lighting and humidity control, works of art are in danger of deterioration.

While still in the early planning stage, the new building is expected to be low, rambling, such as last spring's Fontainebleau collection, mainly from the Louvre in Paris.

However, as Mr. Canaday wrote, the gallery's display praise, including that of New York Times art critic John Canaday, for the manner in which it displays its special exhibits, art gallery,

Provincial Views Sought On PEI Land Ownership

OTTAWA (CP) — All provinces have been invited to present arguments in an appeal to be heard later this year by the Supreme Court of Canada on land ownership in Prince Edward Island.

So far only Ontario has given notice it will intervene on behalf of P.E.I. Deadline for acceptance is Monday, Feb. 25.

At stake in the appeal is the legality of a 1973 law passed by the P.E.I. legislature which says aliens and Canadians living outside the province cannot own more than 10 acres of land or more than 330 feet of shorefront without special permission of the island government.

The validity of the law was upheld by the P.E.I. Supreme Court but its decision is being challenged in an appeal launched by two Rochester, N.Y., residents who want to acquire land on the island.

Richard A. Morgan and Alan Marc Jacobson, the two Americans involved in the challenge, want to buy 36 acres of land in Prince County. The land now is owned by an Ontario resident.

No Obligation on Police When Roads Dangerous

OTTAWA (CP) — The Supreme Court of Canada was told Wednesday that members of the Ontario Provincial Police patrolling highways by car are under no obligation to direct traffic at potentially dangerous parts of the road.

Lawyer Rienus Wright, appearing for Constable R. G. Hicks of the Rockland, Ont., detachment in an appeal involving a highway crash, said the Highway Traffic Act provides that officer's may direct traffic "according to his discretion" if he considers it necessary to prevent injury or damage to persons.

The performance or non-performance of the power to direct traffic is a matter that is entirely in the discretion of constables and other police officers, and no duty is imposed upon them to direct traffic," Mr. Wright said.

He was defending his client against accusations that the police officer contributed to the accident which took two lives by alleged failure to take certain actions.

Evidence was that Constable Hicks investigated an earlier crash at the scene and that while he was there a second car left the road because of the icy conditions.

The crash on March 1, 1969, took two lives. The department took the position it is under no legal obligation to sand or salt roads.

A Section of Centennial's Band Rehearses for American Tour

Centennial Band Southbound

Thanks to Centennial Secondary School in Belleville, there will be Canadian content at Can-Am Days at Myrtle Beach, S.C., this year.

The 72 members of Centennial's senior band will play for events during the week dedicated by the Myrtle Beach Chamber of Commerce to Canadian-American relations.

Centennial's principal, W.B. MacKay, is responsible for the band's appearance. At Can-Am Days last year he noted the absence of any Canadian musical content and, on his return suggests that Centennial's band rectify the situation.

The band is travelling to South Carolina March 14 at its own expense. The students have raised the $3,700 required for two buses and the $1,200 for motel accommodation for the six days at Myrtle Beach.

The band will play during registration in the convention hall, give a concert in the the park, an indoor concert and participate in the parade.

Music teacher Monty Emmerson hopes also to arrange school concerts.

The band members are giving up their winter break holiday to play at Myrtle Beach. "It won't be much of a holiday for them, working every day," says their teacher.

Mr. Emmerson has followed the practice of taking his band on tour every year. It gives the students both performing experience and a chance to see other parts of the country. Because there is a two-week break in schools about every three years, Mr. Emmerson tries to take the band to a different place each year on a three-year cycle. In the last three years they have gone on tour to northern, eastern and western Ontario.

The period between now and the June break will be a busy one for the band. Twenty-nine band members are playing for the school's production of Hello Dolly in two weeks and the band is preparing for the Rotary Festival in Belleville and the Stirling Festival of Sacred Praise.

Alarm Box

Belleville firefighters responded to the following calls for assistance overnight:

6:45 p.m.—sewage disposal plant on St. Paul St., injury situation the gas explosion, damage.

11:59 p.m. — Four Seasons Hotel, car fire, damage to front post.

Valuable Horses Lost in Barn Fire

Eleven riding horses, including two thoroughbreds from the Toronto area, were killed in a fire that early Wednesday night destroyed the Blue Creek Riding Stable last west of Consecon.

Most of the horses stabled in the frame barn owned by Keith Bamber as the intersection of Highway 14 and the 5th concession of Sidney township were boarders.

One horse owned by Mr. Bamber, that happened to be tied near a door in the basement barn, was saved from the blaze.

According to Mrs. Bamber, the barn blaze erupted suddenly shortly before eight o'clock and when noticed the blaze was already too far advanced to save the horses.

Mrs. Bamber got her hair singed as she attempted to save the trapped animals. Her husband was away at the time of the fire.

Member of the Sidney and Thurlow fire departments answered the alarm but could do nothing to save the barn, a landmark for many years in the Fuchsco area.

The Bamber house, only 200 feet from the burning barn, was saved by firemen who kept the walls and roof wetted down.

Firemen remained at the scene overnight to protect the house from the smouldering embers.

Mrs. Bamber had no idea what might have started the fire.

"Everything was okay when I did the chores at 6.30," she said.

Also at 7.30 when she happened to look out the window there was no sign of fire. But shortly before eight she noticed a red glow in the window and realized that part of the barn ablaze.

"I grabbed my coat and ran out but the barn already was pretty far gone," she said.

The one riding horse was saved only because it was in a stall with an outside door.

All hay, grain and straw, as well as saddles and other tack for the 12 horses was lost in the blaze. The barn was insured for $8,000.

Formerly owned by the late Harry Lott, the Bamber barn has been in use as a boarding stable for horses for the past three years.

Price Wrong

A story published in Tuesday's Intelligencer indicated the price for premium gasoline at the Gulf station at Western Tire and Auto Supply was five cents higher than it actually was. The correct premium price should have read 62.9 cents.

Dr. Lenk and Plague Vaccine

Shots a Bargain In Quinte Area

It costs a bit more pot to get bubonic plague in Hastings and Prince Edward counties.

Slightly more than being sure of not getting typhus or cholera.

Not that there's a known chance of contacting any of them in the Quinte counties.

But, for those travelling to foreign parts where such exotic diseases stir international health warnings, most preventive shots will continue as a free service of the Hastings and Prince Edward counties health unit.

Vaccination for travelers will represent a small, but crucial, segment of the unit's service, in an era of easy communications. Tourists, businessmen and representatives of agencies with international liaison, are among those who call at the clinics held in Belleville each Thursday afternoon. Of late, school students on mid-term break tours have added to the total.

Aside from smallpox vaccinations - - vaccine for which is provided by the province - typhus and cholera shots are the vaccines most common in demand.

While the service is free, it costs several hundred dollars a year to purchase the various vaccines - - a fact noted recently at the health board's inaugural meeting.

In 1973, purchases of cholera and typhus vaccines cost almost $400. Dr. C.R. Lenk public health officer told the boards.

If each individual had to pay for the shots, charges would be 53 cents for cholera prevention, $1.75 for typhus.

By comparison, bubonic plague vaccination costs $5.50 However, the individual must pay for the plague vaccine after it has been ordered by a doctor.

"But such shots we give very seldom," says Dr. Lenk.

The board briefly considered whether it should charge individually for the vaccinations. But it agreed with the health officer that, aside from its benefits as a freely-available public service, imposing fee charges would involve bothersome, unnecessary office work.

Contrasted to the benefits of preventing even one case of cholera, the expenditure was "peanuts really," said board member Ezzo David, "I think this is a public service that is justified."

Students Nipped On Way to School

Public health and animal control authorities are investigating complaints of a possibly vicious dog in the College St. - Holt area after five students were bitten on their way to schools in the vicinity Wednesday.

Four of the five students were given precautionary tetanus shots at Belleville General Hospital.

Dr. C.R. Lenk, public health officer for Hastings and Prince Edward counties said he did not suspect the dog was rabid. Nonetheless, reports to his office indicated the incident occurred "without provocation" and authorities are pressing investigations.

"To have a vicious dog like that wandering free is asking for trouble," said the health officer.

He said health inspectors of the animal control - by authorities at King George public school and the neighboring Quinte Secondary School.

William Lett, King George principal, said one boy at his school was bitten on the leg. He immediately informed the student's parents who took him to RGH's emergency unit where four QSS students were also sent.

One of the five recently had received a tetanus shot and did not require treatment, said hospital authorities.

The incidents occurred on College some distance from the schools, said Mr. Lott. Had the attacks been closer, further cautions might have been necessary.

Mr. Lott said he wished to "commend" the humane society-for the speed with which it responded to the situation.

Today, Lloyd Ellenton, Counties' chief health inspector, said the dog's ownership had been traced by the OHS. A letter has been sent the owners that the dog must be kept confined for 14 days as a public precaution against any possibility of rabies being present.

Dripping Cars Ice Streets

Automatic car washes and zero temperatures can make for treacherous road conditions in areas adjacent to where such facilities operate.

This was stressed at Monday's meeting of city council by Alderman Stu Meeks, who said that he recently nearly ran two young people down on North Front Street just north of the College Street intersection.

The problem apparently is that cars going through the new automatic car wash at this location continue to drip as they enter the street with the result, that when the temperature is low the water freezes on the roadway.

The alderman said the roadway opposite the carwash was "a sheet of ice" at the time of his near accident.

City Core Apartments Gain General Approval

By AL ZARAS
Staff Reporter

Most of the 50 people attending the second public meeting called to discuss Belleville's draft official plan Wednesday appeared concerned with over-all plan policies and the differences they would make to the city's future direction.

A few had specific areas of disagreement with plan designations of land use.

At the first meeting for plan discussion Tuesday, Metra planning district residents complained about plans for no higher density housing in the Stanley Park South planning unit was discussed by the planners.

In the Central planning district - Foster and East Hill - apartments and highrises were not an issue.

Quinte Planning Board staff explained that Mrs. Jean Wells Monteith, who have been working on the draft plan for two years, did not object to highrises in the district's older sections.

Areas designated were downtown - at the foot of Front St. and at the top and of the downtown core, just south of the Upper Bridge.

All who spoke concerning the highrise designated areas, spoke with approval, feeling that just fill a large instant coffee jar. The paper is soaked in water overnight. Mrs. Watson uses her blender to pulverize the shredded paper to the consistency of putty. Paper paste, white glue, linseed oil and a whitening powder are added and the "clay" is ready for modelling. The wet mache sticks easily to the fibreboard surface. After two or three days drying it is ready for painting.

Those interested in modelling with paper mache, simple household items are used for armatures. Heads can be formed over polystyrene balls, figures over plastic bottles and animals over balloons. Bits of left over paper mache are fashioned by Mrs. Watson into miniature ducks and seals for her grandchildren. Old tins and bottles can be textured with paper mache to become elegant vases.

Those wishing to enrol in the course can do so by telephoning Queen Victoria School. Mrs. Watson will demonstrate papier mache art Saturday afternoon in Lockhart Decorating Centre, Quinte Mall.

Feedback Works

In answer to earlier criticism that 1972 task force recommendations have not been incorporated into any sections of Belleville's draft official plan, Zdenek Kvarda, claimed five of seven recommendations his task force made have been accepted by planners.

Mr. Kvarda was task force chairman of what is now called the Central planning district.

"There was some skepticism at the first meeting Tuesday that public relations wasn't listened to by planners," he said Wednesday. Mr. Kvarda referred to changes levelled at the draft plan by William Hockley during the meeting at Moira Secondary School.

Offering proof, the former task force chairman said only two were not incorporated into the plan for inner core of Belleville.

"But I'm still fighting for those two. Maybe our batting average will go up," he quipped.

The task force recommended that Great St. James St. - now running parallel to Station St. — should be designated for restricted industrial and commercial use. At present, the area north of the bluff parallel to Alexander St. is residential and industrial combined.

Further, the task force recommended that north of Hercshmer Hill a greenbelt buffer zone be included south of a light industrial area.

Planning consultant Jean Wells Monteith took note of Mr. Kvarda's attempt at improving his batting average and will consider his suggestions for draft plan alterations.

The apartments would revitalize the downtown core.

Planners assured people the official plan and the eventual enabling zoning bylaw would end the proliferation of duplexes, triplexes and walkups now scattered within the central district.

Formerly, said Frank Stokmans, QPB deputy director, the older city areas were zoned in such a way that once older residences because run down, a developer could buy them up tear them down, and build the more profitable low density apartments. Under these now outdated zoning bylaws, no restrictions were made against apartments.

The plan now designates most of East Hill and Foster to forbid this type of development. Future widening and resulting relocation of the tree-lined character.

During the subdued give-and-take between audience and planners, most people seemed more concerned with the plan's affect upon the entire city rather than their own specific districts.

Two public meetings remain before the draft official plan goes back to the Quinte Planning board and the consultant for further study. All points made by the public during the meetings will be analyzed for possible inclusion in the redrafting of the plan.

The remaining meetings are Tuesday, Feb. 19 at Quinte Secondary School and Wednesday, Feb. 13 at Ben Bleecker Auditorium.

Garbage Cement?

TORONTO (CP) — Garbage might be used as a fuel source in the manufacture of cement and the resulting ash from the combustion used as part of the finished product, the president of Lake Ontario Cement Ltd. of Toronto said Wednesday.

W. M. Bateman told the company's annual meeting that proposals have been submitted to the federal and Ontario governments for co-operation in establishing a project to burn municipal solid waste in the manufacture of cement.

"Cement is basically composed of the oxides of calcium, aluminum, silica and iron," Mr. Bateman said. "It has happens that these are also the major constituents of garbage."

He said the system is theoretically feasible but it remains to be tried in an actual kiln.

"We should find out for certain what problems exist," he said.

"We need to know how much the shredded refuse might affect the production rates of burning and we need to know whether the ash will affect the properties of cement."

Papier Mache Art

Mrs. Florence Watson works at a papier mache picture, a new technique she will teach adults for the first time as part of the Queen Victoria Community School program. At the rear are a picture and large pig she has created from scrap newspaper. The jar at the left holds one copy of The Intelligencer after it has been shredded as a preliminary step in the preparation of papier mache.

Paper Does Dual Duty As Papier Mache Base

If the paper shortage becomes more acute, a tug of war could ensue between two recycling interests — papier mache artists and environmentalists.

The two groups have the same preoccupation, that the pollution fighter converts waste paper to industrial uses and the papier mache crafts-man turns it into works of art.

With Queen Victoria Community School now offering a course in papier mache art, old newspapers may become prize collectors' items. Shredded newspapers, beaten with water to a putty-like consistency, are the basis of the art originated thousands of years ago by the Chinese.

Florence Watson, who has been painting and modeling in papier mache for several years is teaching the course at Queen Vic every Tuesday night from 7 to 9. On a background of Masonite, she models landscapes, still life and floral designs in textured relief and paints them with acrylics. The result is paintings of unusual intensity and vigor.

Although she has been painting all her life, Mrs. Watson began developing her papier mache technique just five years ago. She has taught schoolchildren for five years, but this is her first venture into adult education.

Although masonite is the preferred background for papier mache art, Mrs. Watson has created flower paintings on the medium of window velvet.

While teaching at Queen Alex. she and her pupils made a 15-by-6-foot replica of a pond in spring and a life-sized papier mache horse for a prize winning float in the Santa Claus parade.

Papier mache, the earliest recycling process, can be used for making everything from household furniture to piggy banks. Mrs. Watson has created whimsical pigs and elephants made by modelling papier mache over a balloon. She is now making an old-fashioned doll for a grandchild, modelling the papier mache head, hands and feet in the manner of doll makers of 100 years ago.

Materials for papier mache art are inexpensive. A panel of masonite and lots of newspapers are the basics. One copy of The Intelligencer, when shredded, fills only just fill a large instant coffee jar. The paper is soaked in water overnight. Mrs. Watson uses her blender to pulverize the shredded paper to the consistency of putty. Paper paste, white glue, linseed oil and a whitening powder are added and the "clay" is ready for modelling. The mache sticks easily to the fibreboard surface. After two or three days drying it is ready for painting.

Those interested in modelling with papier mache, simple household items are used for armatures. Heads can be formed over polystyrene balls, figures over plastic bottles and animals over balloons. Bits of left over papier mache are fashioned by Mrs. Watson into miniature ducks and seals for her grandchildren. Old tins and bottles can be textured with papier mache to become elegant vases.

Those wishing to enrol in the course can do so by telephoning Queen Victoria School. Mrs. Watson will demonstrate papier mache art Saturday afternoon in Lockhart Decorating Centre, Quinte Mall.

Society Will Erect Plaque

PICTON — The Prince Edward County Agricultural Society will erects a plaque at the County Centre in Picton marking its role in the erection of this recreation building.

The decision was made during the annual meeting of the agricultural society held last Saturday.

It was noted that when the County Agricultural and Recreation Centre (The County Centre) first was constructed in 1955 it was principally through the efforts of the society, aided by government grants.

In 1961 the main portion of the building was replaced with the present structure, a public campaign was held to raise funds for the installation of artificial ice.

Several members of the agricultural society feel that its roles in making the recreation centre possible is not known to most persons involved in its operation today. It was agreed to erect a bronze plaque, suitably inscribed for the information of future generations.

Jim is also one of his team's leading scorers, with 10 goals. Robbie Revoy had a hat trick to help Uniroyal Tiger Paws to an 8-5 win over Local 1000.

David Cronkwright also had three goals, but in a losing cause for Local 100.

Clint Becker picked up his fourth shutout of the year and Paul Holland banged in four goals to help power Belleville Union to a 12-0 win over Belleville Jaycees.

Other games showed Whitley Truck Rentals thrashing Warner's Esso Home Heat 4-1. Dixie Lee over Stephan Licence 2-1, and Red Shark and Bowser Lumber playing to a 2-2 tie.

ATOM MINOR

Trevor Powell led the way with five goals as Maher cemented their hold on first place with an 8-3 win over second place Mulroney Sunoco. Eastern Business Equipment took a squasher from Clayton's TV, 1-0, with Tim Semark, and Mike Gauthier sharing the blank.

Quinte Rentals blasted the Belleville Firefighters 12-5, with Bruce Hayman bagging five goals and Wayne Price three. Dave Philips had four goals in a losing cause.

Bill Harvey picked up his first shutout of the season to aid Hawkins' Chips to a 4-0 win over Simpson Sears. Mac's Milk and Red Barn played to a 3-3 tie.

ATOM MAJOR

David Gilbey scored three goals as he and his Harry Queen mates edged Quinte Home Builders 6-5. Terry Millar hung a goose egg on A and D Esso as his Cherney Furniture team won, 4-0.

Belleville Yardmen, led by Dave Levisits' four goal effort, got by Coles' Jewellers 6-4. Wm. Belch and Son, with help from the league's leading scorer, Al Derry, with four goals moved into first place with a 5-4 win over Uniroyal Winter Patrol, who dropped to second place.

In the other games, Ellis Printing beat Reid's Plumbing and Heating 6-4.

n

PEEWEE MINOR

Undefeated Signs Unlimited, led by John Rickett's three goals, got by the Kings, 5-2. TC Construction beat Duby Texaco 8-5 with a three goal outburst by Craig Munro leading the way. Police Association stayed two points off the lead, as they edged Ellis Printing 3-2. Believeau Lumber beat Motorland Chrysler 3-1, and Tim Horton Do-nuts slipped past the Gems, 3-2.

PEEWEE MAJOR

Circle TV got back on the track with five goals from Bobby Spurs and three from Andy Rosati, as they blasted Elliot Motors 'W' 13-1. Bowes and Cocks kept within a point of first place as they bombed the Red Shark. 8-1.

Y's Men doubled the score on Ideal Vendors 4-2, while Belleville Plaza kept hold of first place with a 6-2 win over Lou Williams. Belleville Conductors beat Canadian Legion 3-1, with Dairy Queen being beaten by Bob's Body Shop 3-2.

BANTAM MINOR

Randy Cox scored a hat trick but it wasn't enough, as King Penquins beat his 82's Esso team 7-5. Brooks and Rosak continued their quest for first place as they knocked off the league leading Belleville Real Estate Board 5-3.

Kiwanis Club and Belleville Toyota fought to a 3-3 tie, while Blake Kerr Imperials slipped past MacInroy Maines 3-2.

BANTAM MAJOR

In a rare scoreless tie, David Smith and Mike Davenport picked up shutouts for Allied Chemicals and Avis Rent-a-Car respectively. ANAF Dukes blasted Sidney Inn 10-4, while Art's Esso downed Bennett Real Estate 5-1. Canadian Legion won by the same score over Y's Men's Club, with Belleville Broadloom clenching out of the cellar with a 5-4 edging of Belle Cleaners.

MIDGET

Uptown Billiards beat SACO 5-2, while Warwicks and Weeks were playing Ross Rangels to a 2-2 tie. Vardmen doubled the count on Demark Construction 4-2, while Emperor Penquins were bombed by Canadian Legion 7-2. Mead Johnson edged Sterling Sheet Metal 3-1.

JUVENILE

Don Thompson recorded the shutout as Harvey's Drive-In whitewashed GSD 3-0, while Lou Williams dumped Albert College 6-1. Pioneer Petroleums and league leading leading Arthur A. Sills played to a 1-1 tie.

Stratford Bound

First Time Since 1949

City Sends 4 to Provincials

By MIKE BRADSHAW
Sports Staff

For the first time since the inception of the Belleville Badminton Club (BBC) in 1949 this city will be represented at the Ontario Badminton Association (OBA) Championships in the 16 and under age group.

Susan Wilson, Lee Fleming, Greg Hosford, and Eric McKee are travelling to Stratford this weekend to participate in the provincial competition.

"We expect they'll make an excellent showing," said club coach Judy Pultz. "They don't have a great deal of experience in-competitive play, but what they lack in experience they certainly make up for in talent."

"Probably the one with the most potential of the four is Sue", added the coach, but I'd say that in another two or three years, if they all work at seriously as they are now, they'll be top flight contenders in the province."

At a Central Ontario Badminton meet, hosted by the Belleville Club in mid-December, the foursome made a distinct impression on the under 16 age group.

Greg and Eric McKee combined in Boys' doubles to finish first, with Sue and Lee Fleming placing second in the Girls' division.

The four then went into mixed doubles, where Greg and Sue captured the crown with Eric and Lee making it to the semi-final round.

Sue also participated in the under 19 competitions, even though she is only 15, and was just as successful in that grouping.

She placed first in the under 19 singles, combined with Laurie Preston to win the under 19 doubles, and made it to the semi-finals with Errry Reid in the mixed doubles.

"I think their biggest problem right now," commented Pultz, "is that they tend to underestimate themselves when they play against really good competition. Underestimation is worse than overconfidence."

In another more recent Central Ontario Meet in Trenton, both Sue and Greg were runners-up in the singles competition, with both the girls' and boys' as runners-up in their respective doubles competition. Greg and Sue were the winners of the mixed doubles, while Eric and Lee made it to the quarterfinals.

Since the four have no other way to reach Stratford except by train Friday, neither Greg nor Sue will be competing in the singles matches, since the competitions begin before the train arrives.

Their arrival will be in time, though, for all to show their talents in the doubles and mixed doubles divisions, hopefully to bring all-Ontario wins back to Belleville.

BCI Seniors Stop Sweep

The BCI Seniors were the only team to stop Nicholson Catholic College from sweeping a Bay of Quinte Boys' Basketball tripleheader last night, defeating the NCC seniors 69-32. In the other games Nicholson dominated the scoreboards in both, 49-40 in the junior contest, and 53-28 in the midget game.

Larry Wilson hooped 35 points for the BC seniors in their win, with Gary Donavon adding 14 and Mike Bell 12. Steve Kirby had six.

Chris Kalnay potted 11 for the losers, with Mike Sullivan getting eight and Bruce Bibby six. Bill Wilkinson added five.

Jeff Boyle scored 20 points as the Nicholson juniors led all the way in their win. Dale Wilson hooped 14, while Bruce Collins added six and David Holland five.

Brian Bell had 12 for the BCI squad, with Gord Wright adding 11.

Steve Dolan had 20 of his team's 53 points in their romp over the BCI midgets.

Boyd Kalnay potted 15 with Paul McAlpine getting 14.

John Guthrie was the high scorer for the losers, bagging ten points, while John Geen added six.

Grandelius Named G-M.

DETROIT (AP) — A former Michigan State University football star, Everett (Snoop) Grandelius, was named general manager of the World Football League's Detroit Wheels on Wednesday. The Wheels have yet to name a head coach. Grandelius said talks with the franchise owners had gone in the direction of making him both coach and general manager, but the idea was scrapped because it was "just simply too much to do." Grandelius said tryouts probably would be held in April, and training camp might begin sometime in June.

Quinte Club Scene of Two Spiels

The Quinte Curling Club will be the scene of two major bonspiels this weekend, with the Victoria and Grey Men's Invitational Bonspiel being held Friday and Saturday, and the Southern Ontario Business Ladies' Bonspiel being held Sunday.

The Victoria and Grey Spiel will have 16 rinks competing from Kingston, Trenton, CFB Garrison Curling Club, from Kingston as well, and of course the host Quinte Club.

Three events are scheduled in the tourney, with a round beef dinner in line for the curlers Saturday before the final and championship draw. The final draw is scheduled for 8 p.m. Saturday evening.

Included in the Spiel entries in the Ontario Seniors' title holders of 1974, the Bill Riley rink, of the host Quinte Club.

The rink will compete in the spiel as a warm-up to next weekend's Canadian Seniors' Championships in New Brunswick.

Meanwhile, on Sunday, the ladies go at it in head to head competition, for the right to advance to the all-Ontario finals of the Business Ladies' Curling Association Finals.

Six rinks will be represented, one each from Napanee, Bancroft, Kingston, Cataraqui, CFB, and the host Belleville Club.

Booster Club Meets

The regular Wednesday night meeting of the Bobcats' Booster Club was held last night at the Arena, with no major ideas being presented.

It was passed that the set charge for bus trips to any remaining games be set at $5.00 regardless to where the trip is.

The next trip anyone is to the Saturday game between the Cats and the Toronto Nats. The $5.00 charge does not include a ticket to the game for this contest.

Tickets for the bus are available at McKnight's Variety, 211A Front Street. It will leave the Arena, at 5.30 Saturday night.

The next meeting of the Club will be next Wednesday, 7.30, at the Arena.

Eagles Move Games To Napanee Arena

The Belleville Eagles have arranged to play their remaining five home games of the 1974 season in Napanee.

In a telephone interview, Eagles' General Manager Dick Burrowes said the move has been approved by the OHA, as well as all teams involved. The games will be played the next five consecutive Sunday's with game times for the contests to be 2.30 p.m.

They will start this Sunday, with Barrie visiting on the Eagles, in the game originally scheduled for the Belleville Memorial Arena.

The Eagles have two games remaining with Cambridge, and one each with Barrie, Brantford, and Orillia.

Nordiques Stop Whalers 3-0

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Quebec Nordiques have one of the poorest road records in the World Hockey Association.

But goalie Serge Aubry and his team-mates could take some comfort Wednesday night when they defeated leading New England Whalers 3-0 in one of two games.

Aubry, 33-year-old Montreal native who usually shares goaltending chores with Michel Dejaise and Richard Brodeur, stopped 34 shots—he made 13 saves in the first period and 14 in the second—for his first shutout of the season.

It was the Nordiques' first win on the road after six consecutive defeats. The Quebec club, now on a six-game winning streak, took its last victory away from home Dec. 16 in Toronto, a 4-3 triumph over the Toros.

In the other game, goalie Mike Curran blocked 39 of 41 shots to lead Minnesota Fighting Saints to a 7-2 triumph over Chicago Cougars.

The Nordiques, with 16 wins and 17 defeats on the road compared with a 17-13-3 record at home, moved into second place in the East Division with 37 points, three behind the Whalers and one ahead of the Toros.

The Saints, with five victories in the last six games, remained fourth in the West Division with 33 points, one behind Edmonton Oilers. The Cougars are fifth in the East.

Nordiques 3 Whalers 0

The Nordiques, who missed the playoffs last year with a fifth-place finish, won their fourth game in six regular-season games with the Whalers.

Ronald Leclerc and Bobby Guindon paced the Nordiques to their win Wednesday with a goal and two assists each. Guindon opened scoring with his 19th goal at the 16-minute mark of the second period, and Leclerc followed with his ninth at 14:37.

Andre Gaudette added an insurance goal late in the final period before 7,617 spectators in Boston.

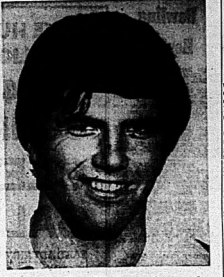
Saints 7 Cougars 2



George Morrison scored his 20th and 27th goals, both in the third period, to lead the Saints to their 20th win in 32 games.

The Saints led 2-1 after the first period and 3-1 at the end of the second when Ted Hampson connected with team-mate Wayne Connelly in the penalty box.

Bob Boyd, his first, Wayne Connelly, No. 30, Steve Carlson, his 34th goal, and Ian Ihnacak, his last six games, and Bob McMillan, his seventh, were the other Minnesota scorers. Mike Walton, Mike McMahon and Keith Christiansen each picked up two assists as the Saints outshot the visitors 47-41.

League Lawyers Meet Today

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Lawyers for the National Hockey League and the rival World Hockey Association will meet today to seek a peace agreement between the two leagues.

The lawyers for both leagues met behind closed doors in the United States district court here Wednesday but there was no announcement that an out-of-court settlement had been reached.

The WHA has anti-trust litigation amounting to more than $50 million pending against the NHL. It's expected that a proposed settlement of the suit will be the subject of today's meeting.

The meetings are being held at the direction of U.S. District Court Judge Leon A. Higginbotham.

There were also unconfirmed reports from Montreal that league governors have been called into session today in Philadelphia.

Clarence Campbell, president of the NHL, who said Monday that his 16 teams had agreed to terms of the proposed settlement, was believed en route to Philadelphia Wednesday night.

Lawyers for both sides said recently that an agreement has been reached in which the two-year-old WHA would drop its legal action against the NHL for several concessions, and pay ment by the NHL of $1.9 million in legal fees incurred by the WHA.

During meetings in Chicago and Philadelphia last week however, the NHL board of governers failed to reach the unanimous agreement necessary for an attempt to seek an out-of-court settlement.

The start of the anti-trust trial has been set for March 25 before Judge Higginbotham. The meeting Wednesday was described by the clerk as a pre-trial conference, but he said the agreement was the main item.

A lawyer for the NHL said he doubted if anything would develop from Wednesday's sessions with the judge. He refused to elaborate, explaining that all lawyers have been sworn to secrecy by the judge.

Rookie Scores Two

Wings Underestimate Turnbull

By GERRY SUTTON

Canadian Press Staff Writer

Defenceman Ian Turnbull is usually ignored when armchair experts rate leading candidates for the National Hockey League's rookie-of-the-year award.

Detroit Red Wings joined in under-rating him Wednesday night and Turnbull scored two goals, his sixth and seventh of the year, to enable Toronto Maple Leafs to tie the Wings 2-2. He also has 31 assists.

Turnbull, a standout among Toronto's rookie crop which includes Swedish players Inge Hammarstrom and Borje Salming, scored his goals on brilliant individual efforts to spoil Jimmy Skinner's debut as interim general manager of the Wings.

Leafs 2 Wings 2

Pierre Jarry and Bill Hogaboam teamed up with less than six minutes remaining to give the Wings the tie. They had a two-on-one break and Jarry, traded to Detroit earlier in the season, scored on Hogaboam's pass at 14:12.

Jack Lynch, obtained from the Penguins in a recent trade, gave the Wings a 1-0 lead in the first period before Turnbull tied the score early in the second.

Turnbull, who starred last season for Ottawa 67s of the Ontario Hockey Association Major Junior A series and was the roster No. 3 pick in the 1973 amateur draft, gave the Leafs a 2-1 lead at 6:39 of the second period. He picked up a loose puck near centre and went around defenceman Brent Hughes before firing a 30-footer past Jim Rutherford.

Turnbull, however, didn't have a perfect game. He was caught up the ice when Jarry and Hogaboam combined for the tying goal. It was Jarry's 11th of the season.

Rutherford was outstanding, particularly in the first two periods when he faced 34 shots. He had 44 saves over-all.

North Stars 4 Canadiens 3

Jude Drouin's goal with three minutes and 14 seconds remaining gave the North Stars their victory.

Minnesota trailed 3-1 after the first period when Pete Mahovlich scored twice for Montreal and Yvan Cournoyer once. However, the Stars came back when Bill Goldsworthy connected at 4:55 of the third period and Dennis Hextall scored 42 seconds later.

It was Minnesota's first win over Montreal in six games this year. The North Stars outshot the Canadiens 38-26.

Flames 1 Hawks 1

Al McDonough, formerly with the Penguins, scored the tying goal for the Flames early in the third period. Later, he was carried off the ice on a stretcher after crashing into the boards. A head first following a check by Dick Redmond.

"He was upright when I checked him," Redmond said. "His legs must have gone from under him when he hit his head on the boards."

Lou Berger, Atlanta's assistant trainer, said McDonough "had a deep gash on the right side of his head, and it looks like a possible concussion."

McDonough discarded his helmet six games ago and, although he had a chance to wear a new one Wednesday, said it was too small and went without it.

The Hawks took a 1-0 lead at 1:49 of the third when Dale Tallon beat goalie Dan Bouchard after taking a pass from Wayne Maki. Thirty-five seconds later, McDonough deflected a slap shot by Tom Lysiak past goalie Tony Esposito.

It was Chicago's 15th tie, nine short of the record set by Philadelphia in 1969-70.

Gallipeau Rink Loses 1st Game

TORONTO (CP) — The luck of the draw proved unlucky for Vince Gallipeau in the opening round of the Ontario Curling Association men's championship Wednesday at East York arena.

Gallipeau, the skip from Canadian Forces Base Trenton, encountered defending champion Paul Savage of Scarborough in his first match and after four ends couldn't get untracked.

While Gallipeau lost 12-4 and conceded to Bill Lovsin's Sarnia foursome 10-2 after 10 ends in the second round, Savage defeated Mac White of Burlington 8-3 to emerge from the day's competition tied for the lead with Earle Morris of Ottawa Navy Club.

Morris directed his rink to an 8-6 victory over the redoubtable Joe Gurowka of Toronto Dixie and a 7-5 win over Doug Palmer of St. Catharines.

Gurowka earlier had defeated Glen Corner's Brampton rink 11-10. Gurowka and Corner received a bye into this year's final with a challenge-round victory last December. Savage and Corner are the only skips returning from last year's competition.

Gurowka is considered one of the top threats to Savage, who won the provincial champion title last year at Orillia with an impressive 9-0 record.

The two rivals were matched end and two on the 11th for the third-round draw in one of the key matches today. In other third-round games, Morris faced White, Palmer faced Dan Otto of Dixie, Corner drew Lovsin and Gallipeau faced Carrie of Pickering.

In Wednesday night's game, Savage broke open a tight battle with the Burlington foursome, scoring three on the ninth and two on the 11th for the 9-3 victory. Savage was ahead only 3-2 after eight ends.

Morris stole one on the 10th end and added the clincher on the 12th in his win over Palmer in the second-round game.

Morris said the ice was truer and easier to read in the evening's games, after most curlers found tricky conditions earlier in the day.

Savage was most successful in adopting to adverse conditions, shooting 80 per cent, while White had 77 per cent scoring. Other skips were not so fortunate. Corner shot 41 per cent and Carrie managed only 28.

In other matches Wednesday, White defeated Currie 14-4, Otto beat Lovsin 13-7 and Currie defeated Otto 8-5.

The winner of the provincial title advances in the Canadian finals in London, Ont., starting March 4.

VIDA BLUE SIGNS

OAKLAND (AP) — Vida Blue, a contract holdout until late in the spring training two years ago, agreed to terms for the 1974 baseball season "no less than three minutes," owner Charles Finley of Oakland Athletics said Wednesday. The 24-year-old pitcher had a 20-9 record and 3.28 earned-run average last season. Terms of his contract were not disclosed.

RACE ON SUNDAY

LONDON (CP) — Sir Desmond Plummer, new head of the Horserace Betting Levy Board, predicted Wednesday the introduction of Sunday horse racing in Britain was inevitable. He said the only two points holding up Sunday racing is special legislation and betting shops being given clearance to open on Sundays.

108 Teams A Record

QUEBEC (CP) — A record 108 teams from Canada, the United States and Europe have entered the Quebec peewee hockey tournament which starts today.

The tournament ends Feb. 16 with finals in four categories.

Last year's category champions, Boston Braves in AA, Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., in A, Gatineau, Que., in B and Buckingham, Que., in C, all have entered.

Included in the European representation will be teams from Amiens in France, Helsinki and Stockholm.

Harkness Resigns as Wings' General Manager

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

Centre Red Berenson was suspicious Wednesday after hockey Harkness resigned Wednesday as general manager of Detroit Red Wings.

"It may be the same kind of resignation Ted Garvin made as coach," said Berenson, past president of the National Hockey League Players' Association.

Garvin was fired by the Wings in November and replaced by Alex Delvecchio.

For Ken Schinkel, coach of Pittsburgh Penguins, the situation was clear. He was fired Wednesday and replaced by Marc Boileau, coach of Fort Wayne Comets of the International Hockey League.

"The time just wasn't right for Ken Schinkel," said general manager Jack Button when asked Schinkel has been offered un named job in the organization.

Button, incidentally, replaced Jack Riley who was fired Jan. 14 by owner Ted Peltier.

"Ned came with us to Toronto Tuesday night . . . to watch the game," said Berenson. "Is that any way for a man to behave if he's planning his resignation?

"You would think that a fellow would plan something like a resignation a week ahead of so."

Guy Charron, one of many players the Wings dealt in trades in the last few years, said:

"We're so far out of it now, all we can hope is we get together and play well . . . We can, state with anyone but most things get tough we've got no body to stand up."

"Sure I'm surprised," said Delvecchio, whose team tied Toronto Maple Leafs 2-2 Wednesday night. "I was talking to Ned this morning and there was no mention made of his resignation."

Bruce Norris, owner of the Wings, said he regretted Harkness' decision.

"Ned has worked extremely hard and with great loyalty to me and with the Red Wings. However, the continued criticism by the media, the greater part of which I find unjust, has made it impossible for Ned to continue."

In announcing his decision, Harkness blasted "almost daily pressures and harassment from the news media."

Harkness, 51, who had a brilliant collegiate coaching career before joining the Wings, said: "I owe my first considerations to my wife, who has been ill, and my own well-being."

Jimmy Skinner, assistant general manager, has been given the position temporarily until a successor has been named. Ted Lindsay, former Detroit star, Schinkel-Hull candidate.

Harkness has been under almost constant bombardment from the news media since he joined the Detroit organization in 1970.

A Detroit television station ran an editorial Wednesday — before Harkness announcement — calling for him to resign because, it said, the Wings were making Detroit look bad.

Harkness joined the Wings as coach after a 26-year college career.

At Detroit he replaced Sid Abel, who devoted full-time his role as general manager. Midway through the season, Abel resigned, Doug Barkley became coach, and Harkness became general manager.

Since then he has traded nearly every player in his effort to make Detroit a contender.

His departure is the latest of a long list of hirings, firings and resignations of Wings' brass in recent years. The team has changed coaches eight times since 1968.

Boileau, 41, is Pittsburgh's third coach in a little more than a year. Schinkel became coach in January, 1973, after Red Kelly, now with the Leafs, was fired.

"I demand work, not perfection," Boileau said. "I believe in discipline. I believe a player has to be a man."

Since taking over as general manager, Button has completed three major trades designed to add muscle to the Penguins' defence.

The Penguins went on to win three straight games. But since then they have lost five in a row and are mired in seventh place in the West Division, 15 points away from a playoff berth.

Button said Boileau was not his first choice as coach. He said Frank Mathers, general manager and president of the Hershey Bears, turned down the offer. The Bears are the Penguins' American Hockey League farm club.

Schinkel, 41, jointed the Penguins as a player in 1967, the team's second year in existence, and finished last year as player-coach.

Jose To Coach

PITTSBURGH (CP) — Jose Pagan, veteran Pittsburgh infielder, was named to replace third-base coach Bill Mazeroski who retired Monday, a spokesman for the Pirates said Wednesday. Pagan played for team from 1965 to 1972 when he was released. He played last year with Philadelphia Phillies.

Bad News Good for Exorcist

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The Exorcist, hailed by some critics as one of the 10 best movies of the year and dismissed by others as "disgust, occultism disgrap" is terrifying, fascinating and in some cases unbelieving record numbers of film-goers.

By the time the devil is put his due, the movie may become the biggest moneymaker of all times.

Warner Brothers, producers of the film, say the picture broke house records in every theatre it played in during the first week of release.

Budgeted at $4.5 million, the film cost about $10 million before shooting was completed. Now in its seventh week, Warner's says box office receipts already have exceeded its cost.

The film is for a novel on possession of a human by the devil came to author William Peter Blatty in 1949, while, as a theology student at Georgetown University, he became intrigued with a priest's account of a recent exorcism performed on a 14-year-old boy.

The story injected by two publishers, Harper and Row agreed to publish the novel which lasted 55 weeks on the best-seller list and sold six million copies in the United States. It now has been translated into 18 languages.

Blatty maintained control of the screen version of the novel and, with himself as scenarist and producer, sold the rights to the book to Warner Brothers for $641,000 and an interest in the picture.

After seeing The French Connection, Blatty was determined that its director, William Friedkin, would direct The Exorcist.

Blatty and Friedkin selected a wholesome Connecticut girl, Linda Blair, to play the possessed girl and surrounded her with accomplished actors — Max Von Sydow, Ellen Burstyn, Lee J. Cobb and Jason Miller. Locations were scheduled for Washington, with interiors at a Manhattan studio.

But the production ran into difficulties, and studio publicists have done nothing to discourage the thought that the problems were somehow related to the subject.

"Virtually the whole set in New York was destroyed by fire," says executive producer Noel Marshall. "I'm not saying that our difficulties in making the film were from supernatural causes, but there were some unexplainable phenomena."

Rebuilding the set caused delays, as did operating the refrigerating system needed so the actors' breath could be seen in the bedroom in which priests seek to force Satan from the girl's body.

It was difficult to maintain the frigid temperature with the movie lights, and the system often broke down, once flooding the entire set.

Filming stretched on from a scheduled four months to 10 months, and the budget swelled. Warner Brothers, however, remained remarkably calm, says Friedkin.

"They never said no to what I asked for," he adds.

Among the things Friedkin asked for were ingredients for the stunning special effects that give the film its grisly brand of horror. And it's the detail that's sticking with the audiences.

"The devil's vomit" is in reality a mouthful of pea soup forced from Linda Blair's lips by tubing concealed to a device on her back. The demon scream as the devil is finally forced from the child's body is a recording of pigs being driven to slaughter. And the barrage of obscenities and blasphemies supposedly uttered by Linda are in fact the words of actress Mercedes McCambridge, whose voice was recorded onto the sound track.

The abundance of explicitness led the U.S. Catholic conference to blast the Motion Picture Association for giving The Exorcist an R rating (under 17 must be with adult) instead of an 'X' Counsel for under 17.

The conference argued that, the subject matter might be misunderstood or damaging to impressionable viewers.

Many persons disturbed by the film turn to the church for help. Some simply seek guidance, others say they feel possessed and inquire about the possibility of exorcism.

The Roman Catholic clergy is as divided as the critics about the film. Some join psychologists in expressing concern over its effect on younger viewers, others see it as a useful parable.

Less than two months after its release, The Exorcist is enjoying an almost superstitious success. Theatre operators in the 32 cities where it is playing report full houses, long lines and extra showings.

Sizable numbers of viewers have responded by passing out sweating out nightmares, calling local churches for guidance and hasting lunch into their pockets.

Theatres Will Co-operate With Sets for Touring

OTTAWA (CP) — The Canada Council touring office is picking up unused costs for a series of regional theatre productions touring Canada this year.

A spokesman said the council has approved a series of deals in principle and will allocate costs later.

One arrangement is a co-operative venture by the Shaw Festival Theatre in Niagara-on-the-Lake, Ont., and Neptune Theatre in Halifax.

The Shaw Festival will produce George Bernard Shaw's The Devil's Disciple for its May-to-August season this year, but under auspices of the touring office it will tour the Atlantic provinces first.

The co-operative venture is to have Shaw Festival do the artistic production while Neptune Theatre builds the theatre sets, thus saving freight hauling to the Maritimes from Niagara.

It will open in Halifax April 4 and tour Charlottetown, St. John's, Nfld., and Fredericton coming back to Belleville and Kingston, Ont., early in May.

The spokesman said the touring office is also picking up part of the tab for an exchange of productions between the Playhouse Theatre of Fredericton and the Belfry Theatre in Victoria.

In this case, duplicate sets are being built in Fredericton and Victoria, and only the casts will travel the short distance in the country.

The new Brunswick theatre group now is touring the province with Arthur Miller's Death of a Salesman, and will close in Fredericton Feb. 19. It will reopen in Victoria about 10 days later.

The Manitoba Theatre Centre is staging Dybbuk, a play by S. An-sky which has been called a Jewish Hamlet. Under touring office sponsorship it will be brought east from Winnipeg to play in Ottawa, Montreal, Toronto, Kingston, Oshawa, and possibly London, Ont., next fall.

In this case, the Winnipeg sets will be brought east, and so far as actors are available next fall the same cast will be employed.

However, the touring office support means that the production will have a longer and wider run than it normally would.

These are the first ventures by the touring office in support of regional theatre since the office was established last summer.

Return to the Stage Bombs for Bujold

MONTREAL (CP) — The advance word on Eux, Genevieve Bujold's chosen vehicle for a return to the stage after an absence of five years, was: "Wordy and a little bit like Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf?".

In an interview a week before Eux opened, Miss Bujold suggested she was returning to the stage because the script by Quebecois playwright, Eduardo Manet, a Cuban-born French playwright.

The rest lies in the direction by Paul Buissonneau.

Eux means them, and the "them" of the title is a couple who are tearing themselves and each other apart in their desperate search for love and some meaning to their existence.

While Manet shows flashes of power in his concepts and presentation, the flashes are persistently extinguished by buckets of words, tonnes of tears and screaming, and a drizzle of confusion.

Director Buissonneau provides the final hosing down by sending Miss Bujold scurrying off-stage for a costume and-or wig change every time she gets stuck.

Probably the most conclusive thing to say of the play and its handling is that, in a city where a French-language audience rarely walks out on a French-language production, a significant number of people walked out on Eux.

Showbiz Shorts

ROME (Reuter) — Plans are under way for a film version of the controversial Italian book Sex in the Confessional, whose authors, Norberto Valentini and Clara di Meglio were excommunicated by the Roman Catholic Church.

The two were acquitted by an Italian court on a charge of offending the Catholic faith after the book was published a year ago. They said their book was based on tape-recordings of confessions taken in churches throughout Italy.

Valentini, commenting Wednesday on plans for the film, told reporters: "We want to show the contrast between the reality of everyday sexual life and the way in which it is treated, in many cases, inside the confessional."

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — The simple hand-written will of country music star Tex Ritter was probated Wednesday by Judge Sheilah Ladon.

The will, written on the front and back of a piece of office stationery on March 4, 1972, left his estate to his widow, Dorothy Fay, and their two sons, Johnathan and Thomas.

Ritter, 68, died of a heart attack Jan. 2.

He was born Maurice Ritter, but elected to himself throughout the will as Tex and signed it with the pen name.

The family lawyer said the estate had not been completely assessed, but is believed to be worth between $10,000 and $20,000.

Mrs. Ritter will receive 50 per cent and the sons 25 per cent each.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences will give the Irving G. Thalberg Award to Lawrence Weingarten, a producer whose movies include Cat on a Hot Tin Roof and The Unsinkable Molly Brown.

The award is presented from time to time to movie-makers who display "consistently high quality of motion picture production."

The last recipient was Ingmar Bergman of Sweden in 1970.

Also named to receive special awards the night the academy presents its Oscars were Groucho Marx; Lew Wasserman, who heads the MCA talent agency, and Henri Langlois, founder of Cinematheque Francaise.

Your Horoscope

By BERNICE BEDE OSOL

Thursday, Feb. 7

Aries (March 21-April 19) Enterprise and effort will pay off for you today. Put a little something extra into work or service you're performing.

Taurus (April 20-May 20) You won't go unnoticed by members of the opposite sex. If you're out in public, watch from the corner of your eye how the heads turn.

Gemini (May 21-June 20) There's something you can now do to help one of your family. You may have to put yourself out a little. You'll feel better for doing it.

Cancer (June 21-July 22) If you feel you need some inspiration, speak to that special friend of yours who is great at pep talks.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22) Make today's goals ones that enhance you in the material sense. Visualize something you want, then work to get it.

Virgo (Aug. 23 - Sept. 22) You'll perform best if what you do is harmony with your future plans. Take care of the present but think a little ahead.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) It's best you do what has to be done now without calling too much attention to your task. When it's finished, others can be told.

Scorpio (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Avoid lackadaisical friends today. They'll make you nervous and impatient. You need pals who can equal or match your drive.

Sagittarius (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Now is the time to put out that extra bit of energy you've been saving for the homestretch. Pursue your goals with vigor.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) This is not a time for timid measures. Think in bold terms. Be prepared to back your ideas with action.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) The desire to please your family will serve as special encouragement today. What you'll be doing is for them. You won't come up short.

Pisces (Feb. 20-March 20) Without being hostile, make your demands known to one you'll be negotiating with. Then the bargaining will be fair.

Blood Pressure Can Do Damage

By G. C. THOSTESON, MD

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Yesterday I talked with a man who is 46, into going to a clinic where they were giving free blood pressure readings as a public service.

He went early in the morning and his reading was 184-98. he doctor told him to see his own doctor, which my husband hasn't been able to accomplish.

He doesn' drink, but smokes a pack and a half a day. He is not overweight. He has an office-manager job which does give him considerable tension, but no exercise except occasional golf and fishing.

He had a sister who died of a stroke at 37. She had high blood pressure for about 10 years. Another sister is doctoring for blood pressure around 210-130.

We have two small children and my husband is a very easy-going person who never seems to lose his temper, but I'm worried about him and think he should see our doctor. Don't you?—Lb.

The time to control high blood pressure is before it has had time to cause a stroke, or damage the heart or kidneys. That is done oftener irreversible damage.

That's one of the problems in combating high blood pressure—the symptoms never seem often for years, and either doesn't bother to find out what his blood pressure is or, like your husband, knows it is high but doesn't do anything about it.

That's why there is a concerned effort now to find these people who ought to have treatment. That's why the clinic tested your husband.

His pressure is far above normal for a man his age. Two sisters have had high blood pressure, and one of them died from it.

What else does he need to realize he ought to start getting treatment? It is probable that treatment for him will be relatively simple—but it is important that he begin it now instead of waiting until it is too late.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: My 12 year-old daughter hasn't started her menstrual cycle yet. Should I be alarmed or take her to my doctor? Incidentally, I was 15½ when I started.—Mrs. Y.W.

I see no cause whatever for alarm, and wouldn't bother to do anything about the matter until she's at least 16 or maybe even older. Particularly in view of your own history.

Some girls do start menstruating at 12 or 13, but a lot don't. Some don't start for another three or four years. There's nothing abnormal either.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: My nephew, age 4, sometimes visits overnight. He wakes up crying and says he either has a headache or stomach ache. When I lie down beside him and talk to him, he falls asleep and everything seems all right again. I understand that this also takes place at his parents' home. Is this a serious problem?—E.S.

Serious? No. Disconcerting, yes.

He has been in a deep phase of sleep. He wakes up and finds himself alone. But the aches and pains vanish when he has some companionship and gets some attention. This phase shouldn't last long.

TORONTO (CP) — One vehicle on display at the Speed-sport Show at the Canadian National Exhibition was obviously designed for the future. It's a tow truck, made of reinforced plastic. One unusual feature is the engine—it runs on pure alcohol.

REVIEW CALLED FOR

TORONTO (CP) — Liberal leader Robert Nixon has called for a review of the policies and decision-making practices of the Ontario Housing Corp. A major reason for Mr. Nixon's demand has been the failure of the OHC to switch to open tendering for projects and abandon its use of the controversial proposal system. Itxing housing costs was also cited by Mr. Nixon as another reason behind the review.

Win at Bridge

Test yor best play for six

By Oswald and James Jacoby

Here is another Paul Lukacs test-your-play problem from the Bridge World magazine.

West opens the three of clubs and it is up to you to play the hand. Paul points out that must take the heart finesse some time—or other so he suggests that after winning the club you lead dummy's king of hearts; lead toward your hand and finesse the Jack.

It does and we can assume that West will lead another club. If you don't want to go down more than one you play spades right away. If you want to take the best play for your contract you should cash all your heart, diamond and club winners to see if you can get any information about your opponents' distribution.

You do! Everyone follows so you are right back where you started except that you have noted the fall of the spot cards from East and West and it looks as if West started with only three cards in diamonds and clubs. Hence he is more likely to be long in spades.

Also, he might have led a spade if he didn't hold the queen so you decide to play him for it. You lead your king of spades; carefully play the jack or 10 from dummy; lead your nine and make the slam.

CARD Sense 4

The bidding has been:

West	North	East	South
Pass	1♥	Pass	?

You, South, hold:
♠ AK764 ♥ A3 ♦ 106 ♣ K1043

What do you do now?

—Bid two spades. A jump to four hearts is inadequate. If playing quicker tricks you might bid three diamonds, but all in all this type spade call is best.

TODAY'S QUESTION

Your partner jumps to four spades. What do you do now?

IN MEMORIAM

BURKETT — Treasured memories of a dear husband, Ralph Burkett, who passed away February 7, 1973.
From you've gone a true sad we remain.
Sadly missed, we have no one to blame
Watch slowly down the path of death.
For soon we will follow you,
We want to know and see you with
That we may walk the same,
For some day down this lonely road.
You'll hear us call your name
—Sadly missed and lovingly remembered by Mom and Dad.

DARLING — In loving memory of a dear mother, Mrs. Grace Ballard who passed away Feb. 7, 1966.
Mist the mountains purple,
Mist the valleys green,
But the sweet memory of your dear mother shall never die.
To some she was a neighbor,
To others part of the town,
But to us she will be remembered,
As long as life shall last —Missed by daughter Ruth, son-in-law Ken, grandchildren Steven and Sharon.

CARDS OF THANKS

We sincerely appreciate the many expressions of sympathy, floral tributes, donations, cards, notes and acts of kindness during the loss of our beloved father, Fred Wm. Powell, who passed away January 24. A special thanks to the Memorial Police Officers, Fred Hamilton, Ernie Ellis, Ed Ellis, Ken Ellis, Jack Ellis, Jr., John Ellis, Jr., Fred Ellis, to the Eagle Funeral Home for their courteous service, to Rev. Ralph Hall of Hall's Funeral Home, the West-end neighbors and the Bay View Women's Institute for their hospitality following the funeral.
The Powell Family

The family of the late Mrs. Dorothy Ann Hall wishes to express their appreciation and gratitude to relatives, friends and neighbors for their kindness, floral tributes and expressions of sympathy in their recent bereavement. Our deepest thanks and gratitude to all Belleville General Hospital personnel for their care.

Farm, Forest and Sea Provide Work for Algerian Majority

ALGIERS (CP) — Agriculture, forest products and fishing are by tradition the main areas of employment in Algeria.

More than 60 per cent of the workers are involved in agriculture which only contributes about 10 per cent to the gross national product.

This is why the government established an agrarian reform program in 1970 which envisages an increase in irrigated lands, increased utilization of selected seed strains and modernization of farming techniques and equipment.

The agricultural sector is unable to meet the country's demands and the government must import millions of dollars of wheat annually, mainly from Canada.

The government hopes the agrarian reform program will result in national self-sufficiency by 1980.

As for the country's forests, they have been nearly all destroyed or badly damaged by war or by disease, fire or insect pleasures.

Forests cover only one per cent of the country and represent only a minimal part of the Algerian gross national product.

This sector is currently undergoing a reforgazition program. Reforestation programs are under way and severe conservation and fire prevention measures have been in effect for several years now.

Canada, through the Canadian International Development Agency, is participating in a fire prevention program in the Annaba region as well as in an ambitious "green belt" program in the southern part of the country.

This project consists of planting a forest belt 13 miles deep and about 1,000 miles long, aimed at halting the advance of the Sahara desert.

The Algerian government undertook this program, which could span one or two generations, following studies which showed that Algeria, given the current advance rate of the desert, could disappear within two centuries if nothing is done.

Once the forest belt is built, villages will be established there.

Canada also is participating in development programs in the fisheries sector, one of them being a shrimp-fishing project at El Kala and another a fisheries and merchant marine school in Bou-Ismail.

Sales of oil and gas represented 75 per cent of Algerian exports in 1972 and 1973 oil production is expected to reach 65 million tons, a 45-per-cent increase over 1970 production levels.

The production of gas is expected to rise to meet the needs of France, the United Kingdom and the United States.

Over the next four years, Algeria also plans to devote much effort to the transformation of its mechanical, metallurgical, electrical and chemical industries, with a view to economic independence by 1980.

The government plans to continue to contribute 25 per cent of its budget towards education and to increase the quality of professional and technical training centres.

Since 1963, Canada has contributed about $27 million in various aid programs to Algeria and Canadian products have been introduced to the Algerian market through various co-operation projects, with the hope they will find a market when Algeria achieves economic independence.

Sales to Algeria from Canada have, in recent years, been steadily increasing and totalled $27.7 million in 1972. Most of the sales concerned deliveries of wheat, wood, asbestos and aluminum.

Canadian imports from Algeria remain minimal, having passed the million-dollar mark in 1973 for the first time. These are mainly sales of wine, tires and oil.

Visitors from Caribbean

Hubert James (left), Norman Saunders, and Liam Maguire (right) a three-man delegation from Turks and Caicos Islands in the Caribbean, about 160 miles north of Haiti, explain to a news conference in Toronto the benefits both Canada and the islands would reap through close association. Mr. Maguire, member of the state council, the islands' legislative assembly, feels that some form of economic association with Canada would enable the islands' economy to develop and would give Canadians a winter home in the sunny south (CP Photo).

Only Way To Fly

WINNIPEG (CP) — "Everybody should drive across Canada," says Brig. R. A. MacFarlane, the first man to drive across the country in a rubber-tired automobile back in May, 1947.

"You don't know this country by flying over it, and trains aren't the same either," the 82-year-old pioneer said recently at his Winnipeg home. "The difference between the people in Vancouver and the Maritimes you wouldn't believe."

Although staying away from highway driving now, the brigadier still has some strong feelings on modern motoring.

"Judging driving today, with the speed of the automobiles, the quality of the roads and the complicated cloverleads, I think it demands a defensive driving course for most people.

"Concentration is the most of the time-it-is on, or an essential thing," he said. "I even think it is undesirable to smoke while you are driving. When you are trying to light a cigar or cigarette you take your eyes off the road."

Brig. MacFarlane, with the late Kenneth MacKinney accompanying him, drove the 4,743-mile distance from Lounburg, Cape Breton Island to Victoria in nine days, averaging about 16 hours driving each day.

Unemployment Rates Lower Than Estimate

OTTAWA (CP) — Unemployment rates through most of 1973 were a little lower than originally estimated, latest revised figures showed Wednesday, but a Statistics Canada official said the changes were not significant.

The new figures revising seasonally adjusted jobless rates put them from one-tenth to two-tenths of one per cent lower than original reports in nine months of last year. The figure for one month, July, was revised slightly upward, and there was no change for the first two months of the year.

For instance, the December seasonally adjusted unemployment rate now is listed at 5.4 per cent of the country's labor force, down from the 5.6 per cent given at the time of Statistics Canada's regular monthly labor force report.

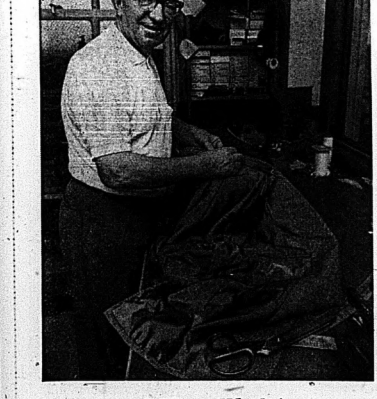
Reinstated Teacher Protests New Position

GUELPH, Ont. (CP) — A high school teacher, fired last year by the Wellington County board of education, then ordered reinstated by a board of reference, is protesting the position he was given.

A lawyer for teacher John Wesley Heald, 30, said Wednesday the school board decision to transfer Mr. Heald from one high school where he was assistant head of English to a leading post in the English department of another school was tantamount to a demotion.

Mr. Heald, a teacher for 24 years, was dismissed last May for what the school board called "intolerence of the failure of students to measure up to standards."

Reeve in Land Deal



TORONTO (CP) — The Globe and Mail says that a former reeve of Collingwood Township while in office made a profit of $60,000 between 1970 and 1972 selling land to the Ontario government for a new provincial park.

David McNichol of Ravenna, Ont., sold almost 500 acres in Beaver Valley to the ministry of government services for the proposed 5,000-acre Kolapore Uplands provincial park, says the newspaper in a story from Owen Sound.

It says Grey County registry records in Owen Sound show Mr. McNichol assembled all the land while he was in public office, adding that all except 25 acres was bought and resold within the last three years.

The article quotes a government land acquisition official as saying that since 1969 the province had purchased eight properties totalling 500 acres from Mr. McNichol for $119,500.

Mr. McNichol is reported by the newspaper as saying he had no advance knowledge as reeve that the province was planning the park in Beaver Valley, 20 miles east of Owen Sound.

Still at Work

After spending 65 years in the tailoring business, 72-year-old Angelo Ruocco says he keeps thinking about retiring but just can't put his need to down. Over the years, he has made suits for lieutenant-governors, senators, judges and lumber magnates. (CP Photo)

CP News Roundup

Rural Home Building Increases

OTTAWA (CP) — The current hunger for home-ownership coupled with high land prices in urban centres is apparently behind a spectacular jump in house construction in rural areas in 1973, say government housing experts.

They say many home-buyers seem to be looking for cheaper homes in small towns and country areas where land prices are lower.

Demand for new housing—particularly single-family homes—is growing despite last year's record-breaking pace of 269,529 housing starts.

The year-end inventory of newly-completed homes in urban centres with populations of 10,000 and more was 2,393 units, 46 per cent below the 1972 total, says Central Mortgage and Housing Corp. So people are gobbling up houses as quickly as they are built and still demand more.

CMHC said the number of vacant new row and apartment units was 8,666, down 16 per cent from the previous year. The corporation includes condominiums in the apartment section.

The thirst for single-family homes is reflected in the 15 per cent increase in starts of single-detached houses in 1973, reaching a year-end total of 191,553. The over-all increase for all types of housing was seven per cent.

No Plans Yet For Four Rivers

OTTAWA (CP) — Development of the water resources of four major Northern Ontario rivers is not imminent and detailed surveys of their potential are not justified at this time, states a federal study released Wednesday.

The survey of the drainage basins of the Albany, Severn, Winisk and Attawapiskat rivers, which include one-third of Ontario's area, was undertaken to assess power potential and the possibility of diversions to help maintain water levels of the Great Lakes and Lake Winnipeg.

But federal Environment Minister Jack Davis and Ontario Environment Minister James Auld said in joint news release that "diversion of Northern Ontario waters to the Great Lakes does not seem to be a viable way to develop power or to regulate Great Lakes water levels."

Ready for Home

HOUSTON (AP) — Skylab 3 astronauts are coming home Friday from man's longest space journey, and they're ready.

"It's a nice place to visit, but we wouldn't want to live here all the time," commander Gerald Carr said Wednesday as the astronauts neared the end of the 84-day trip.

No Bananas

NEW YORK (AP) — Two trucks carrying bananas from New York to Ontario were vandalized while their drivers drank coffee early today in a lower Manhattan diner, police reported.

Police said the two drivers, John Derenlowski, 40 and Raymond Floog, 46, both from Ontario, had picked up bananas at Pier 52 near Gansevoort Street.

The vandals punctured tires, cut air hoses and tampered with refrigeration lines, lowering the temperature to 20 degrees below zero in one of the trucks, police said.

Puck Deadly

CLINTON, Ont. (CP) — The puck that killed an 18-year-old Clinton youth in a hockey game here Jan. 27 was likened to a lethal weapon at a coroner's inquest Wednesday.

Dr. John Coles, testifying at the inquest into the death of Phillip Steven Evans, said the velocity of a puck shot by a w e l l-conditioned teenager might reach speeds up to 80 miles an hour.

"This is a lethal weapon" when it strikes a part of the body such as the head or heart, Dr. Coles testified.

Lack Engines

TORONTO (CP) — Strikes by independent truckers in the Maritimes are disrupting engine block supplies to Chrysler Canada Ltd. and could result in a temporary layoff of 800 workers next week in Windsor, Ont., President Ron W. Todgham said Wednesday.

More Births

OTTAWA (CP) — The number of births in Canada increased 1.5 per cent in 1973, to 347,361 from 342,550 in 1972, Statistics Canada reported Wednesday. The increase came wholly from Quebec and Alberta.

Draftsman's Error at Root Of Pipe Mixup, Inquest Told

SUDBURY, Ont. (CP) — A chain of communication lapses following a slip of a pencil by a draftsman has been cited as the apparent cause of a mixup in medical gases that took at least one life at Sudbury General Hospital last year.

An inquest into 23 deaths at the hospital was told Wednesday that mislabelling of a section of drawings led to nitrous oxide entering one end of a section of pipes and emerging from oxygen connections at the other end.

The man who supervised the final link-up said he had not been told of the error in the drawings, known to others, and had not seen a marked-up copy of the plans which might have set him right and which may still be lying around in a tool box.

The switched gas was fed into four rooms of a new wing in which all the patients whose deaths are under inquiry were prescribed oxygen in the May-September period of last year. The one death examined in detail, that of six-year-old Catherine Dominic Sept. 7, has been definitely blamed on the anesthetic nitrous oxide.

Aldo Defend, the foreman who followed the blueprint in directing the final hookup, testified Wednesday the wrongly-connected gases were in the new wing's central pipe system between mid-January of last year and Sept. 24, the day he made a simple repair after the girl's death aroused suspicion.

For several days the inquest jury has been hearing evidence of piecemeal installation of the gas line under four different foremen and over a period of more than six months in 1972 and early 1973.

It remained for Mr. Defend, an Italian-born plumber who came to Canada in 1966, to fit in a key piece of the jigsaw Wednesday. From the testimony and exhibits, the record indicated that the gas substitution began with the fact that two parallel lines on a design drawing representing oxygen and nitrous oxide pipes were labelled respectively O and NO at one point, but had these designations reversed further on.

A whole series of coincidental information gaps, erroneous assumptions and checking lapses apparently combined into the fatal result, including:

—At least one of the three foremen who preceded Mr. Defend knew of the drawing error, told an architect he was adopting one of the two pipe sequences shown, and was advised to go ahead but to mark up his office drawing to show this.

—The foreman, Reg Robert, said he gave orders for the marking but investigators have not been able to locate such marked drawings.

—An apprentice, Jim Hendry, testified Wednesday he plotted the work on some drawings used by the men actually doing the pipes in June, 1972, and they may have been left in a tool box in the hospital when that part of the job was done.

—No official of the mechanical engineering firm of Field, Crowther and Partners, which designed the gas system and in whose office the drafting error occurred, apparently was told of the slip until too late.

—Foreman Defend told of a series of exhaustive tests he and other workmen made, but these proved nothing more than that gas of some kind was emerging under pressure from all outlets.

Housing Warranties Program Is Opposed

HALIFAX (CP) — The federal government and the residential construction industry appear to be on a collision course over two major ingredients in Canadian housing.

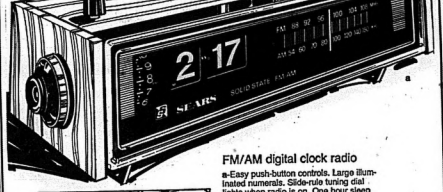
Proposals for greater government control of housing warranties and land assembly were rejected by the Housing and Urban Development Association of Canada (HUDAC) at its annual meeting.

At the last day of the conference Wednesday, HUDAC said in a statement it opposed federal proposals for a national council to create and administer a new-home-warranty and insurance plan.

Urban Affairs Minister Ron Basford told the conference Monday that Ottawa was determined to press ahead with a universal housing warranty insurance policy representing "all interested parties."

Among other things, the warranty system would provide for on-the-job inspections, insurance against defects in construction and a simple arbitration procedure to rule on warranty disputes.

HUDAC is prepared to introduce a warranty system with some input from government and consumers, but industry spokesmen said they would not give up control.



A unanimously adopted executive resolution said "... a HUDAC-owned and operated plan is the most efficient and effective means of serving the legitimate needs of the home buying public."

Mr. Basford has contended that an industry-controlled plan would have little credibility among consumers

Injunction Considered Against Madawaska Dam

ARNPRIOR, Ont. (CP) — Ontario Federation of Agriculture (OFA) officials will meet area farmers here today to discuss the possibility of seeking an injunction to halt construction of a $78-million Ontario Hydro dam and generating station here.

"Our lawyers said they (farmers) had good reason to back up an injunction," said OFA President George Hill Tuesday night.

"They were quite hopeful of success in the event the farmers still wish to proceed," he said.

The farmers, who have said the project will inundate valuable land, destroy roads, ruin woodlots and flood Madawaska River tributaries, had asked the OFA to seek an injunction on their behalf to halt the project.

The farmers also are angered over compensation settlements offered by Ontario Hydro.

Ontario Energy Minister Darcy McKeough told the farmers last week the project is irreversible.

Trudeau Flies Home Looking Tanned, Rested

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau arrived home at 9:30 p.m. EST Wednesday, looking tanned and rested after a 10-day skiing and working holiday in Europe.

The prime minister spent a week skiing at St. Moritz, Switzerland and then attended a ten-day Club of Rome meeting in Salzburg, Austria.

The club is an informal affiliation of about 30 economists, scientists and businessmen who try to project growth trends over the next century.

Mr. Trudeau flew from Lahr, West Germany, to Montreal on a commercial CP Air flight and then to Ottawa on a ministry of transport Viscount.

Met at the airport by officials and office workers, Mr. Trudeau said he hoped to join his wife in Antigua, where she has been holidaying since he left for Europe.

"I'll have to pick up a copy of the throne speech and have meetings in the next few days, but I hope to go for a rest," he said.

The Commons is adjourned until Feb. 28 when the current session is expected to be prorogued and another started immediately.

Sex Good for Man Following Heart Attack

LONDON (Reuter) — Sex is good for a man recovering from a heart attack, but only if it's with his wife, a United States specialist said Wednesday.

Dr. Nathaniel Wagner, a researcher from Washington University, said recovering cardiac patients could die from excitement with a mistress.

Wagner wrote in the British Journal of Sexual Medicine that once a male patient had recovered enough to take regular, gentle exercise he should be encouraged to resume a normal sex life.

Tax Tips

Child Care Expenses

For further information, call the District Taxation Office. If you live in a toll area, ask your long-distance operator for ENTER 4,600 and your call will be placed without charge.

Question: Are child care expenses deductible for all children regardless of their age or is the age of the child important at all?

Answer: Expenses are deductibles for children who are under age 14 at any time during the year or, if the child is 14 or over, he must have been dependent upon his parents because of physical or mental infirmity.

Question: What kind of expenses are deductible?

Answer: Deductible expenses include costs of babysitting and day nursery care, and up to $15 per child per week for lodging paid at boarding schools and camps. If child care expenses are to be deductible, they must be for care in Canada; furthermore, payments for such items as clothing, transportation, education or medical care are not considered to be child care expenses.

Question: Must I keep receipts for child care expenses?

Answer: Yes. Deductions claimed for child care expenses must be supported by receipts. The name and address of the person to whom you make payments for child care must be provided on all receipts. Except for an organization such as a day nursery, the social insurance number of the recipient must also be included on the receipt. You will not be required to attach these receipts to your return but you must keep them in the event the Department wishes to inspect them.

Question: How much may be deducted for child care expenses and does it matter to whom the payments are made?

Answer: A taxpayer may deduct the amount actually spent on child care provided it does not exceed the least of $500 per child, or $2,000 for the family or two-thirds of the taxpayer's earned income for the year.

There are two further requirements regarding the person to whom child care payments are made. First, child care expenses are not deductible if they are paid to a person claimed as a dependant for tax purposes by either of the parents, or to a person under 21 who is related to either parent by blood, marriage or adoption. Secondly, any allowable deduction for child care expenses must be supported by a receipt which indicates the name, address and social insurance number of the person to whom payments were made.

Question: Can a father deduct baby-sitting fees from his income?

Answer: Child care expense can be deducted by the father if, during the year, he was single, widowed, divorced or separated by a written agreement. He may also make the deduction if the mother is incapable of caring for herself or the children, or if she is confined for 14 days or more to bed, hospital, wheelchair, mental hospital or prison. The father's deduction is limited to $15 a week for each child up to $60 per week. The same limitations of $500 per child or $2,000 per year for the whole family also apply in this case.

Question: When the father and mother both work, can either of them claim the child care expenses?

Answer: No. When both parents work only the mother can claim the child care expenses.

Question: Can mother hire her older child a baby sitter?

Answer: The rule is that a mother cannot claim the amounts paid to a person who is under age 21, and related to her or her husband by blood, marriage or adoption or if the person is claimed as a dependant.

Suspicions Aroused

LONDON (CP) — The fashionable Carlton Tower Hotel in Knightsbridge sent out dozens of apologetic letters following invitations to businessmen to pay a return visit to the hotel's revamped Chelsea Room Restaurant. The reason many of the recipients had never visited the hotel, but their wives began firing suspicious questions at them.

Soaring Food Costs Give Index Big Push

OTTAWA (CP) — Sharply-climbing grocery prices in January helped launch 1974 inflation at an even faster pace than last year's 22-year record rise in living costs, the government reported today.

Grocery prices, the chief factor in 1973's inflation, rose another 1.2 per cent last month to stand 15.6 per cent higher than a year ago.

January's over-all rise in typical family living costs was eight-tenths of one per cent, which would add up to an annual rise of 9.6 per cent if it were to continue at that rate each month. Last year's total living-cost rise was 9.1 per cent, sharpest since the Korean War year of 1951.

Many key economic groups have warned that living costs will continue to rise as swiftly as they did last year, and perhaps faster.

Larger increases in the price of crude oil imported from the Middle East and South America late last year have begun to push up prices of oil products in Eastern Canada, adding to the inflationary spiral.

The only major price category to decline last month was clothing, down one-tenth of one per cent but 7.3 per cent higher for the year.

The over-all January living-cost increase of eight-tenths of one per cent put the government's consumer price index at 157.6 of its 1961 base of 100.

The figure means that a typical family whose living costs were $100 per week 13 years ago now must spend $157.60 weekly to maintain the same standard of living. The figure was $1.20 per week higher than a month earlier and $13.10 per week more than a year earlier.

Wage figures reported earlier by Statistics Canada indicate that the purchasing power of some four million workers has been lagging behind rising living costs for about six months.

January's living-costs report said the most sour note in food increases was an almost 35 per cent rise for sugar in a single month, putting the price almost 47 per cent higher than a year ago.

The only major food items to decline in January were pork and poultry, down 1.2 per cent and seven-tenths of one per cent, respectively but up 22 per cent and 37 per cent for the year.

Beef prices rose eight-tenths of one per cent last month and were up 22 per cent over the year, the report said.

Prices of both fresh and processed fruit and vegetables climbed in January, up an average of 2.7 per cent, including a 7.4 per cent hike for fresh vegetables.

U.S. Trucks Moving But Pact Resisted

WASHINGTON (AP) — More trucks were reported moving on U.S. highways today, but resistance to the proposed settlement of the crippling nine-day shutdown by independent drivers remains strong.

Thousands of drivers rallied around the men and groups which touched off the shutdown They vowed to keep their rigs parked until they get lower diesel fuel prices, the demand which started the strike movement.

The violence continued. An Ohio trucker was critically wounded early today in an ambush near East Liverpool, the Ohio Highway Patrol reported.

Lawrence Haft, 48, of New Waterford, hit by gunfire from a nearby field, was in critical condition.

He was driving a tanker truck in company with another at the time of the shooting.

Near Littleton, Mass., two truck drivers were killed Thursday night when a car struck one of their parked vehicles on a highway and pinned them between the rigs, state police reported.

"I think we are a long way from ending this mess," said strike leader J. (Blue) Hill. Edwards in Kansas City. "As long as the government refuses to talk sense, we won't either." And 500 strikers attended a meeting with Edwards Thursday night vowed to stay shut down.

So did drivers attending Thursday night meetings in Joplin, Mo.; Brantford, Conn.; Wildwood, Fla.; Coates, Minn.; Palmyra, Ill.; Moorhead, Minn.; Glasgow, Del.; and Phoenix and Tucson, Ariz.

"Why Ralph Nader. We were just talking about you."

Skylab Crew Is Back

ABOARD USS NEW ORLEANS (CP) — Skylab 3's astronauts came aboard Friday from man's longest space voyage today, splashing down with pinpoint precision in the Pacific Ocean after 59 days in orbit.

The Apollo test ship carrying Gerald Carr, William Pogue, and Edward William parachuted into the sea 3.4 miles from this recovery ship.

The return—accomplished despite a leak in one of the jet thrusters—marked the end of the space-flight phase of the multi-billion-dollar Apollo test math's ability to withstand the rigors of space.

During nearly three months in space, the astronauts had circled the globe 1,214 times, travelled 34½-million miles and gathered a wealth of scientific and medical data on man, his Sun era has ended in U.S. space exploration. Except for a joint U.S.-Russian mission next year, no more U.S. astronauts will fly until late in the decade when a reusable space shuttle is ready.

Auto Workers Are Laid Off

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Layoffs of varying durations are affecting as many as 10,000 auto industry workers in Ontario because of a drop in United States car sales and the U.S. truckers' strike.

Parts shortages resulting from the truckers' walkout have prompted layoffs running from a day or two to a full week at two of the Big Four auto companies in the province.

More serious are indefinite layoffs totalling 2,600 workers, caused by the decline in sales of standard model cars in the U.S.

Prime Minister Heath

Miners Refuse Strike Delay

LONDON (CP) — Britain's coal miners have rejected an appeal from Prime Minister Heath for an extra week to be decided to push ahead with a country-wide deadline from midnight Saturday night.

The decision was announced after a four-hour meeting of the executive committee of the mineworkers union. A union spokesman said the vote was almost unanimous.

The committee over-rode an appeal by union president Joe Gormley who favored calling off the strike for the period of the three-week campaign.

Union leaders decided instead to call out the nation's 280,000 miners on schedule, raising the spectre of widespread electricity cuts and paralysis of British industry by spring.

The miners' walkout is expected to strengthen the prospects of Heath's Conservatives who plan a campaign for the Feb. 28 election on the issue: "Who runs Britain, the elected government or trade unions?"

Leaders of all parties in Parliament welcomed that postponement of the strike would be in the national interest.

Canadians Arrested

MONTREAL (CP) — A tip from RCMP and Laval police led to a raid Thursday on a Jamaican villa by Montreal police in which four Canadians were arrested on charges of possession of arms, ammunition and marijuana, police said today.

Police said the activities of the group had been under surveillance for some time.

Arrested and being held without bail pending court appearances next week are: Janick Grabowski, 37, of Montreal; William B. Gibson, 26, of Montreal; Pauline Jackson, 23, of Laval; and Penny Hurlock, 24, of Etobicoke, a Toronto borough.

Police said the two men were in Jamaica on a week-long vacation, while the two women were described as stewardesses.

An Air Canada spokesman confirmed today that Miss Hurlock is a passenger agent at Toronto International Airport, but said Miss Jackson is not an employee.

Among the objects seized by police in the raid was a loaded sawed-off rifle equipped with a silencer.

Terrorists Leave Kuwait

KUWAIT (CP) — A Japanese airliner left Kuwait today carrying four Arab terrorists it had brought from Singapore and seven more who had won their comrades' release by seizing the Japanese embassy here.

The terrorists who had been held in the embassy were released.

Airport sources said the plane was bound for Aden, but others said the destination was South Yemen.

They're Ship - shape - - Again

Belleville's Sea Cadets have been judged among the most proficient in Ontario. Barry Bevvan, (right), commander of RCSCC Quinte, accepted the Bartley Bull Award, second-prize for proficiency in the province, Thursday night. Presentation was made by Ernest Hine, chairman of the local Navy League Sea Cadet committee. The local cadets won the award in 1970 and 1971.

LONDON (AP) — Gold hit a record price of $164 an ounce today on the London market. This was an increase of $5 over Thursday's closing price. The previous high was $143.50 Jan. 21.

Army Seizes Power

OUAGADOUGOU (Reuter) — The army seized power in Upper Volta today, but Gen. Sangoule Lamizana, head of state for eight years apparently will remain president. Announcing the coup over the state-run radio, Lamizana said the West African state's constitution was suspended and the national assembly dissolved.

Bilingualism Helpful

OTTAWA (CP) — Immersion language training in elementary schools appears to be the answer to Canada's bilingualism needs, Dr. Henry Edwards of Ottawa told the Ontario Psychological Association Saturday. Studies in some of Ottawa's elementary schools show that English-speaking children taking their schooling totally in French had better over-all academic performance in English-language tests than English students taught mostly in their own language, said Dr. Edwards.

Resort Study Coming

TORONTO (CP) — Studies into the proposed $82-million resort centre at Maple Mountain in northeastern Ontario might be made public in about two months, Industry and Tourism Minister Claude Bennett said Thursday. The reports, costing about $300,000, are being evaluated by ministry staff before going to cabinet in "a month or two" for a decision to proceed or abandon the project.

Prisoners Exchanged

SAIGON (AP) — The South Vietnamese government and the Viet Cong resumed exchange of civilian and military prisoners today after a six-month suspension.

Candu to Be Studied

LONDON (CP) — A team of leading nuclear-reactor experts charged with helping the British government decide on its next generation of reactors is to fly to Canada Sunday to inspect the Candu system in action, Energy Minister Donald Macdonald, nearing the end of an intensive selling mission here, said at a news conference his delegation returned "a very interested" response from British officials.

Five Children Die

MONT ROLLAND, Que. (CP) — Five children under 10 years of age, a girl and her four brothers, died in an overnight fire which destroyed their home in this Laurentians community while their parents were away. Those killed were identified as Marie-Jose Forgues, 8, and her brothers, Michael, 5, Daniel, 6, Andre, 3 and Jean, 9 months.

New Treaty Sought

PANAMA CITY (Reuter) — Negotiations will start immediately with the United States on a new Panama canal treaty but Panama will not exchange its sovereignty for money, says Foreign Minister Juan Antonio Tack.

Figures Differ

WASHINGTON (CP) — The United States improved its international trade last year with most countries except Canada, the White House reported Thursday. The report reflected the continuing discrepancy in trade figures as reported by Canada and the U.S. A week ago, Statistics Canada showed Canada's trade surplus with the U.S. — her largest trading partner — declined to $500 million in 1973 from slightly more than $1 billion in 1972.

Shortage Estimated

WASHINGTON (Reuter) — The Western world faces an oil shortage of seven per cent in the first three months of 1974, a United States government advisory group estimates.

Poor Distribution

Potter Predicts Doctors' Quotas

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP) — The unequal distribution of medical personnel throughout Ontario "verges on the tragic" and the province may have to impose quotas to ensure that enough doctors and dentists practise in rural areas, Health Minister Richard Potter said Wednesday.

"There are urban areas where the ratio (of physician to patient) is better than one to 200, which is absurd." Dr. Potter said. "And there are poorly-serviced areas, particularly in the North, where the ratio is more like one to 2,000, which verges on the tragic.

"The same kind of maldistribution applies to dentists."

Speaking at a combined meeting of the Essex County medical and dental societies, Dr. Potter suggested the province might consider with holding health insurance payments to encourage better distribution of medical personnel.

"Perhaps in the future we shall have to determine the number of doctors in each different category that are needed in a specific district," he said.

"Then, if all quotas are filled, we may have to advise new registrants wishing to practise in that district that if they wish they may do so but cannot be recognized by the insurance plans."

Dr. Potter said physicians would then either have to try to build a practice of patients willing to pay them directly or go to areas where they could fit into unfilled quotas and be paid under the insurance plan.

He said the province has an over-all favorable ratio of physicians to the needs of one to 800, but the distribution pattern continues to be inequitable in spite of the three-year-old program to age graduating students to go to areas where they are needed most.

"We have been encouraging medical and dentistry students to set up practice in these under-developed areas by means of bursaries and by outright grants to finance the setting up of such practices in addition to guaranteed minimum income."

Dr. Potter said under this policy, the present distribution pattern would be even worse than it is."

'Liberation Army' Will Try Abducted Hearst Heiress

BERKELEY, Calif. (CP) — The family of newspaper heiress Patricia Hearst awaited direct contact today from her self-proclaimed abductors, a radical group which indicated it intends to put her on trial for her family's alleged political enemies. The group said it will kill her if anyone tries a rescue.

"If this is a political matter, it becomes very, very difficult," said her father Randolph, president and editor of the San Francisco Examiner and son of the late newspaper tycoon William Randolph Hearst.

Hearst said he believes his daughter is alive.

The Symbionese Liberation Army, which claims to have killed the black superintendent of Oakland schools, said it served an arrest warrant on Miss Hearst, 19, and that she is being held in protective custody as a "prisoner of war." The warrant was issued by "the court of the people," and the group called her father "corporate enemy of the people."

The remarks were made in a letter sent to a radio station which forwarded it to the Hearst family. A credit card bearing the name of Miss Hearst's father accompanied the letter.

The letter added that "further communications will follow" and all "MUST be published in all newspapers and all other forms of the media," or else Miss Hearst will be in danger. There was no mention of ransom.

Hearst's newspaper had been conducting a campaign to get the killers of four whites on San Francisco streets one night last week, but this was believed to be the work of an all-black fanatical sect which the liberation army is multi-racial.

The word Symbionese is thought to be derived from the noun "symbiosis," which is defined as "the intimate living together of two dissimilar organisms in a mutually beneficial relationship."

The group has not officially defined its name, but its symbol is a seven-headed cobra, with each head representing a purported goal of the group: "self-determination, co-operative production, creativity, unity, collective security and responsibility, faith and purpose."

Charles Bates, agent in charge of the FBI office in San Francisco, said the letter held many leads but it will be up to the family whether the agency pursues them.

"If they say stay away, we stay away," he said. "Our first consideration is the safety of the girl. After the girl is saved, then we will find them."

DO YOU HAVE ENOUGH ENERGY

Although the world is experiencing an energy crisis and it has imposed difficulties in the way most of us lead our everyday lives, there are still a few areas where energy should be plentiful. Do you wake up each morning with the personal "get-up-and-go"? Can you "ready to face the day?" Or, do you feel tired out before you start?

Sometimes, a lack of energy can possibly be due to certain deficiencies in your system. Your physician can usually determine what it is and recommend a vitamin preparation or tonic to help you overcome it. We always have on hand a very large supply of these products.

F briton Talks Next Week

Mediation for Strike

TRENTON — The evil may be in sight for the strike that has closed the Fabricon Manufacturing plant here for the past two weeks.

The Ontario government's labor ministry notified company and union officials Thursday a provincial conciliator has been assigned to bring both parties to the conference table.

A union spokesman told The Intelligencer that mediation proceedings would take place in Belleville's Four Seasons Hotel Monday at 10.30 a.m.

Negotiations between the two began last September and, following a stalemate, the plant's 115-member local of Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers of America walked off their jobs. Since strike action two weeks ago, no meetings have been held between company and union.

The company rejected union demands that centered on 35-an-hour, 4-week vacation for the board, a cost-of-living clause pegged to the national price index and extended fringe benefits.

Hawes Allmendinger, company president, said this morning he was glad that a meeting was finally scheduled.

"At least we will find out our future," he said.

"The necessary communication can only be completed across the conference table. People get frustrated in a strike situation. We hope to find an understanding," he said.

While this is the first step since workers walked out, neither side is legally bound to accept the recommendations of the mediator.

Picton Industry Readies for Start

PICTON — Wickes Canada Limited, one of Prince Edward County's newest industries will open officially on Feb. 18 at Loch Sloy industrial park.

Robert Lefebvre, general manager, Thursday said the company manufactures recreation vehicles for family enjoyment.

Motor homes, travel trailers and truck campers are among the Wickes' lines.

Company headquarters is in Lethbridge, Alta.

The Picton plant, located between Toronto and Montreal, can provide these cities with improved service, Locarno was a major reason for the company's decision to situate here.

The company's vehicles are marketed only through franchised dealers in Ontario, Quebec and the Maritimes.

Mr. Lefebvre reported manufacturing is growing "by leaps and bounds" as more and more families discover how to escape city streets to recreation areas. Also, the forty-hour work week created much leisure time.

Mr. Lefebvre said "Wickes' industries are scheduled at a 20 per cent increase for the next four years, at least."

The Picton plant now being set up at completion will feature approximately $250,000 worth of equipment. It will carry from $250,000 to $500,000 in unmanufactured inventories and about $250,000 in finished products.

From 60 to 75 persons will be employed at operation peak. Almost all of these workers will be residents of Prince Edward County. Small numbers already have been hired and are being trained for jobs.

Mr. Lefebvre noted that the public will be invited to an open house at Wickes Canada Limited here on February 22 from 7.30 p.m. to 9.30 p.m. A wide range of vehicles will be on display for their inspection.

Gone Fishin'

Anyone seeking students in grades 4 to 8 at Picton's Queen Elizabeth school Thursday would have them missing. They'd gone fishing — through the ice on the town harbor, a special events activity permitted once in three weeks at the school.

Bird-watching

It's No Longer 'For the Birds'

PICTON — Once scorned as a "sunday-sunday" sport for spinsters and schoolboys, birdwatching today has won wide popularity.

Prince Edward County naturalists Terry Sprague this week reviewed the progress of his hobby with Picton Rotarians.

"Back in those earlier days birdwatching was a real challenge. When you boarded a bus you carried your binoculars in a brown paper bag," he quipped.

Bird books printed then were far too cumbersome to be of much use in the field.

"They were all too often oversized, over-illustrated, overwritten, overpriced and not really very useful," said Mr. Sprague.

Binoculars, in earlier days, were of poor quality and nature clubs were almost nonexistent.

Today, birdwatching is popular among men and women from all walks of life.

Some persons enjoy a bird book for the backyard. Others may spend all of spare time tracking down birds in the field.

There can be little doubt that birdwatchers are one of the most important groups of bird users in North America and that as a group they spend more time using wildlife than any other equally large category of people," said Mr. Sprague.

"A recent survey found that American hunters used wildlife only 200 million man-days a year. If the United States has two million active birdwatchers using wildlife an average of only one day a week, then birdwatchers use wildlife four times as much as waterfowl hunters, several times more than big game hunters and about half as much as all hunters combined."

"Presqu'ile Park, near Brighton, possibly is one of the best areas to find birds, birdwatchers and watcher of birdwatchers, according to Mr. Sprague.

He noted that the park has great weekend popularity among naturalists who camp there to enjoy nature.

"In Prince Edward County a birdwatcher keeping yearly list can easily acquire over 225 species A winter lister should be able to acquire 100 species during December, January and February."

Mr. Sprague observed that naturalists do not necessarily confine their studies to birds.

"There are wildflower hunters, bat chasers, mushroom seekers, shell collectors, and photographers of spiders among others.

MARMORA—Payment of $418. has been authorized by municipal council to the women who enumerated for the Liquor Plebescite to be held in Marmora— Lake townships Feb. 20.

Debate Site Operation

MARMORA — A suggestion that either Marmora village or Marmora township should take over complete operation of the local joint waste disposal site or that the other municipality for a fee, has been proposed by the township council.

Councillor Bob Drummond of Marmora-Lake made the proposal to village council this week.

Joint operation by the two municipalities on an alternate monthly basis could create problems which the township council felt could be eliminated by sole operation by one or the other local government.

While not rejecting the idea, Reeve Jack Reid said the village council would like to see the system worked out in dollars and cents by the township and then presented in writing to village council again.

The weekly pickup of garbage in bulk municipalities has been a separate operation, apart from maintenance of the waste disposal site.

The townships' council recently advertised for tenders for garbage pickup in its municipality. A meeting will to be held this week to award the contract.

Marmora village council appeared to be satisfied with the work of contractor George Empey and will approach him about a new contract for this year.

Re-elected To Head Red Cross

MARMORA — Edith Wistl was re-elected for a second term as president of the Marmora Branch of the Red Cross Society at its recent annual meeting.

Other officers: Faye Lavender, vice-president; Eileen Demorest, treasurer; Bertha Bingham, secretary; Betty Welch, services committee chairman; Sarah Rotherml and Madeline Frost, loan cupboard committee; Bernice Smith, blood donor service chairman, Jennie Killian, water safety committee chairman; Pearl Featherstone, telephone committee chairman; Ruby McCoy, publicity chairman.

March 11 was chosen for the 1974 blitz and Glenn Featherstone will be campaign chairman. The blitz was held in May last year and $745 collected.

Marjorie Bleecker said that two families had been aided after losing their home in a fire. Bedding and clothing totalling $470 were supplied.

Jean Hanley reported 33 residents in Marmora, Springbrook, Deloro and Marmora Township had borrowed 33 sick-room articles from the loan cupboard. The service could use two more walkers. If anyone has these articles and is not using them.

Jennie Killian reported the swimming program at Legion Park last summer was quite successful. Some 109 children enrolled. 78 were examined and 57 passed their tests.

Grant $7,200

MARMORA — Marmora Lake townships will receive $7,200. capita grant of $7,228. Finance Chairman Bob Drummond reported to Council at Saturday's meeting.

Madoc Getting Ready For Winter Carnival

MADOC—Something for everyone might well be the theme of the fourth annual Madoc winter carnival coming up in just two weeks.

This year's event will extend over five days, Feb. 15, 16, 17 being the big days.

Feb. 15 activities centres at Madoc public school will be a full night best day for a hockey game involving senior students of Centre Hastings Secondary School is scheduled in the village arena. That night selection of Carnival Queen and her princesses will be made at the Public School.

Inter-house activities and judging of the snow sculptures Friday for the busy weekend ahead. The annual torchlight parade at 8:00 p.m. from Kramp's Supertest, featuring floats, clowns and bands will wind up at the Kiwanis Centre. There official opening ceremonies will take place with a come-as-you-are dance. A poo-wee hockey tournament will be going on all day Saturday at the arena beginning at 8:30 a.m. From 10:00 a.m. to 2:00 p.m. the market will do business at the Kiwanis Centre.

Afternoon activities begin with a tug-o-war on St. Lawrence Street. Then the Provincial police, firemen, and CHSS teachers will test their strength. In the Legion Hall, from 2 p.m. the annual dart tournament will take place, with a number of trophies being awarded to the champions.

A turkey supper in the Orange Hall and beer chowder supper at the Kiwanis Centre, will provide carnival fare. A dance at 9 p.m. in the Legion Hall concludes the day.

Sunday morning a pancake breakfast is scheduled in the Kiwanis Centre.

The annual snowmobile races for the Centre Hastings Cup and $2,500 in prizes and trophies are scheduled for the afternoon. There are Ontario Snowmobile Racing Federation sanctioned races. Hot food will be available at the Firemen's booth on the grounds. A new attraction at the races will be hericopter rides.

Discuss Clinic's Future

NORTHBROOK — A public meeting Feb. 14 in Northbrook Community Centre will review the medical clinic here.

The clinic is now in its third year of operation. People are being asked for their views about its continuation.

The clinic is subsidized by a grant from the Physicians Services Incorporated Foundation. Kingston doctors' fees are paid through the Ontario Hospital Insurance Plan. The doctors work in the clinic.

Dr. Richard Milne, clinic director, will be present at the meeting — at 7.30 p.m. — to discuss the project and answer questions.

Retired Teachers

STIRLING — Members of the Trenton branch of the Ontario Educational Superannuated Women Teachers association met at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Clayton Tumon here Friday.

Mrs. Grant Phillips presided the meeting attended by about 20 retired teachers.

Aims and objects of the association is to keep in touch with educational matters.

Winter Carnival: Tweed's All Set

TWEED — Winter made a comeback in time for this community's annual winter carnival.

Conditions in the Tweed and Hastorth area this weekend are reported good for all winter sports.

The three-day carnival glides off tonight with a torchlight parade starting at 7 p.m. Other events include figure-skating, a tea dance, exhibition hockey and curling.

A major event Saturday is a cross-country snowmobile race 35 miles to Kaladar and back for $600 in prizes. Novel events will be staged on Main St. in the afternoon, while more hockey and a moccasin dance is scheduled at night.

The carnival closes Sunday after snowmobile races at the Ken Jeffrey farm, three miles south of here on Highway 37 for prizes and trophies totalling $2,000. Organizers have been drawing snow for two days and watering the track to ensure proper conditions for the races.

Ministry of Natural Resources reports snowmobiling conditions are fair, although the trails are hard. Skiing and snowshoeing will also be good this weekend.

All lakes are suitable for snowmobile travelling:- Lakes in the Tweed area are glare ice with a light skiff of snow. In the Bancroft district the ice is 12 to 16 inches thick.

Snow in the bush in the Tweed area is 12 inches deep; in Bon Echo 16 inches; Plevna 14½ inches; Denbigh and White lakes, 11 inches; Bancroft 14 inches and Apsley, 13 inches.

Picton Resident Critical Of Animal Control Services

PICTON — "Where is your dogcatcher?" Picton resident levelled at town council this week by a irate resident.

Morley Brooks, building and plumbing inspector for the town said that he was annoyed by dogs running at large, often at 6 a.m. He noted that he did not think animal control Donald was Tucker's efforts were "worth a damn."

Town clerk Andrew Jarvis said that Mr. Tucker had captured seven strays recently in one day. One woman paid a $45 fine to redeem three pets.

He suggested that it is plentiful for Mr. Tucker to curb the problem of dogs at large since they can be picked up only in a public place. He cannot remove the dogs from private property without a complaint or request from the property owner.

Mr. Jarvis said the alternative to the problem of dogs at large could be a bylaw prohibiting dogs in town.

Deputy reeve Larry Richardson observed that council had discussed the problem periodically and felt that it should be dealt with conclusively to save time.

He asked for all pertinent facts to determine how serious the situation has become.

Mayor James Bird said that council will work in cooperation with the animal control officer to eliminate the annoyance of delinquent pets.

Mohey Isn't Everything

It is singularly in the North American tradition to measure everything in dollars and cents — and to deal with us in organization's otherwise intrinsic worth.

But should an organization that serves the community be judged finally on its financial viability, provided it is reasonably solvent and not heading for total bankruptcy?

When, after all, governments can spend money — taken from the taxpayer — with almost reckless abandon, with no thought or expectation of balancing the books, why shouldn't an organization like the Belleville Family YMCA be permitted to continue to function with the support of the community.

It matters little that the Y does not serve everyone in Belleville. No group could hope to do that. But the Y nevertheless is a community resource that does serve a useful sociological and recreational function for a considerable number of people.

We do not propose to document all the activities Y, some of them at little or no cost to the participants if they are not of great means. This has been done often enough in the past. Yet the organization continues to draw criticism for the grants and tax rebates it receives from the city.

Perhaps this criticism is well founded. Maybe the Y should receive less from the city and seek to be more self-sufficient. In these infistionary days this is a challenge in itself, but it is worth the effort. But let's acknowledge the Y's basic value and remember those words of Winston Churchill, when someone criticized his bricklaying, which was a hobby of his, along with painting: "Any fool can see what's wrong . . . but can you see what's right."

The same applies to criticism of the United Community Service, criticism which again has an element of justification, and of the Chamber of Commerce. Both bodies need to perform a better public relations job — tell the people of Belleville what they are doing. The Chamber has one big task on its shoulder right now — it is responsible for planning of the city's Centennial in 1978 — the same year, incidentally, that the Commonwealth Games return to Canada. We have not heard anything as yet in the way of preliminary groundwork for the Centennial, and this is something that cannot be too long delayed.

City and Hinterland

Thurlow township appears to be adamant against any suggestion that Belleville should be permitted a further 400 acres by voluntary annexation. The city wants more breathing room, the Germans say in reference to living space.

Mayor Jeffrey sees another 400 acres, in addition to a like acreage already granted by Thurlow, as permitting the proposed north-south arterial road in the city's east end to be entirely within city boundaries . . . and further, it would allow the city to "really plan."

But for the moment at least, Thurlow is saying no.

How far this kind of standoff can be maintained of course is another matter. While annexing the rights to the town-ships, the future, like it or not, undoubtedly will bring closer ties between the city and its hinterland.

Already there seems to be a measure of agreement on co-operative endeavor at least, but stopping short of further annexation. At a recent meeting between the two municipal bodies, township councillors suggested extension of services to the east of the city, with township customers paying a higher rate than city users, and provision as well of services to a proposed subdivision.

Meanwhile, the growing tentacles of regional government in Ontario are moving closer to Quinte with a meeting scheduled Monday between Belleville, Trenton, Sidney and Thurlow townships and Frankford to discuss the whole planning picture as it affects these various municipalities.

Trenton is also scheduled to meet with Quinte Planning Board representatives on Feb. 19 to determine which is best for Trenton from a planning and regional-standpoint — whether to look east or west. As of now the regional concept, as it affects this area, is in a state of flux. One thing is sure, however, the future in this regard holds much of interest for the people of the Quinte area.

Political Posturing Before Public Good

Premiers' Hands Tied Because Parley Was in Public

By RICHARD JACKSON

OTTAWA — The mandarins — federal and provincial — already are at work behind the bureaucratic scenes, setting the stage for Phase Two of the Great Energy Conference.

And chances are that this time you won't get to see it, tremendous television spectacular though it was.

For when Phase One stumbled to its sudden end after what has become known as The Roast Beef Lunch had been consumed behind closed doors, nobody was happy.

There was no final or even partial resolution to the oil and energy problem that came close to satisfying any of the participants, federal or provincial.

There were no winners, no losers — only compromisers.

And-to get even that unsettled and unsettling sawoff, Prime Minister Trudeau and the provincial premiers, with their key cabinet members, had to hole up in private, beyond the prying eyes and ears of press, radio and television, over those plates of roast beef.

Obviously unhappy—perhaps more disappointed than anyone else — was Finance Minister John Turner.

For the Treasury was stuck with the bill for the compromise, and John Turner is responsible for the Treasury.

Did he think, he was asked after they had trooped out to admit, well, if not failure, then certainly not success, might they have done better than the conference been in camera from the opening gavel?

Well, fenced the Finance Minister, it had been the "unanimous decision of the PM and the premiers" to hold the oil talks in public in full and continuing view of TV and millions of anxious Canadians.

And with a quick grin, and what could have been a wink, he allowed that he really couldn't answer the question.

Then to play it absolutely safe and nail down his position of conforming to whatever the PM had decided, he added: "And I'm not even going to comment."

But then something suddenly snapped inside the usually cool and restrained John Turner.

"There's an enormous difference, though, you know, between show-biz and getting things done."

Now it was out.

The Finance Minister — and everyone who watched the Great Energy Conference in the flesh and on TV — knew that all the men around that rectangular table had been playing a part, like so many political actors in a drama.

The whole of Canada, at one moment or the other in those five days, had looked in on the conference on the TV screen and watched the political posturing.

Posturing, that is, for home base support, and, of course, for votes-to-come-in-future and confusing power.

There could be no honest give and take, the indispensable ingredient that has led to agreement and solution in other federal - provincial conferences when held behind closed doors.

No provincial premier, with those TV lenses on him, would dare give away a thing for fear of compromising his own and his region's position.

So he pushed, they all had to be hard-liners, and only sottovoce up enough to make that unsatisfactory sawoff — but better than nothing — when they safely could return to their home base.

Out before the cameras, even the bit players were hamming it up.

They were the senior federal bureaucrats backing up the Prime Minister, John Turner and Energy Minister Macdonald, all looking as solemn and wise and puffing on their pipes like a bunch of academics which many of them are.

"NOW HEAR THIS...THIS IS THE CAPTAIN SPEAKING...THERE IS NO CAUSE FOR ALARM!...WE HAVE JUST STOPPED TO TAKE ON SOME ICE!"

They could even snicker — and did — in their greater wisdom when the provincial premiers said those things like federal mandarins hardly considered narrow and parochial.

So, as Finance Minister Turner said in his sudden honest outburst of frustration:

"There's an enormous difference between show-biz and getting things done."

Perhaps next time, in Phase Two, he will have the clout of the backing of the Prime Minister — Pierre Trudeau was not altogether comfortable as the man-in-the-middle between the warring premiers — to move the action back where business can be done, in private.

It is all too urgently important to be a TV "show."

Diplomacy That Recognizes Opposing Ideologies

By JOHN D. HARBRON
Foreign Affairs Analyst
Thomson News Service

If politics is the art of the possible, so it appears is diplomacy. Take a look for example at our relations with various Latin American countries, some of them undergoing very different political experiences.

While a group of MPs came home recently from Havana, (we maintain full diplomatic and trade relations with Cuba) repeating Castro's wish to visit Canada, in Chile we early recognized a tough anti-Marxist military junta which threw out the Cubans.

They had been in Chile during the three-year Marxist regime of the late president Salvador Allende as diplomats and advisers to the Chilean Marxists in power.

Within 48 hours of the military take-over the staff of the very large Cuban embassy, largest in Latin America, was on plane and out of the country.

Yet our relations with the terrorists in Chile and the Marxist followers of Castro in Cuba are a one and the same time excellent.

If we go further afield, we have mutually excellent diplomatic relations with two other military governments, a left-wing socialist one in Peru, a right-wing, pro-capitalist one in Brazil. Perhaps our hemisphere trade structure which we have with only one other country, namely the U.S.S.R.

But in the Mexican case, there are common and increasingly close bonds with the country which lies along the other border with the United States themselves to the north of it, Mexico to its south.

Where the Chilean tragedy is concerned add the fact the refugees from that country are coming to one which recognizes the military who have turned them out exiles from their homeland.

But one of the refugees think of a Canadian haven in those terms. Perhaps Canada looks politically acceptable for the earlier reason given, our long relations with Castro's Cuba which followed unbroken from the days of pre-Castro Cuba.

Extend this foreign policy ambivalence even further and we find Canada officially supporting world action against South Africa's apartheid, racial discrimination policies, through the external affairs department. But the industry, trade and commerce department clearly supports Canadian-South African trade and the role of Canada-owned branch plants in that racist republic.

How come? In the days before international involvement in many activities of government, including foreign affairs, the minister himself usually took a personal leading. Remember when former external affairs minister Paul Martin was undertaking a personal attack for allegedly talking out of at least three sides of his mouth at once?

Well his successor Mitchell Sharp gets a good deal of direct attack as well. But individuals as well as enraged institutions, like the United Church of Canada, go to public opinion and ask how Ottawa can be against apartheid in one ministry and in another support Canadian industry in South Africa which allegedly condones racial discrimination in its plants and factories?

Part of the possible may have become the art of the improbable.

Land Prices Big Factor in Inflation

By DON O'HEARN
Queen's Park Bureau
Thomson News Service

TORONTO — If there is one single thing that more than any other has knocked this province woggle-eyed it is land prices.

Land speculation and ever rising the-law sharpe development have driven prices so high that couples have to sweat blood the color of dollar bills to buy a house and build a home. Even are working who shouldn't be and in many cases don't want to be. Housing has been perhaps the major contributor to inflation and there has hardly been a sector of the economy that hasn't been hit by it. (Look what high housing costs have helped do to wage rates).

Frankly, if you will excuse the strength of the expression, the situation has stunk.

Now, word is out that the government finally is going to do something about it.

It hasn't acted in 20 years. It is that long since the housing situation was obvious and opposition parties in the house began hammering away at it.

At first to a reaction of indifference.

And then to a response of narrow vision, niggardliness and meanness.

A few months ago we set up a ministry of housing and put in Bob Welch to run it.

Since then there have been preliminary announcements that regional governments are to be given the authority and the funds (federal) to assemble land for housing and to step up the program for rezoning old neighborhoods.

Small stuff. But apparently behind the scenes major steps are being planned.

Logically these will call for massive public land assembly.

Developers (including a few well-known PCs) have thrived on "leap frog" (Mr. Welch's phrase) because there has been a shortage of serviced land for two decades. There has been no competition, and the criteria of land price has been what the market could stand, or rather what it could be squeezed for.

The one answer has been for government to provide competition.

To buy raw land, service it and put it on the market at cost. And in massive amounts, hundreds of thousands of acres so that there would be real housing land competition in every part of the province.

Is the government planning on moving in this direction? Yes, it apparently is.

But will it do what is needed? Will it think and act big enough?

That is the billion dollar question which at least one observer will be looking at with great curiosity.

City Eyes Township Acreage

Editor
The Intelligencer.

As a Taxpayer in Thurlow for the past 14 years, I don't like the way Mayor Jeffrey and her council are acting with our township.

I agree we need Industry in the township and water for some people in Canifton but let the people or the industry pay meter costs, not the whole township. Farmers have enough expense now, and new houses built in Thurlow, the past five or ten years have high enough mortgages without another $200 a year hanging over their heads. Thurlow offered Belleville 400 Acres, but they want 800 more all of a sudden why?

Belleville is flooded with high-rise apartments, not enough Park Land. The Belleville Yardmen Complex seems to be at a stand still, do they need some land from Thurlow I sure know it is not money that is holding it back.

I back our Council 100 per cent on this deal, but I don't like Council saying Thurlow will pay more money for water than you do in Belleville. This watermain under 401 will benefit Belleville, let's not kid anybody, I lived in Parkdale for three years and I know what water and sewers cost and it wasn't peanuts.

I think Mayor Jeffery is a good Mayor for Belleville but she is not too good for her neighor in Thurlow.

Fuel Crisis Brings Uranium Into the Public Eye Again

By VINCENT EGAN
Business and Consumer Affairs Analyst
Thomson News Service

Like high tail-fins and cross-Channel swimming, uranium managed to catch the public's interest for a short, glamorous period a couple of decades ago, and then faded into the oblivion reserved for yesterday's novelties.

Today, uranium seems to be on the threshold of the era that was supposed to be ushered in the corner in the mid-1950s. Who knows, maybe Gobel might even come back.

The coming of the uranium era was put off hopelessly — by the slow pace of the development of nuclear energy, by the spoken public fears (just as dim memories of the Hiroshima disaster still preclude a return of airships) and by the abundance of energy available from cheap fossil fuels.

The passage of almost 20 years has changed all that. Nuclear power has proved itself in impending shortage, the U.S. administration has said it will begin to lift the embargo in 1977, and eliminate import restrictions entirely by 1981.

Rio Algom Mines Ltd., a major Canadian base metals uranium producer, stands to gain mightily from the lifting of U.S. embargo. The company already has a productive uranium mine in Utah, and large uncommitted uranium reserves at its Elliot Lake diggings.

Kerr Addison Mines Ltd., a diversified mining venture, also has interests in uranium properties on both sides of the Canada-U.S. border.

Resources are estimated to total 460,000 tons of uranium oxide exploitable at market prices of up to $10 a pound, with another 200,000 tons exploitable at prices up to $15 a pound.

Canadian domestic consumption until the end of this century is put at a total of 100,000 tons, with another 60,000 tons currently committed for export to foreign customers. Prospects of a shortage are much more remote than the prospects of a glut.

The fact the biggest export commitment—probably the largest export contract in Canada's commercial history—is the $800-million agreement by Denison Mines Ltd. to sell 30,000 tons of uranium oxide to Tokyo Electric Power Co. during the 10 years ending in 1993.

The United States has never allowed its public utilities to import uranium from other countries. But, faced with an impending shortage, the U.S. administration has said it will begin to lift the embargo in 1977, and eliminate import restrictions entirely by 1981.

Rio Algom Mines Ltd., a major Canadian base metals uranium producer, stands to gain mightily from the lifting of U.S. embargo. The company already has a productive uranium mine in Utah, and large uncommitted uranium reserves at its Elliot Lake diggings.

Kerr Addison Mines Ltd., a diversified mining venture, also has interests in uranium properties on both sides of the Canada-U.S. border.

Nuclear power may never displace petroleum-based energy, but it seems sure to move ahead rapidly as a vitally important new source of energy over the next decade.

Canada is proud of her navy, the third most powerful among the United Nations' sea forces. The navy has grown in numbers from slightly over 1,700 at the start of the present war to over 80,000. In the first war with Germany the navy began with 350 in personnel and at the close of that struggle had 4,000 officers and men. Now the Royal Canadian Navy is to man with officers and men two escort aircraft carriers of the Royal Navy, Britain has made the loan of two British cruisers and two destroyers to the Canadian fleet.

CP News Roundup

Students Ask End To Strike

TORONTO (CP) — Student representatives on Monday voted a quick end to the walkout by 667 high school teachers in York region which enters its sixth day today.

Eight students from four of the 19 secondary schools in the region held news conferences and one spokesman, 16-year-old Mary Morgan, said:

"We now feel the teachers' strike has been settled . . . Now is the time for them to return."

The teachers resigned from their jobs Feb. 1 because agreement had not been reached with the York County board of education on a new contract.

The negotiations continue under a news blackout imposed by Education Minister Thomas Wells although he personally withdrew from the talks earlier this week.

Only about one-third of the 14,500 students registered at the high schools in York, which covers an area immediately north of Metropolitan Toronto, have been regularly attending classes since the teachers walked out last Friday.

Classes for those attending have been supervised by about 200 teachers who did not resign, by senior students and volunteers.

Jury Proposes Slapshot Ban

CLINTON, Ont. (CP) — The elimination of body contact and the slap shot in recreational hockey leagues was recommended Thursday by a coroner's jury in this town 50 miles north of London.

The jury, inquiring into the Jan. 17 death of Phillip Charles Evans, 18, a forward for a Goderich juvenile team who was hit on the chest with a slap shot, also recommended that hockey officials meet Canadian Standards Association approval.

The jury found the youth died of a ruptured heart after a puck, travelling at high speed, hit him in the chest above the apex of the heart.

Prof. Donald Hoys of the University of Waterloo's department of kinesiology—the study of human movement—told the jurors of hockey should be changed to suit different age groups.

Oil Found

LONDON (AP) — The Burmah Oil Co. has made an oil bonanza in the North Sea in a field which may eventually produce oil equal to half Britain's current consumption, London's newspapers said.

But a statement from Burmah Thursday was more cautious. It said only that the find was "encouraging" and further drilling tests are needed.

The strike was made 116 miles northeast of the Shetland Islands, the same miles from British Petroleum's Ninian field where a new find was reported last month.

Like Big Cars

TORONTO (CP) — There may be a shift to small cars but Canadian car buyers haven't abandoned the intermediate and mid-size cars, manufacturers agreed Thursday.

Continuing strong sales of full-size cars indicate that comfort and convenience will remain the over-riding factor in the purchase of a new car, said John D. Duffy, vice-president and general sales manager of General Motors of Canada Ltd.

Must Pay More

OTTAWA (CP) — Farm owners must increase wages, improve working conditions and learn to handle employees more effectively if they are to attract sufficient farm labor, a Canadian Federation of Agriculture study suggests.

Without higher farm revenues, brought about by further increases in food prices, however, current low labor supplies will deteriorate, farm operations will be pared down and food supplies will dwindle, the working paper warns.

Olympic Lottery Plans New Draw

MONTREAL (CP) — Olympic Lottery Canada, charged with raising more than $32 million to help finance the cost of the 1976 Summer Olympics, Thursday announced a second unscheduled draw for July 16.

The second draw will boost prize money by close to $1 million and the number of potential winners by 17,000.

Tickets for the new draw will remain at $10 each and the first prize will be $1 million tax free. It will involve a possible total of $12,150,000 in prize money and a potential 43,000 winners.

The first draw scheduled for April 15, a total of 28,175,000 will be shared by 25,000 ticket holders. The initial issue, which went on sale last December, was sold out over a two-month period.

In announcing the new drawing, Roger Rousseau, commissioner-general of the 1976 Games and president of the lottery, said the additional prize money and the winners will be possible because the number of tickets to be sold in the second draw will be increased to 3.5 million from the 2.5 million sold for the April 15 draw.

The original schedule set out by the lottery had called for quarterly drawings through 1976, but Mr. Rousseau said that because of the immediate response to the first issue it had been decided to hold three drawings during 1974.

However, he said it will be necessary to see what the public response is to the July drawing before it is decided whether to put the lottery on a three-a-year basis or stay with the original plan of two annually.

Four provinces will not participate in the July draw—the same four that are not participating in the April lottery, British Columbia, Manitoba and Saskatchewan, which have not consented to take part, while Mr. Rousseau said Nova Scotia becomes part of the draw after July.

Mail orders received for the first draw which could not be filled because of the over-subscription and rapid sale of the first tickets, will be among the first processed to hold three sue.

220 Briefs Filed On CBC Licences

OTTAWA (CP) — More than 220 briefs have been filed with the Canadian Radio-Television Commission (CRTC) supporting or criticizing the CBC's application for a five-year renewal of all its radio and television licence.

The application goes before the commission in a public hearing opening here Feb. 18.

Six volumes of pleadings and briefs by the CBC in support of its application promise more Canadian programs, fewer commercials and earlier dismination of programs and more attention to regional productions.

The corporation also asks for a fundamental revision of its financing. Instead of loans from the public treasury, on which it is charged interest, the corporation should be given outright grants by Parliament and forgiven its past indebtedness, the CBC says.

Most of the criticism comes from radio-television watchdog organizations, asking for better service in the hinterland, less dependence on Toronto and Montreal production centres and an end to commercials.

Laurent Picard, CBC president, is expected to open the hearings with a three-hour oral statement, following which he will be questioned by CRTC chairman Pierre Juneau and members of the commission. The hearings are expected to last three or four days.

The chief criticism has been filed in a 187-page brief by The Committee on Television, a Toronto-based group of artists, authors, academics and community leaders, many of them past or present employees of the CBC.

While not advocating that the CBC's application for renewal be rejected, the committee says conditions should be put on its new licences requiring it to reduce its dependence on commercials, to produce fewer but better programs, improve them repeatedly on the air, and to encourage regional productions and independent film-makers.

Stanfield Calls for Inquiry Into UIC

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — Progressive Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield, accusing Manpower Minister Robert Andras of creating an enormous credibility gap, called Thursday for an independent inquiry into operations of the Unemployment Insurance Commission (UIC).

He told news conference here and in Toronto the public believes widespread abuses have occurred in the handling of UIC benefits, and an inquiry should be held to clear the air.

"I certainly don't want to see any witchhunt," he told reporters during the first day of a three-day southern Ontario tour.

"But the public has a right to be reasonably assured that people are not drawing benefits unfairly."

The Opposition leader's tour one of a series to focus attention primarily on economic issues, opened Wednesday night in Toronto. He left later for London where he met reporters and briefed local newspaper editorial writers and spoke to Junior Chamber of Commerce members.

Mr. Stanfield emphasized the cost of living during his appearances Thursday, adding the Trudeau government responsible for the 1973 inflation rate of almost 10 per cent.

"Something can be done and something must be done," he said. "If we allow inflation to continue it could threaten the whole economic structure of the country."

Rich Union Welfare Plans Being Negligently Handled

TORONTO (CP) — Union welfare plans handle millions of dollars a year for Canadian workers but many are so loosely run that few people know what is going on, a Toronto accountant told the royal commission into violence in the construction industry Thursday.

Phillip Musselman, hired by the commission to investigate the welfare plans, testified there should be a committee of accountants, actuaries, lawyers and welfare plan administrators to carry out a detailed study of plans run by many unions in Ontario.

Among the problems Mr. Musselman said he found with some Ontario unions were:

—employers have little say in making payments to welfare funds for their men.

—lack of control by trustees who do not know whether employers are making the contributions they should.

—trustees who spend thousands of dollars of the worker's money each year going to welfare plan conferences in places like Bermuda, Miami, San Diego and Jasper.

—union men with no financial training acting as trustees for large sums of money.

—agreements for payment of money and pensions minutes deciding the future of welfare plans left unsigned.

The inquiry was told welfare plans usually are negotiated as part of collective agreements between unions and employers. The employers are supposed to contribute something—often 15 to 18 cents an hour worked—for each employee.

This money goes into a welfare fund administered by trustees who usually are selected by the union and the employees. They almost always hire a company of specialists to administer the fund.

Some of the money from each worker's share is used to buy him such things as medical and dental insurance, life insurance, disability coverage and provide supplementary unemployment benefits. The rest usually goes into a general union fund, the inquiry was told.

Mr. Musselman said unions should be keeping a close check on employers and demanding the right to audit their books to make sure the proper contributions are made.

The accountant said that recently most of the men in Local 117, Bricklayers, Masons Union, came local in a dispute over control. They left behind $146,000 in their welfare fund.

This indicates a need to vet workers' surplus funds in their own names rather than be placed generally and to make the funds portable to another union, Mr. Musselman said.

Zero Pollution Target Advocated by Doctor

TORONTO (CP) — Workers should aim for zero pollution standards on the job until something higher is shown to be safe, Dr. David Parkinson of the Hospital for Sick Children said Thursday.

"A compromise about a health matter is not a compromise," he said. "It's murder."

Dr. Parkinson, who treated children with high blood lead levels brought to the Hospital for Sick Children, told the Metropolitan Toronto Labor Council that "zero pollution standards are needed, from unions, doctors and engineers."

The technology is available if companies are willing to spend money, and the safety net should not be allowed to operate, the doctor said.

He said the person responsible for monitoring employee health should not be a doctor employed by the company where the employees work.

Community Primary Source Of Welfare

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP) — The local community can expect to be asked to abdicate its role as a primary source of social service, Liberal MP Lucien Bawlf Welch, Ontario secretary for social development, said Thursday.

Mr. Welch told a committee of the Windsor United Community Services organization that the provincial government does not have an unlimited supply of public funds to finance social programs that can be financed through voluntary efforts.

Mr. Welch and four other cabinet ministers were here for two days of talks with local civic leaders and officials of area social organizations.

It is the first time the social development policy committee has gone on tour to hold public meetings.

"The place they get paid for does tend to color their thinking," Dr. Parkinson said. "They should be employees of an independent agency, so there is no pressure from the company."

He also told the meeting that lead levels allowed in Ontario plants are far too high.

Levels up to 150 micrograms per cubic yard—are permitted. But research indicates in an eight-hour shift an employee will take more lead into his body than there is in the 100 he can excrete, Dr. Parkinson said. The difference between intake and excretion gradually builds up and can damage health.

More Cattle Are Required

PARKHILL, Ont. (CP) — A 25-per-cent increase in beef production will be required in the next six years to meet demand in Canada, Lloyd MacLeod, general beef manager of Canada Packers Ltd., predicted Thursday.

Mr. MacLeod, speaking at the annual meeting of the Canadian Beef Improvement Association in this community about 30 miles northwest of London, said Canada's population will be about 25 million by 1980 and the per-capita consumption of beef is expected to rise to the 100-pound level from last year's 92 pounds.

Noting a world increase in demand for beef, Mr. MacLeod said that in Canada "there is every reason to assume the long-term outlook and demand will remain strong, although in the short term we will have price adjustments."

Fewer Leave

WASHINGTON (CP) — The flow of Canadian immigrants to the United States declined to a little more than 7,000 last year compared with about 40,000 10 years ago.

Specifically, he said, the government should adopt an investment incentive credit program to foster the growth of small enterprises.

Under the proposal, all Canadians would be able to deduct from income taxes half of any amount up to $3,000 invested in new or Canadian owned small businesses.

He defined small business as any enterprise with a net worth of less than $1 million and an annual revenue of less than $10 million.

PC Chief Advocates Small Business Aid

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — Progressive Conservative party proposals to promote small business would do more in a single year to encourage Canadian enterprise than any combination of government loans, subsidies and concessions now available, Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield said Thursday.

He told the local junior chamber of commerce the Conservative party wants "a massive redirection of federal government efforts" to assist small businessmen.

A VALENTINE SUCCESS STORY

Not even "Merry Christmas" has been written or printed as many times as the phrase "From your Valentine." — Dorothy H. Jenkins.

* * *

Sure as the grapes grow on the vine
I choose you for my valentine
The rose is red, the grape is green
The days are past that I have seen —
The roses red, the violets blue,
Carnations are sweet and so are you . . .

Such is part of a twenty-two line, hand-written valentine message composed by an amateur poet in the 1830's, using as many comparisons as possible, following the St. Valentine tradition started in 270 A.D.

However, consistently popular since the 1820's — as if an "antidote to the pretty, sentimental valentine" — is the comic one.

We became interested upon and later learned that Esther learning this and enquired of Howland, who graduated from Mr. C. Brown, Manager of Mt. Holyoke in 1847 became and The Reading N' Greeting remained for 40 years the Shop, 220 Front Street, who most "skillful and artistic" admits: "Humorous valen- maker of lace-paper valen- tines are among the top tines, in the United States. sellers today. . . ."

In February of that year, Esther, received a valentine "Verse" he points out, from England that fascinated "verse is seldom used. Just her with its lacey paper and a question and answer, such colored flowers. as:

"It's Valentine Day, You know what that means?"

"It is only 267 days before Christmas."

"But Sweetheart Valentines are immensely popular," Mr. Brown states.

"They are popular with both boys and girls. The ladies buy for all members of the family: valentines for a brother, sister, son, daughter, friends far and near ...fand because they are selective, the Valentines are displayed soon after Christ- mas) ...while husbands usually rush in - - at the last minute."

VALENTINE SUCCESS STORY. Though seeming to digress from the subject of Valentines, memory recalls a week-end, my husband and I spent at Amherst, Massachusetts. Not only the home of the famed poetess Emily Dickinson, but a fine college town in the same lovely valley that harbors Amherst College, Hampshire College, University of Massachusetts and the two famed women's colleges: Smith at Northampton and Mt. Holyoke at South Hadley. A truly academic territory!

Here at Mt. Holyoke we walked around the stately college buildings beautifully set in specious surroundings,

Determined to try her hand at designing valentines, she persuaded her father, leading Stationer in Wor- cester, Mass., to import special lace-paper from England.

He did so. Her designs met with family approval. Her brother who travelled for their father's firm, took some of her creations on his rounds - to return with orders amounting to five thousand dollars!

Thrilled, and under the guidance of her father who ordered more lace-paper from England, as well as trimmings from New York, Esther asked some of her friends to join her in a large room of the Howland house on Summer Street, to assist her.

They did so, using the assembly-line method (used by Hitchcock chairs in the 1820's and the shelf clocks in the 1830's). The maid- backgrounds, another cut out pictures, still another added the lace paper, another the trimming.

By 1850, Esther Howland was an established name in the valentine world. She moved her workshop to the third floor of her home. It was only a matter of time before she and her "all-girl" work-force were making Christmas and New Year's cards as well.

Barbers Talk: 'Cutting Hair Is Only Half the Job'

"The more you know about a customer, the better you can do her hair," says Susan Sheldrick of Hair, The Styling Place.

And how much a hair- dresser knows, only a hair- dresser knows for sure.

People do like to talk about themselves, according to local barbers and hairdressers surveyed this week, who see the art of conversation as an important part of their work.

"Conversation makes the atmosphere friendly," says George Delgrosso of Hair, The Barber Shop, "and without it, the job would be too cold and impersonal."

Men, it seems, go to barbershops for much more than a little off the back and sides.

"I get customers from every walk of life, and no, matter who they are, their faces hold the same weight when they talk to me," says Klaas Heidstra at Dan Stewart's Barber Shop.

What do they talk about while they're being shaved or shorn?

It depends somewhat on who the barber is since he steers the initial conversation and sets the tone for future appointments.

"I usually start out with the weather," says Bill Robinson of the Lido Men's Hair Stylist Shop in the Quinte Mall.

"Not a very exciting opening, but it lets me find out by the way the customer answers whether he's in the mood to talk."

The next most common conversation starter with men, as you might have guessed, is sports.

Barbers are compelled to follow the sports pages whether they're interested or not. They have to be well- informed about the latest scores and trades and salaries, ready to chat with every customer.

Keeping track of current events in all areas is part of a barber's job, and most make it a point to read two newspapers a day.

Shops are also well-stocked with magazines which stimulate conversation. George Delgrosso keeps "Playboy" and similar magazines on hand, and says that sex is a pretty popular topic.

"We talk about girls a lot."

Bill Robinson agrees but adds that the talk is seldom personal in nature.

Klaas Heidstra, however, says that sex is not discussed where he works.

"My customers are more likely to want to talk about their sons doing well on some hockey team."

Klaas has only one stipula- tion when he works; no swearing.

"I try to keep the talk on the sunny side. People need perking up and I think that I'm in a good position to do that."

Keeping customers happy, and maybe making them chuckle a little is part of the work, barbers say.

"I keep joke books around," says George, "and I try to remember to pass on the good ones I hear."

Of course, there are some customers who don't want to laugh or talk. If they want peace and quiet, the barbers are prepared to go along with them, in the belief that men come to barbershops to be treated like kings.

Hairdressers have much the same philosophy.

A woman is paying for more than just having her hair done, they say. No matter how beautifully styled her hair is, if she's ignored or insulted she won't come back.

Both Sal Longo of La Maison Sal's and Carmen Goerrers of Carmen's Beauty Salon referred to themselves as part-hair stylist and part- psychiatrist.

The conversations that women have with hair- dressers tend toward more personal matters than men's with barbers.

"Often, a woman is in- terested in getting a male point of view on some issue, so she'll ask me," Sal says.

Only the regular clientele confide in their hairdressers, but as time passes, light- hearted joking often leads to revealing personal anecdotes.

"Like my usual customers I talk about myself, what I've been doing lately, how my cats are, things like that," Susan Sheldrick says. "It's just ordinary conversation."

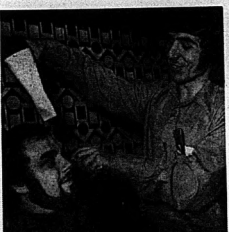
Janice Jackson, 18-year-old hairdresser at Vogue Beauty Salon, says that with customers her own age she simply asks "What's going on lately?"

With her many senior citizens clients, she finds that her most important function is to listen, and is never bored by their talk of families.

"Sometimes they ask my opinion, but I am always careful to avoid disagreeing with anyone. We learned in hairdressing school that the customer is always right."

All the barbers feel the same, and then two topics are the plague.

Religion and politics are taboo.



"We'll talk about subjects that are slightly political, like the energy crisis or the rise in prices, but that's it," says Klaas.

"I make it a point to agree with the customer's point of view," George says.

Where else can you go these days to find such a pleasant spot to let your hair down?

Barber Bill Robinson gets his hair blown by another barber, George Delgrosso of Hair. What do barbers talk about to each other? They just make cutting remarks.

Jane Hoekstra at Car- men's Beauty Salon enjoys her work, and is able to concentrate on pincurls and conversation at the same time. Whether they're in a good mood themselves or not, as part of their job hairdressers must always be cheery and ready to talk to customers.

Successful Living

Plagued with Guilt

By DORIS CLARK

Dear Doris: When I was 19 I lived for a while with my married sister. However, my brother-in-law wanted me to have sex relations with him and I ever fought me until I was exhausted. When I would not give in he said he would use a lover's perfume on me so I could not resist him!

Then suddenly no matter how I fought him I had to end up giving in. At the same time I hated him for what he was doing to me and my sister.

I have now been away from them for three years but I am so bitter about all that happened, even when I know that, I did not contribute of my own free will I could not face my sister and tell her everything and I didn't know if she would understand, if I did. Should I? Do you think this bitterness within me will affect my future love life?

Everything he did - including some rather perverted love-making — is now affecting my conscience.

Guilt Feelings.

Dear G.F.: No use telling your sister. She was probably aware of her husband's sexual weaknesses anyway, and might take on some of those unreasonable guilt feelings.

It was the man's lust and depravity that ruined this. You used to unburden either by talking to your family doctor or to a counselor at your family service agency. It will surprise you what a relief it will be to unload, no matter how embarrassing it is. You have a whole happy love life ahead of you.

Dear Doris: My husband died recently and I have received many lovely sympathy cards. I have acknowledged them but my sister says I was wrong.

I thought it kind of friends and others to remember us at such a time. I would appreciate it more than you know to find out what is correct.

Just Widowed.

Dear Widowed: Etiquette does not require any response to any type of printed greeting card or sympathy card. But if a friend goes to the trouble of writing a letter or sending flowers or other gifts in sympathy, a written response is indicated.

This does not mean there is anything wrong with acknowledging even printed messages, if you want to. But friends will understand it if you are overwhelmed with condolences and cannot write a personal note to every acquaintance.

Dear Doris: Do you have in your collection of poems the following: "Better Ask Mama"?

The story in the poem is that when the daughter was asked if she would marry her young man, she told him he better ask Mama. He did; result was the mother being a widow accepted him for herself.

Turnabout.

Dear Turnabout: What a well-known thing! No, I don't have it in my collection, but if you want it some reader may come through with it. Hope it is more amusing than confusing!

(Doris invites comments on correspondence. In care of this newspaper. If you read about a problem similar to the one you have solved, let's hear about it.)

Trish Clark, 24, of Toronto, says working as a croupier in a fashionable London gaming house was fascinating and the pay was fine. But she found that many of the gamblers who started to loose would become ill-mannered and sometimes attempt to cheat. (CP Photo)

Croupier's Advice: Avoid Losers

TORONTO (CP) — When the chips start falling, beware of the losers, says a 24-year-old Toronto woman, home again after two years in London's casinos.

But the gambler, especially one who loses, can make many of the first patrons would still be there at the 4 a.m. closing, she said.

Line-ups prior to 2 p.m. openings were a fact of life and "All too often you find the losers begging at the cashier's window to try to pawn a watch or a piece of jewelry so that they can go back to the tables and play on."

She progressed as a croupier to Mayfair's exclusive White Elephant Club on Carson Street where the rich gamble for stakes that often assume an air of unreality.

"The biggest tip I ever received was $750 from a business tycoon who said I had brought him luck."

"I also got to know a Saudi Arabian oil prince who thought nothing of betting $5,000 on the turn of the wheel. Win or lose, he was always polite, but then he could afford to be."

An attractive brunette, Trish Clark, eased her way into a job as a croupier and worked in some of the elite gaming houses where she found the work "can be fascinating and the pay is fine."

But the gambler, especially a croupier, the inspector was usually willing to back you up, but if the punter put up a big fuss, fight, screaming and yelling, the casino would nearly always give in."

Ann Landers

Married to a Spanker, Young Wife Is Worried

Dear Ann Landers: Will you please comment on the psychological aspects of a husband spanking his wife?

I am 20 years old, married to a man who is 30. We've been married only two months and already we are in conflict over this matter. Please understand that I love my husband. He was my first sex partner and I am 10 years his junior. He regards me as "his little girl." I find it refreshing and enjoyable, compared with the problems other married couples are having.

Last night we had an argument about my "disobeying" him. He turned me over his knee and gave me a hard spanking with a hairbrush.

I hysterically told him it was the most humiliating experience of my entire life. He suddenly became very sweet and explained calmly that because I had lost my father at a tender age, I needed a strong, domineering father figure—and he is it. He also said speaking is a personal, intimate and highly sexual form of correction, bound to improve our marriage and heighten my respect for him.

Am I headed for trouble?— S.B.

Dear S.B.: Headed for trouble? You've got trouble now. You are already married to the nut.

A man who believes spanking a wife heightens her respect for him has a few bolts. If you buy this crock of cranberries, little girl, you deserve what you get. And don't be surprised if that charming man breaks your jaw one day when he feels the need for a few extra jollies.

Dear Ann Landers: Your neutral stance on astrology does your readers a grave disservice. What Ann Landers says is considered The Word by a tremendous audience. I am writing this letter because I believe members of the scientific establishment should make their thinking known. The charlatans swamp the public with whatever they wish to promote while scientists somehow feel it is beneath their dignity to acknowledge the existence of any hocus pocus.

If you had seen lives destroyed by the belief in astrology, as I have, and if you knew as much about the subject as I do, you would share the belief of the scientific community that astrology is at best a religion, and not by any stretch of the imagination a science.—H.K.E.V.W., Chairman, department of astronomy, University of Southern Florida at Tampa

Dear Chairman: Since your letter arrived I have done some investigating. I am no longer neutral. Thanks for moving me over with the scientific community.

Returnable Paper Bags

HAMILTON (CP) — There may be money in your crumpled collection of brown grocery bags—two cents each.

A spokesman for IGA supermarkets said in an interview that the company may soon start giving refunds of two cents a bag in customers who bring in their own bags to be refilled with groceries.

Sam Crystal, vice-president of the Oshawa Group Ltd. of Toronto, which supplies the IGA chain, said IGA stores may follow the example of the Red Owl chain in Wisconsin and Minnesota where the system is used "to conserve natural resources."

Some packaging costs have risen about 70 per cent, he said, and shortages of plastic may contribute to further increases in grocery prices.

Postal Parting

LONDON (CP) — Mary Garrity, married for 23 years, made legal history in Britain by becoming the first person to obtain a divorce by mail without having to appear in court. Postal divorce applies only where neither party is contesting the case, where the couple has been married at least three years and parted for two, and where they have no children younger than 16.

Out of the Dark Ages

A young girl looks in wonder at a replica of Thomas Edison's first electric light bulb, developed in 1879, and an old-fashioned two-wick candle, used for centuries to provide light. Edison's first bulb produced only one-tenth the amount of light given off by the modern 60-watt bulb. With the week of Feb. 10 to Feb. 16 designated as Canadian Electrical Week, it's hard to realize man has been out of the "dark" age only a relatively short time. (CP Photo)

Dance Group Earns High Praise

Ottawa, —A truck and bus company with a difference. The Contemporary Dancers of Winnipeg return for their second engagement in the National Arts Centre Theatre as the flamboyant blue bus rolls into Ottawa on another coast-to-coast tour.

Two performances will be given at NAC, 20,000 miles giving the 10-member troupe its tour that stretched from the Yukon to Saint John and from Churchill to Kenora, Ont., nesace. With the national tours of the past two seasons. The Contemporary Dancers have brought modern dance to more Canadian centres than any other dance company in the country.

Created in 1964 by Rachel Browne, The Contemporary Dancers turned professional in 1970, and are still under Miss Browne's artistic direction. With a background as a classical ballet soloist, she was looking for a more flexible medium of dance expression.

Her experiment with dance theatre started with the University of Manitoba, but soon caught the attention of audiences throughout Manitoba and The Contemporary Dancers started on road tours to prairie communities.

The energy and creativity of the company is a reflection of Miss Browne's personal stamina and dedication. Her early ballet training in New York was supported by a night time secretarial job and diet of peanut butter sandwiches. The company's history has the same pioneer quality. From fragile beginnings, The Contemporary Dancers now have a repertoire of over 40 works, and the company has been called the "most aggressive" and "most dynamic" in Canada. New York's Dance Magazine described them as "well-nigh perfect".

Choral Conductors At Toronto Workshop

TORONTO — Twenty-five conductors from seventeen communities in Ontario have been chosen to participate in a Choral Conductors' Workshop to be held here Feb. 9-12.

This choral conductors' workshop is being sponsored by the Toronto Mendelssohn Choir, Elmer Iseler, conductor, and is being held with co-operation and assistance of the Ontario Choral Federation. The Workshop will give participants the opportunity to observe educational, church, community and professional choirs in action, and to discuss with Mr. Iseler and other conductors ideas and problems common to all.

The workshop aims at being a stimulating experience for all involved, promoting the enrichment of choral culture throughout Ontario.

The conductors will arrive in Toronto on Feb. 9.

The workshop begins the next day, when they attend a morning service at churches of their choice. That night, they will attend an ecumenical choral service at Grace Church on-the-Hill, featuring three choirs: St. Michael's Cathedral Choir, Brian Rae, conductor; Grace Church on-the-Hill, Derek Holman, conductor; Metropolitan United Church Choir, Melville Cook, conductor.

Feb. 11 will be spent visiting choral music departments at several schools, and in the evening the conductors will attend an open rehearsal of "The Vision of Saint Augustine" and "Belshazzar's Feast"; two works to be presented by the Toronto Mendelssohn Choir at Massey Hall Feb. 27. The workshop will conclude with attendance at two rehearsals of the Festival Singers of Canada.

At various stages during the Workshop, Elmer Iseler will conduct and will discuss problems, ideas and interests common to the choral conductor.

Highland Games Set

Canada's first-ever National Highland Games will be held in Ottawa June 29.

The capital city's third annual Highland Games are expanding this year to encompass both the Canadian Inter-Provincial Championship, open to competitors from the ten provinces, and the Canadian Open Championship, another first which will be open to international competitors.

Working closely with the Ontario Department of Industry, Tourism, and Tourism, the Games committee has invited each province to sponsor competing teams in inter-provincial contests for piping, drumming dancing and athletic events. Invitations have also gone out to competitors from around the globe

Organizers expect 25,000 spectators at the day-long events to be held in Lansdowne Park, home of the Grey Cup Champion Ottawa Rough Riders.

UCS Administrator Hired - Maybe

The search for a paid professional administrator for United Community Services ended Wednesday with the announcement that the organization's board has selected a candidate to fill the post.

Personnel committee chairman, Martin Hamelink, made the announcement this week after a board caucus meeting called to interview two prospective candidates.

Mr. Hamelink would not release the name of the individual tentatively hired. Nor would he say whether that person is a local resident or from outside Belleville. Suggested salary was not revealed.

"The results of this meeting are being withheld pending a meeting with city council sometime next week," he said.

The UCS executive will meet with city officials to discuss a possible grant for 1974. In 1973, UCS received $13,000, part of the salary for former executive director Isidore Cooperman.

Mr. Hamelink said he would not release the name of the successful candidate until the UCS-city hall meeting.

Should something unexpected occur during the meeting and monies were not forthcoming, the individual tentatively hired would be placed in an embarrassing position with present employers, Mr. Hamelink explained.

During the course of the personnel committee's seven-month search for an administrator, 36 applications were received. However, only 11 applicants were interviewed by the committee.

Authority Options Land For Trailer Park Site

By ROY PEACOCK
Staff Reporter

The Moira River Conservation Authority moved Thursday to preserve for all-time recreational use a 200-acre tract of open land on the western outskirts of Belleville.

At the board meeting of the authority, members voted to take up a purchase option on the Ernest Potter farm property on the east side of the Holloway-Loyalist Road at a purchase price of more than $200,000.

The Potter farm, site of one of the Quinte area's first overnight tourist cabin facilities along Highway 2, stretches from the Bay of Quinte north to the second concession of Sidney township and the CN double tracks.

Approval from the Conservation Branch of the Ministry of Natural Resources and the Ontario Municipal Board will be necessary to make the purchase eligible for a 70 per cent provincial grant.

The aim of the authority is to develop the Potter property as a tourist trailer facility and as a greenbelt area.

The city of Belleville, along with the townships of Thurlow and Tyendinaga, would pay the major share of the local cost of purchase.

Over a three-year period, Belleville would pay $170,000, and the two townships $20,000 each. Another $20,000 would be paid by the river authority as a whole.

Taxes

Councils of the three chief benefiting municipalities will have been given approval in principle to the purchase.

Authority chairman Guy Hughes said that a start on development of the property could be as much as three years in the future.

Also the option was timed to save the property from purchase by developers who are reported to have shown keen interest.

Under the option agreement Mr. and Mrs. Potter would retain use rights to their residence and six acres of property as long as they wish.

Belleville Mayor Robin Jeffrey today expressed her appreciation for the cooperation of the three chief benefiting municipalities in deciding to purchase the Potter property.

"They have recognized the need for a conservation area in this growing urban area," she said.

"It is a beautiful area," she continued, "it will be really wonderful as it is developed in the years ahead. The three municipalities of Belleville, Sidney and Thurlow have shown a great deal of vision."

Mayor Jeffrey was also delighted that the province would be placing a great deal of money into the Quinte area if the purchase received approval.

City interest in the Potter property developed more than a year ago as the city council and public works committee sought a suitable site for a trailer park and serious negotiation with the Potters commenced last fall.

Development of a trailer peak was the real short-range purpose of the purchase offer, and Mayor Jeffrey expected this would be the first major development.

Such a park would help to bring tourists into the area, she said.

While city council has not made any firm decision on the matter, Mayor Jeffrey pointed out the city's $170,000 share of the purchase cost would be debentured over the three-year period.

Volleyball Marathon Planned

Students of East Northumberland Secondary School in Brighton are asking for sponsors for a volleyball marathon they are holding for charity Feb. 15 to 17.

The money pledged for the tournament will be donated to the muscular dystrophy campaign and to sports activities at the school.

Each of the 26 players in the marathon will play for a total of 28 hours in alternate 24-hour shifts. Sponsorship is asked to pledge only a few cents an hour.

Those wishing to pledge may call between 5 and 7 p.m. Charles Martin, Brighton, 475-2897; David Brummell, Trenton, 392-6136; Lorne Phee, Wooler, 397-3205 or Bonnie Fitchett, Castleton, 344-7346. Pledges may be mailed to the school in Brighton.

Stretching It a Little

You've got to stretch a little if you want to hang Phillip Rimmer's hooked wallhanging entitled Dabbles. Linda Mustard and June Little hang the first Quinte Arts Council sponsored 21-piece show in city hall Thursday morning. Work by Quinte artists in the municipal offices and the Belleville General Hospital are changed by the county's visual art committee about every three to four months. In city hall, work is hanging in the entrance and upper lobbies and council chambers.

Blood Donors Recognized

Certificates were awarded recently to 50 long-term blood donors. Heding the list is R.E. Fox of Stirling who has donated 100 times.

Those who have donated 50 times are P.R. Barnart of Deseronto, R.J. Blaind of Valleyview Manor, G. J. Jewell of Donald Street and Mrs. B. West of Herchimer Avenue.

Those donating 35 times are: C.A. Ackerman, Mrs. E. Campbell, Mrs. R.A. Follwell, C.F. Huffman, Peter Kostiuk, W.J. Manion, R.H. Olcron, Mrs. M. L. Roberts, D. R. Scott, Mrs. Sema K. C. D. Skinkle, and H. A. Thomson, all of Belleville.

Budget Balanced

The 99 members of the congregation of Emmanuel Baptist Church on Bell Rock Drive were presented with a balanced budget for 1973 at their annual meeting Jan. 30. They will try to liquidate the church mortgage in 1974.

Douglas Rowe, chairman of the deacon's board, was chairman of the meeting and George Bridget is again chairman of the board of management. Keith Allison thanked Rev. Charles Savage and Mrs. Savage for their leadership.

The senior choir is under the direction of Mrs. Paul Wigmore with Kirk Kelly as organist. Miss Thelma Priest conducts the junior choir. Mrs. Douglas Forbes will conduct a daily vacation Bible school during the March school break.

Juvenile vandalism at the church has decreased during the year, but still persists at a nuisance level.

Municipalities Getting Voice in Legislation

By ROBERT WHITELAW
Toronto News Bureau
The Intelligencer

TORONTO — Ontario municipalities will begin stepping at the heels of the provincial government, demanding a voice in forming new legislation.

Queen's Park has reacted to the nips by forming a new co-ordinate committee of cabinet ministers on a monthly basis.

Informally, the provincial-municipal liaison committee has met since 1969 but during the past four years few municipal officials knew of its existence.

Richard Illingworth, director of the secretariat says municipal representatives are doing their homework and challenging the government on new legislation through face-to-face contact. As a result, he says, cabinet ministers are placed on their guard when attending committee meetings.

A cross-section of Ontario municipal leaders meets each month with one or two cabinet ministers and the provincial co-chairman, Treasurer and Economics minister Darcy McKeough, and Municipal Affairs Minister John White. The meetings are a combination of briefings on new legislation and government plans and a reaction to recommendations made by the province at the previous meeting.

At issue at present is establishment of five regional advisory councils in Ontario to act as mini-parliaments to respond to new legislation on a regional basis. The province wants councils in northwestern, northeastern, eastern central and southern Ontario.

Members would be chosen from elected municipal officials.

Municipalities reacted by agreeing to the idea, provided all ministries at Queen's Park work within the boundary lines of the five economic regions. Mr. White hopes to have the first advisory council operating in Northwestern Ontario as in six to eight weeks.

Municipal representatives include mayors, regional chairmen, aldermen, reeves and clerks. Representation comes from Metropolitan Toronto Chairman Paul Godfrey, representing the million people to Reeve John Cockrum of Almonte, population 2,000.

The committee functioned informally for the first four years without a budget (members paid their own way), and behind closed doors. Only since last summer has the secretariat been set up, a $42,500 budget set for research, and meetings opened to the press.

Mr. Illingworth came to the new secretariat with a blend of government and municipal experience which made him readily acceptable. He was former mayor of Aurora, regb of Toronto and York regional councillor. Prior to accepting the post as director he worked as executive assistant to Treasurer John White.

He describes his work as acting as a filter and clearing for information between the municipalities and ministries. For the large part, few people, even mayors, knew of the work of the municipal-provincial committee, he said. Members are appointed by the parent groups including Metropolitan Toronto, Association of Ontario Municipalities, Association of Counties and Reeves and Association of Rural Municipalities.

By Illingworth said the Toronto bureau if the municipal secretariat will be a key in writing new legislation then they can't come back and complain to the government if something goes wrong.

The five regional meeting members will discuss a preliminary report on conservation, legislation on Sunday as a day of rest, environmental control, housing, and the Ontario building code. Last month's meeting met in Niagara Falls and in April will meet in Sudbury with federal officials to discuss railway relocations throughout the province.

From one viewpoint the committee gives municipal leaders easier access to Queen's Park through their associations, says Mr. Illingworth. Another point is the ability to react to new legislation.

Fluoridated Water Supply Cheapest Dental Safeguard

Fluoridation of water supplies is the most economical mass dental health measure available today, says the Bay of Quinte Dental Society.

Belleville has fluoridated its water supply since 1965 as a public health measure and evidence has proved that children who drink fluoridated water have a much lower rate of tooth decay than those whose water is not fluoridated.

It has been known for years that children born and raised in areas with one part per million of fluoride occurring naturally in their water supply had fewer cavities. Since 1817, the city of Stratford, Ont., has been using naturally fluoridated water containing 1.8 parts of fluoride to every million parts of water.

Many municipalities now practise community fluoridation of the water supply, but some'e resistance still lingers.

Other methods of introducing fluoride into diets are beneficial, but not as effective as community water fluoridation.

A home fluoridator, something like a home water softener, can be installed at relatively high cost, but it requires repeated servicing.

Daily doses of fluoride in tablet or liquid form can be taken, but are not as effective as fluoridated water.

Fluoride toothpastes are not a substitute for fluoride intake, but act to make the teeth somewhat more resistant to decay. The Canadian Dental Association has accepted two brands of tooth paste as effective against tooth decay. They are Crest, manufactured by Procter and Gamble and Colgate with MFP manufactured by Colgate-Palmolive.

A concentrated solution of fluoride added to all surfaces of the teeth by a dentist is another anti-decay measure. It must be repeated once a year.

The Canadian Dental Association says that fluoride is a natural component of water in many areas of the world, and a beneficial substance. It is not a medication, but a nutritional element. It is harmless, having no adverse effects on the aged or those with chronic ailments. Community fluoridation costs taxpayers far less in the long run because it reduces their dental bills.

And far greater concentrations than those in community harnessed during their lifetimes by people living in places like Stratford where fluoride occurs naturally in the water.

Glass Recycling May Be Next City Project

The woman city councillor, responsible for animating Belleville's still-fledgling but unflagging waste paper collections, as yet can only define her latest community consideration in the vaguest terms.

At the moment, she says, she's only begun to explore the possibilities. To date, this has amounted to contacting a Toronto company that recycles waste glass here.

One of the obvious basic problems in need of solution is transportation costs: How to have glass, collected around the city fed to the Toronto terminal point.

"You have to have enough quantity to for the costs. If you can't start anything until you're sure of the market," she says.

One possibility is linking in with Kingston where glass recycling has been under discussion for some time. The same vehicle might be used to transport collections from both cities, says Ald. Smith.

Market means more than the amount available. It also means the supply made available — through the voluntary efforts of the citizenry at large, willing to sort out recyclable material from the rest of their household wastes.

A survey once showed there may be up to 80 tons of newsprint alone distributed throughout Belleville each week.

When paper recycling started in November, paper goods of all kinds collected totalled 32 tons. In December it dropped to 19 tons. Last month's total-tallied Tuesday by Ald. Smith is just under 19 tons.

"Weather, the holiday seasons, are among possible reasons for the lower totals in the last two months, she says. There also was the fact many people, aware the project was getting under way, began

Paper Pickup Problem Minor

There's still the odd irritant in the cogs of Belleville's paper recycling project.

Ald. Smith says that can't be solved with a little patience, says Alderman Jean Smith, the project co-organizer.

Specifically, the problem is confined to one sector, one of four where waste paper is picked up the first four Tuesdays of each month.

But, in the area north of the Bay of Quinte railway tracks, paper pickups coincide with garbage collection times. Inevitably, the garbage truck gets ahead of the paper truck.

The result, says Ald. Smith, is that householders have "got really mad" when they see their sorted paper dumped in with the rest of their garbage.

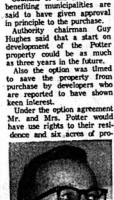
It's an understandable mistake, she says, and is being rectified.

boarding paper for collection, boosting the November total.

She refuses to read any discouraging signs into the drop-offs. The return is not "satisfactory."

"It's still in its infant stage yet," she says.

Example and education should help see a gradual upswing — one neighbor diligently bundling waste paper for collection could start a chain reaction, says Ald. Smith.



It's also a case of custom — people have to grow accustomed to the sorting process as part of the housekeeping routine — with other papers or glass.

But right now, her main preoccupation remains with paper — and all she believes it can't last, not once its recycling, but to the environment.

The paper drive's initiation leads the city sends its garbage dump the sooner dumping space runs out.

"If we can just co-operate it would extend the life — the use of our garbage dump for another month — can be extended for years — when you think of all that paper, we must be finding its way into the garbage," says the alderman who also is chairman of the Area Waste Disposal Committee for Hastings County.

These days, there's also a demand for cardboard. But whatever texture it comes in "I just hope people won't stop sorting their paper," says Ald. Smith.

ROBERT PATRICK

Trenton Mayor QPB Chairman

At the 1974 inaugural meeting of the Quinte Planning and Development Authority, Trenton mayor Robert Patrick was appointed chairman. Mayor Patrick has been acting chairman during the sudden illness of Belleville Alderman Arnold Orr forced him out of public life.

Thurlow township councillor George Beer will assume duties of vice-chairman for 1974. During a brief address to the board, Mr. Patrick foretold of definite strides being made toward the completion of official plans for Sidney and Thurlow townships and the village of Frankford.

Appointments were made to three special committees during the meeting.

Members of the Personnel Committee are: Thurlow Councillor George Beer and Sidney Reeve Gordon Wilman. Frankford appointee Leonard Reid, Belleville Alderman Jack Ireland and Trenton Councillor Robert Wannamaker.

Remaining as special committee members overseeing official plans for Sidney, Thurlow and Frankford are: Councillor George Beer, Frankford Reeve William Rose and Sidney township Councillor Reg McCurdy.

Authority Veteran Honored

James H. Sprackett, (left) Tudor and Cashel townships' representative on the Moira River Conservation Authority since its inception in 1947, receives plaque in recognition of his 27 years service. With Mr. Sprackett are Clarke T. Rollins, MPP for Hastings and authority chairman Guy Hughes.

Church Notes

Such a quick would help to bring tourists into the area, she said.

While city council has not made any firm decision on the matter, Mayor Jeffrey pointed out the city's $170,000 share of the purchase cost would be debentured over the three-year period.

$12,000 Donated To Mission Work

Tabernacle United Church donated $12,000 for mission work from its 1973 receipts of $51,602, the congregation was told at its annual meeting.

A $46,500 bequest from the estate of Gardner Duff and $3,000 from the estate of Isa Moore made it possible to pay all indebtedness on the church building. The balance has been placed in a memorial fund for future use.

The minister, Rev. J. Leslie Dean, conducted a memorial service for the 24 members of the congregation who died during the year. There were 17 weddings, eight baptisms and 27 new members were received into the church.

Elected to the board of session were Lloyd Castle, Seymour Hamilton, Mrs. Shirley Matthies, Randolph Nelson, Mrs. Marion Salisbury and Mrs. Marguerite Wessels. Elected to the committee of stewards were George Botting, Mrs. Valerie Coons and Reginald McKee.

Mrs. Ethel Horton has retired after 30 years as church secretary and Keith Day has retired from the position of church treasurer. Mrs. Valerie Coons has been appointed secretary-treasurer.

Gordon Priest, chairman of the stewardship service committee, outlined the accomplishments of the congregation and Mrs. Vera Greer, convener of communications for the Belleville Presbytery, presented an audio-visual message on stewardship.

Vince Gallipeau Bounces Back

Savage Remains Undefeated

TORONTO (CP) — Defending champion Paul Savage of Toronto remains undefeated in the Ontario men's curling championship, but the 35-year-old salesman had to battle for the first time Thursday for a 10-6 victory over Mississauga's Don Otto.

Savage trailed 5-1 after first ends in the fourth-round match and appeared destined for his first setback. However, the Toronto rink scored two points on the ninth and first one on each of the next two ends to take a 7-6 edge into the final end.

Otto needed only to draw to the four-foot circle with his final rock to force an extra end but his shot was strong and went through the house, giving Savage the win.

In another fourth-round match, Vince Gallipeau of Trenton handed Ottawa's Earle Morris his first loss of the championship—a 7-4 decision.

Joe Gurowka of Mississauga needed an extra end to defeat Doug Palmer of St. Catharines 8-6, as did Glen Corner of Brampton in disposing of Port Hope's Jim Currie 8-7. It was Corner's first victory in the four-rink competition.

Mac White of Burlington had little difficulty with Ottawa's Ian Hi's Sarnia rink, scoring four on the ninth en route to an 11-5 win.

"I just got the breaks . . . they all helped," said Savage.

"I had him for some time and just let him back up. Anybody who would have moved into a three-way tie for the lead had to gotten past Savage.

"I threw only positively in the first few ends and felt I had the game under control."

Gallipeau's win, his second of the day, began on the fifth end when the Canadian Forces rink took three.

"The first end was the turning point," Gallipeau said. Earle missed a shot and I jumped him for three."

Gallipeau had lost his first two matches Wednesday, and said the reversal in form was attributable to "getting over the flu."

Third-round play was highlighted by Morris' 8-5 victory over White. With the Ottawa Navy rink sitting shot on the final end, White needed only to draw to the four-foot circle with his last rock. The shot was light and Morris made the winning point.

Other third-round action saw Otto defeat Palmer 7-5, Lovsin top Corner 7-6, Savage get past Gurowka 10-6 and Gallipeau edge Currie 11-8.

With Savage holding down top spot and Morris in second, Otto, Lovsin, White, Gurowka and Gallipeau now are all tied for third with identical 3-2 records. Palmer, Currie and Corner each has one victory.

Today's fifth round had Corner against Savage, Morris meeting Currie, Gurowka facing White, Palmer playing Lovsin and Gallipeau tangling with Otto.

The sixth round had Palmer meeting Savage, Morris against Otto, Corner facing White, Currie playing Lovsin and Gurowka battling Gallipeau.

Knights' Star Supplies Spark

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Andre Lacroix could be the incentive New Jersey Knights need to make the World Hockey Association playoffs.

The centre collected five assists on Thursday night as the Knights defeated Los Angeles Sharks 7-4 in the only league game.

The win gave the Knights 48 points in the East Division, five behind fourth-place Cleveland Crusaders and the final playoff position. Los Angeles remained tied for fifth in the West with 39 points, the same as Vancouver Blazers.

Lacroix, 28, Que., who won the WHA's first scoring title last season with 124 points—50 goals and 74 assists—while playing for Philadelphia Blazers, has been on a hot streak in his last nine games.

The native of Lauzon, Que., has picked up four goals and 11 assists during that period while the Knights have won five and lost four, a major accomplishment for the club.

Lacroix, who assisted on three goals by Brian Kilrea in the game at Los Angeles, now has 50 fourth-place wins in the scoring department with 65 points, eight behind leader Wayne Carleton of Toronto Toros.

The Knights, in defeating the Sharks for the first time this year in three encounters and games, fell behind 2-0 after less than four minutes of the first period.

But they rallied for three goals and scored the game winner after the first 20 minutes. They outscored the Sharks 2-1 in the second period and 2-0 in the final for their 32nd win in 84 games.

A power-play goal by Morenz, his second of the night and 12th of the season, gave the Knights a 3-4 lead late in the third period and the Sharks never recovered.

Ron Walters, Allen White, Gary Veneruzzo and Ron Garwasiuk replied for the Sharks, who lost their fifth straight game.

Action resumes tonight with Quebec at Vancouver, Houston at Edmonton, Minnesota in Winnipeg, and New England at Cleveland.

WINGS CHANGE GOALIES

DETROIT (AP) — Detroit Red Wings replaced goaltender Doug Grant from Virginia Wings Thursday and sent first-year goalie Bill McKenzie down to the American Hockey League team also. The Wings also announced that defenseman Thommie Bergman would be out two weeks after spraining his left knee during Wednesday's game against Toronto.

MARAVICH RETURNS

ATLANTA (AP) — Atlanta Hawks' coach Cotton Fitzsimmons Thursday reinstated Pete Maravich, the second-leading scorer in the National Basketball Association, after a five-day suspension. Maravich was suspended Tuesday for "disciplinary reasons." Fitzsimmons also said Maravich was fined.

McDONOUGH 'STABLE'

ATLANTA (AP) — Al McDonough, Atlanta Flames' top scorer who was knocked unconscious and suffered a concussion in Chicago Wednesday night, was reported in "stable and alert" condition in a Chicago hospital Thursday. Doctors took further X-rays for a possible fractured skull Thursday, but they proved negative.

WTT NETS DRYSDALE

MIAMI (AP) — Cliff Drysdale signed a multi-year contract Thursday to play with Miami's franchise in the World Team Tennis league. The 32-year-old South African was drafted by Phoenix. Drysdale but was traded to Miami for Owen Davidson, Pancho Gonzalez and Olga Morozova of Russia after expressing interest in playing in Florida.

A New Coach But Old Story

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Coach Marc Boileau learned a quick lesson Thursday night—National Hockey League habits aren't easy to change.

For example, his Pittsburgh Penguins skate to their script Saying 5-4 to Philadelphia Flyers for their sixth consecutive defeat.

The Flyers, leading the West Division by eight points over Chicago Black Hawks, have five wins, two ties and one loss in their last eight games.

Boileau, 41 ,of Pointe Claire, Que., was named coach of the Penguins after Ken Schinkel was fired Wednesday. Boileau was coaching Port Wayne Comets of the International Hockey League before he moved up.

Meanwhile, Boston Bruins increased their East Division lead to eight points over Montreal Canadiens, with a 5-3 victory over St. Louis Blues in the other game Thursday.

The Bruins, who have a 35-9-6 record, added more scoring power by acquiring Bobby Schmautz from Vancouver Canucks in exchange for centre Chris Oddleifson and right winger Fred O'Donnell.

Schmautz, 28, a right winger from Saskatoon, had 26 goals in 49 games with the Canucks this season. He had 38 last year. Oddleifson, 24, has 19 goals this year and 0 Donnell, 22, five.

"What it amounts to is . . . we are getting two fine young forwards who have been playing regularly with the Bruins in exchange for one player," said Vancouver coach Phil Maloney.

The Bruins also gave the Canucks the rights to Mike Walton, who left Boston last season to play for Minnesota Fighting Saints of the World Hockey Association.

Flyers 5 Penguins 4

In a rugged game at Philadelphia, Bill Flett and Pen-guins were tied 3-3 after the second period when Bob DeMarco of Pittsburgh broke the deadlock with his fourth goal of the season at the 17-second mark of the third.

Dornhoefer—and 13. mlooers. The Penguins picked up a major and a minor.

Bruins 5 Blues 3

The Blues stormed back with goals by Garry Unger and Brian Sutter before the Bruins went ahead to stay when Wayne Carleton, Carol Vadnais and Johnny Bucyk scored within less than three minutes in the second period.

Goalie Ron Brooks of the Bruins stopped 23 shots in picking up his 10th straight win.

Secret List?

CINCINNATI (AP) — A spokesman for the University in the World Hockey Association confirmed Thursday reports of a "secret protected list" made up of National Hockey League players currently under contract.

Bill DeWitt Jr., vice-president of Cincinnati Hockey Club Inc., was in Boston Thursday, apparently to sign a member of Boston Bruins.

A Quebec City newspaper said Cincinnati has rights to Boston's Derek Sanderson, Ted Hodge and Wayne Cashman. Two other Boston players, Tllommie Bergman of Detroit Red Wings and Rick Kehoe of Toronto Maple Leafs, were also on the list, the newspaper said.

DeWitt could not be reached for comment. A Cincinnati spokesman said his NHL players have signed with Cincinnati and another was expected to sign Thursday. Two others were given.

The agreement gives Cincinnati rights to the players if they play out their NHL contracts.

Cincinnati obtained a WHA franchise last summer but won't start playing until the 1975-76 season, when a 17,000-seat arena is expected to be completed.

The soon-to-be-named team has already claimed two top Canadian juniors—defenseman Dennis Sobchuk of Regina and Jacques Locas of Quebec. Sobchuk signed a three-year contract for $1 million, the Cincinnati source said.

MacGregor Scores No. 80

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Smooth skating Gary Mac-Gregor scored twice Thursday night, bringing his total to 80 for the season, as Cornwall Royals defeated Cincinnati Sagueneens 7-4 in one of two Quebec Major Junior Hockey League games.

In the other, Laval Nationals scored three times in the third period to defeat Shawinigan Dynamos 5-3.

MacGregor's goal total is second only to Pierre Larouche of Sorel Black Hawks, who has 81 for the season and leads the league in scoring with 182 points.

Allan Wagar, Bob Ferguson, Bob Chase and Bob Murray got the other goals for the Royals, who held a 52-43 edge in shots on goal.

Daniel Lecours with two, Jean-Paul Leblanc and Jean-Guy Dufour scored for the Sagueneens.

Yvon Voisuor's goal at 2:41 snapped a 2-2 tie and started Laval en route to their win over Shawinigan. Richard Dutton, Dave Logan, Rejean Perreault and Marcel Rouseel got the other Laval goals with Jean Thibodeau and Gerry Leclerc replying for the Dynamos.

Tonight, Chicoutimi visits Quebec, Sept-Iles travels to Montreal; Shawinigan plays host to Drummeville and Sorel is at Sherbrooke.

Penalty Shots One for Six

MONTREAL (CP) — There is a certain type of hockey fan that takes delight from the facts-and-figures the game supplies.

But some of the names of individuals who led in various statistical categories during the first half of the 1973-74 National Hockey League schedule could surprise the most ardent amateur statistician.

Some highlights of the statistical analysis made public by the league Thursday, may refresh the memory of even the most die-hard fan.

For example, Phil Hoene, a centre with Los Angeles Kings, had the distinction of scoring only one goal on a penalty shot in the first half of the season when he outgunned goaltender Gerry Meehan of Minnesota North Stars, Dec. 11. It was Hoene's first NHL goal.

While Hoene scored at Minnesota, several better-known players had failed penalty duels to goaltenders. There were four penalty shots awarded and goaltenders won six all of them.

Tony Esposito of Chicago Black Hawks outgessed Minnesota's Buster Harvey; Gilles Villemure of New York Rangers won against Toronto's Paul Henderson; Montreal Canadiens' Michel Plasse beat forward John Gould, then with Buffalo Sabres; Rogatien Vachon of Los Angeles Kings defended successfully against Joey Johnston of California Golden Seals and Canadiens Yvan Cournoyer unsuccessful against the Rangers Ed Giacomin.

In another department, centre Pete Mahovlich of the Canadiens, developed into the most accurate shooter among players with 10 or more goals through their team' first 39 games.

Mahovlich scored 18 times on 36 shots on goal, a percentage of 22.5.

As expected, Phil Esposito the first-half scoring leader, also led in total shots on goal with 213. He scored 46 goals for 18.7 per cent. He has led the league in shots taken since 1968-70 and reached an all-time high in 1970-71 when he took 550 shots enroute to his record 76 goals.

The most shots taken in a single game was 11 by defenceomen Brad Park of the Rangers and Boston's Bobby Orr. Park had 11 shots Nov. 11 against New York Islanders and scored once during the Rangers 7-2 victory. Orr had his 11-shot game without scoring a goal Jan. 13 during a 5-3 Boston win at Pittsburgh.

Darryl Sittler of the Leafs had the most shots by one player in a period—seven—in the second period Dec. 6 at Minnesota when Toronto won 4-1. But Sittler failed to score.

Biltmores Hammer Michigan

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Tim Holder scored six times as Guelph Biltmores avenged their earlier defeat at the hands of Southern Ontario Junior Hockey League champs Thursday night at Utica, N.Y.

Guelph hammered GI shots at Michigan netminders Bruce Jackson, who stood up for two periods before Dave Maas, in goal for the third.

Holder Blake faced 35 shots in the nets for Guelph which led 2-1 at the end of the first period and 10-4 after the second.

Jim Joy added four goals for the Biltmores, Mitch Giroux three, Dave Kennedy two and Rodney Hansen and Ron Hunter one each.

Michigan goals were scored by Ron Brunelle, Dave Brown and Brent Hughes.

In the other Rague game on Thursday, Detroit Junior Red Wings defeated Windsor Spitfires 7-5.

Red Wings 7 Spitfires 5

Windsor's Mickey Enright in the first period for punching linesman Rick Finkbeiner.

Bob Gladney gave Windsor's five-game winning streak.

Hawks' Luck All Bad On Peterborough Ice

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Centre Tom Gastle's two goals paced Peterborough Petes to a 7-3 victory over St. Catharines Black Hawks in an Ontario Hockey Association Major Junior A game Thursday night before 3,324 fans.

St. Catharines now has played five years without a win Peterborough ice in regular season play.

Although the first period was scoreless, the Petes had built up a 4-1 lead by the end of the second.

Jim Turkiewicz, Paul McIntosh, Bill Eve, Ed Parasiliti and Pete Scamurra scored the other Peterborough goals.

Kevin Kennery, Rick Hampton and Terry Casey replied for the Black Hawks.

Peter outshot St. Catharines 15 to 12 and received six of the 10 penalties.

In the only other league game Thursday, Sault Ste. Marie defeated Oshawa Generals 4-2.

Greyhounds 4 Generals 2

A 1 5 4 ult Ste. Marie, Greyhounds led 1-0 at the end of the first period and 3-1 at the end of the second.

Gary Farelli got two of the Greyhound goals with Jack Valiquette and Lorne Jarrett scoring the others.

Pat Ribble scored both goals for Oshawa.

Greyhounds outshot Oshawa 43-34 and drove seven of the 17 penalties, including three majors and one game misconduct. Generals collected three majors, one game misconduct and a 15-minute misconduct.

League action resumes Friday with Peterborough at Oshawa, Sault Ste. Marie at Hamilton, Oshawa at Sudbury, Kingston at Kitchener and St. Catharines at London.

Baseball and a Recording Star

Bobcats Aiming for Second

It is mathematically impossible for the Belleville Bobcats to finish first in the Metro Junior B standings.

On the other hand, it is mathematically impossible for the Belleville Bobcats to finish any lower than third.

At present, the Cats are stuck in third place with four games left to play in the regular schedule.

Tonight, Belleville takes on fourth place Bramalea Blues at 8 p.m. in the last home game of the season.

The Bobcats are in third position with 57 points, while the Blues are next with 49. Bramalea, however, only has three regular season games remaining and even if the Cats should happen to lose their remaining four, it would be impossible for the Blues to catch them.

The game tonight should be an interesting one.

In three previous meetings, the teams records read one win, one loss and one tie, with the Bobcats being outscored 14-12, in total.

Tomorrow night, Belleville travels to Toronto for an 8 p.m. encounter with the 10th place Young Nationals.

The Bobcats have recorded three consecutive victories over the Nats in three previous games.

Belleville has had no problem scoring goals against Toronto as in their three games they have outscored the Nationals 19-7.

February 15 the Bobcats are in Markham to play the Royals. Markham is in second place, three points ahead of the Cats.

The Cats are also unbeaten in three previous contests with Markham. Belleville has won two and tied one.

Markham, the top defensive team in the league with a 2.5 goals against average, has been outscored by the locals 10-3 through the regular season.

Belleville's final game of the season is February 17 at 2 p.m. in Wexford against the Warriors.

Wexford has the fifth best goals against average in the 12 team league, but it certainly hasn't been helped by the Bobcats.

In three games against the fifth place Warriors this season, the Cats have a perfect record, and have outscored Wexford 26-9.

In any event the Bobcats are almost assured three wins out of their last four games.

Tonight's contest against Bramalea should be the only one which could go either way.

Four Team Broomball League In Action On Two Fronts

Broomball is a relatively new game to the Quinte area but with the formation of a four-team league, the game is providing entertaining sport for the 60 players.

The teams in the league are Northern Electric, Belleville Rovers, Brooke Bond and Union Carbide. Games are played at the Dick Ellis Rink in Belleville and the AMDU Rink, CFB Trenton.

Northern leads the league with 18 points. Second place Rovers have 16 points; Brooke Bond, 8; and Union Carbide, four.

With only seven league games remaining before the playoffs, a battle for top spot is developing between the Northern and Rovers squads.

League play continues tonight at Dick Ellis Rink. Northern meets Union Carbide at 8 p.m. while Rovers and Brooke Bond hook up at 9 o'clock.

Quinte League Playoffs Even

The one-two teams in the Quinte Hockey League during the regular schedule, Stinson Construction and Belvedere Hotel both bounced back from opening game playoff losses to square things Thursday night at Memorial Arena.

Stinson, turned back 4-1 by Cornerstone when the semi-finals got under way a week ago, rebounded to make it 1-1 in games with a 6-3 win in Game 2.

Belvedere duplicated Stinson's effort, dumping Reid's Dairy 4-1 after the Dairymen had taken a 7-4 decision in the first game of the series.

Kevin Allen opened and closed the scoring for Stinson's last night. In between, the winners got counters from Dwight Rathwell, Grant Sage, Bob Baitley and Dave Horwood. Rathwell checked in with two assists as did Al Walker and Dave Jones.

The losers picked up six of the 11 minor penalities assessed and also drew a game misconduct.

Belvedere's goals came from Frank Pinder, Doug Hallam, Gary Reid and Gene Francis. John Baker was in on three of the scoring plays.

The losers came out on the long end of the penalty parade, drawing seven of the 10 minor penalties.
